PREFACE

Third Edition :

It is gratifying that a third edition of the book has been called for in a comparatively short time. The Council of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India has included this publication in the list of books recommended for study by the candidates preparing for the Chartered Accountants Examination. The book has been thoroughly revised by incorporating legislative changes up to 30th September 1950. Most of the illustrations have been revised with new rates while some new illustrations have also been added.

I am grateful for the valuable suggestions received from numerous readers and I welcome them again for future editions.

First Edition :

In view of the excellent works on the subject of Income-tax already in the market, some explanation of the special features claimed for the present work may not be out of place. It seeks to fulfil the double function of a Text Book suitable for the students preparing for the Professional Examinations and a useful work of reference to those whose duties include the advising of tax-payers on the many and varied problems which arise under our Income-tax Laws. The use of practical illustrations showing the working and effect of all the principles and the inclusion of subsidiary Provisions and Rules are the essential features of the book. With the particular needs of the students, forty examples have been included on the assumption that they have no previous knowledge of the subject whatsoever. Names, Addresses and particulars given in the Illustrations are all fictitious and used for illustrative purposes only.

In writing the book I have consulted many authoritative publications on the subject with special reference to the Income-tax Manual, The Law of Income-tax in India by V. S. Sundaram, the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 by A. N. Aiyar and the Indian Income-tax Act by A. C. Sampath Iyengar and I owe my indebtedness to the authors and publishers of them. I have also consulted my numerous friends to whom I offer my sincere thanks. Lastly, I thank my assistant Mr. P. K. Mitter, B.A. for going through the proofs.

Suggestions from readers with regard to additions and alterations in future editions of the book will be welcome and given careful consideration.

2nd, January, 1946.

CHAPTER I

THE INCOME TAX LAW AND ITS ADMINISTRATION

§1—The Evolution of Income-tax Law & Practice—Income-tax was introduced in India in 1860. But instead of an indigenous model adopted to local circumstances, Government unfortunately followed the law which was in force in England. Direct taxation in India thus started on a wrong basis from which it could not easily recover. Possibly with time and care a great improvement could have been effected had the law remained unaltered. But unluckily it was utilized as a convenient means of balancing budget inequalities and a great reserve in every financial or national emergency. In addition to the changes in rate and incidence, changes in name, form, classification and procedure were followed with one object or another and 23 Acts on the subject were passed between 1860 and 1886.

The Act of 1886 worked smoothly so long as the rate of tax was low. Slight inequalities in assessment were neither objected by the Government nor by the Tax-payer. The war necessitated increased taxation and Income-tax had to make up its share. The system of assessment was radically changed owing to the increase in rates coupled with steeper graduation in 1916 and again in 1918. Within a few years the new Act showed that it should also be substantially revised and the Government of India appointed Committees in each Province to examine and recommend necessary alterations. An All-India Committee was appointed in 1921 and the Act of 1922 which is in force now, was based on the recommendation of this Committee. This Act was made a mere act of machinery and procedure leaving the actual charge of tax to be made by the Annual Finance Acts. After passing several amendments to this Act the Government appointed an Expert Committee in 1935 to investigate the Law in all its aspects and to report upon both the incidence of tax and the efficiency of its administration. The Committee made an extensive tour throughout India, during which a detailed examination of the organisation and work of the Department were carried out as also the representations of the various Chambers of Commerce and other public bodies were considered.

The Law which was radically changed in 1939 on the recommendations of 1935 Committee, for the first time imposed taxation in respect of foreign income on accrual basis under certain circumstances in the hands of certain categories of tax-payers classified on the basis of their physical presence in India. The rates of income-tax were changed from "Step system" to "Slab system" by which successive slice of total income were charged at progressively higher rates, the first slice bearing no tax whatsoever. The rates imposed in 1939 were subsequently increased year after year for raising additional revenue to meet ever increasing defence expenditure for the World War II (1939-45). A distinction was, however, made in 1945 between incomes that are earned by personal exertion and incomes that are not so earned. A certain percentage of the earned income was excluded from the total income for calculating income-tax but not super-tax. The minimum exemption limit for income-tax was raised from Rs. 2,000 to

Rs. 2,500 in 1947, to Rs. 3,000 in 1948 and finally to Rs. 3,600 in 1950 giving much relief to a considerable number of tax-payers.

The Income-tax Law being a complicated subject, circumstances arise from time to time when the strict application of the Act is either impossible altogether, extremely difficult, or inconvenient or grossly unfair and inequitable. As a result a practice has arisen of dealing with the position in a way not strictly authorised by the Act but just and convenient in effect. Such practice has been acknowledged not only by the Revenue Authorities but also by the Legislature. The tax-payer is not bound to comply with these extra legal practices, where it is not to his advantage, and as a matter of fact they mostly operate in the assessee's favour for that very reason. Instances will be referred to in later chapters where practices have arisen, which are of wide importance.

§2—Scope of the Act (Sections 1 and 4)—The Act applies to an income which accrues or arises within the country (irrespective of the place of its receipt) as also to an income which is received within the country (irrespective of the place of accrual) the status, nationality or residence of the recipient being immaterial. The Act further applies to an income which accrues, arises or is received outside the country provided the recipient is "Resident and ordinarily Resident" of the country. The application, however, has primary reference to the liability to tax and as such the Act can be enforced only when the liability is determinable.

Prior to 15th August 1947 the Act applied territorially to the whole of British India including Berar. British India meant the provinces of Bengal, Bombay, Madras, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar, the Central Provinces and Berar, Assam, the North-West Frontier Province, Orissa and Sind and the Chief Commissioner's provinces of British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands.

During 15th August 1947 to 25th January 1950 the territorial jurisdiction comprised of the Provinces of India including Chief Commissioner's Provinces which were West Bengal, Bombay, Madras, the United Provinces, East Punjab, Bihar, the Central Provinces and Berar, Assam, Orissa, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands.

The territorial jurisdiction was extended on the 26th January 1950 by including the States of Bhopal, Bilaspur, Cooch-Behar, Himachal Pradesh and Kutch. On 1st April 1950 the following States were added—Hyderabad, Madhya Bharat, Mysore, Rajasthan, Saurashtra, Travancore, Cochin, Vindhya Pradesh, Manipur and Tripura. East Punjab States Union came in the picture on the 13th April 1950 from which date the Act applies territorially to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir and only personally to those persons who are resident within this State and are in the service of the Government of India or of a State other than Jammu and Kashmir.

§3—Administration (Section 5):

(a) Income-tax Officers—The Administration of the Law is vested primarily in the hands of the Income-tax Officers who are appointed to issue notice, examine evidence and assess income. The Income-tax Officers are assisted by Subordinate Officers styled Inspectors whose work consists of the examination of the accounts.

inspection for the purpose of discovering new assesses and of making enquiries regarding the new sources of income of the existing assesseees. In addition, the Income-tax Officers are also helped by clerks who are appointed to perform various clerical and other duties preliminary to or consequent upon their orders.

While the Income-tax Officers are normally appointed in relation to an area there are certain classes of assesseees whose assessments are made by an All-India Staff. The cases of the Officers of the Military and other Departments of the Government of India who are liable to be transferred from one Province to another and that of some Railway, Insurance of Banking Companies are dealt with by Special Officers for the whole of India.

(b) Inspecting Assistant Commissioners—Administratively the Income-tax Officers are under the control of Inspecting Assistant Commissioners who are in their turn responsible to the Commissioners for seeing that the work in the circles under their control are efficiently performed. They not only examine the technical accuracy of the assessments but also deal with the general organisation of the office, the control of the Office Staff, settlement of refund claims in reasonable time and the extent to which the convenience of the public is considered in arranging for interviews and calling for books of account, etc. Though their functions are mainly extra-statutory still a penalty cannot be imposed by the Income-tax Officers without their previous approval.

(c) Commissioner—The Head of the Income-tax Department of a Province or other Area entrusted to him is the Commissioner of Income-tax who is appointed by Central Government. He is vested with power under Section 33A to revise any order passed by any Income-tax official subordinate to him. In addition Special Commissioners are appointed without reference to any Area to secure proper and uniform administration of the Income-tax Act throughout India and to detect cases of suspected fraud.

(d) Central Board of Revenue—The Board is entrusted with the general administration of the Act by issuing Executive instructions regarding the interpretation of the provisions of the Act. It is also authorised to make rules under Section 59 for carrying out the purposes of the Act. The Board has the overriding power to issue directions and instructions to all Officers of the Department except the Appellate Assistant Commissioners in the exercise of their Appellate functions.

(e) Appellate Assistant Commissioners—The functions of Appellate Assistant Commissioners are mainly to hear appeals against assessments made by the Income-tax Officers. Administratively they are directly under the control of the Central Board of Revenue.

(f) Appellate Tribunal—The functions of the Appellate Tribunals are to hear appeals on questions of fact and law against the decision of the Appellate Assistant Commissioners. The Tribunal's decisions on the questions of fact are final and conclusive but its decisions on questions of law are subject to reference to a High Court. The Tribunal is now the only authority to state a case for the opinion of High Court. The appeals are ordinarily heard by a Bench consisting of a Judicial Member and an Accountant Member having experience of accountancy and business matters.

CHAPTER II

INCOME AND ITS LIABILITY TO TAX

§1—The meaning of income and Income-tax—The law does not define what is income though it sets out certain provisions as to the particular kind of receipts which should be excluded or not in the computation of income. Consequently we have to seek guidance from Judicial pronouncements as to the nature of income liable to be taxed. It was defined by Dawson Miller, C. J. in re: Raja Jyotiprosad Singh Deo as follows:—

“Without giving an exhaustive definition it may be described as the annual or periodical yield in money or reducible to money value, arising from the use of real or personal property or from labour or services rendered bearing in mind that in some cases, e.g., income derived from house property, the yield must be taken as bona fide annual value and not necessarily as the actual yield.”

According to the decision of the Privy Council in Commissioner of Income Tax, Bengal, Vs. Shaw Wallace & Co. “Income” connotes a periodical monetary return “coming in” with some sort of regularity or expected regularity from definite sources which need not be continuously productive but their object must be the production of a definite return as distinguished from a mere windfall.

Income-tax is, therefore, as its name implies, a tax on income, actual or notional, irrespective of the standard by which it is measured. The moment the amount of income is determined it attracts liability and the law is not concerned how it is ultimately disposed of. It is however a personal tax and is not a charge on the income upon which it is levied but is imposed upon a person in relation to his income.

Income which is received in India is liable to tax whether it accrues or arises inside or outside India, to a person resident or not, and whether the receipt is actual or constructive. Again income which accrues or arises within India is liable to tax whether the person is resident or not, even when the payment is effected outside India. It will be evident, therefore, that all persons irrespective of their nationality or residence are, equally liable in respect of all income that has been received in or has accrued or arisen inside India. Income which accrues, arises or is received outside India is termed foreign income and its liability to tax is dealt with in the next chapter.

§2—Income excluded from total income altogether [Section 4 (3)]—Income of certain categories are treated as “No income”; as such they are not taken into account in computing the total amount of income liable to income-tax. The main heads of exempted income are considered below:—

(a) Commutation of Pension, Consolidated Compensation for death or injuries, etc.—Any sum received on account of commutation of pension or in the nature of consolidated compensation for death or injuries or in payment of an Insurance Policy or as the accumulated balance standing at the credit of a subscriber to any Provident Fund is treated as a Capital receipt, as such it is not taxable. Payment out of Provident Funds or similar funds which are not recognised in terms of the Act are however taxable to the extent of the employers' contribution and interest thereon. Monies received under policies insuring against loss of profits are however not exempt.

(b) Casual and non-recurring income—Revenue receipts which are casual and non-recurring and do not arise from any venture or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture are exempt from taxation. Receipts may be isolated and yet may not be of a casual and non-recurring nature, as such these should be scrutinised before being taxed. Some illustrations are given below:—

(i) "A" purchases a house with a view to re-selling it at a profit. His profit from this transaction is liable to tax even although it is an isolated transaction. "B" purchases a house for his own use and later on sells it at a profit. His profit is not liable to tax.

(ii) "A" wins a prize in a lottery or a bet on the race course, his receipts therefrom are not taxable. "B" is a book-maker, as such his profit from betting is taxable.

(iii) "A" makes a practice of speculating in the purchase and sale of shares; his profit therefrom is liable to tax. "B" purchases a debenture at Rs. 95 redeemable at par after ten years. The premium received on redemption is not taxable. On the other hand the yield from Treasury Bill issued at a discount and redeemed at par after three or six months is liable to tax.

(iv) Lump sum legacies are exempt from tax but annuities granted under a Will are not exempted.

(v) A fee for refereeing at a football match would be taxable in the hands of a professional referee but not in the hands of an amateur.

(vi) Fees for giving evidence would be taxable in the hands of an expert but not in the hands of a casual spectator.

(vii) Fees for casual journalistic efforts are not taxable but fees for setting examination papers in his own subject paid to a Professor are taxable.

(c) Income of Religious & Charitable Institutions—Income from property held under Trust for religious or charitable purposes, and from business carried on by or for a charitable or religious institution including voluntary contributions received by it, is exempt from income-tax. The word "property" does not bear the restricted meaning that it bears in Section 9 of the Act but includes securities, business, or share in a business. In the case of a property in which there is no absolute dedication and in which the trust reserves a secular interest to beneficiaries, Sebait or heirs of the founder, etc., the secular interest is assessable to income-tax.

The maintenance of a Sebait may or may not come within the category of religious or charitable purpose. It depends on the circumstances of the case. If, for instance, a dedication is absolute and a small portion of the income is given to the Sebait for his remuneration for carrying out the trusts of the endowment, it would not be secular. If, on the other hand, a fixed sum is given to religious or charitable purposes and the residue of the income is given to the Sebait for his maintenance the residue would be held to be secular. The test is whether a suit for partition lies for division of the residue. In any case, any portion of the income dedicated under the Trust which may be misappropriated would also be assessable.

To secure exemption, the income of religious or charitable institutions or the income derived from property held for religious or charitable purposes need not be actually spent for those purposes in the year of receipt. Where the property is held in part only for religious or charitable purpose a proportionate share only of any expenses incurred on management is allowable.

Business income of a charitable or religious trust is exempt when the income is applied solely to the purposes of the institution and either the business is carried on in the course of the carrying out of the institution or the business is carried on mainly by the beneficiaries of the institution.

Income of a religious or charitable institution derived from voluntary contributions like donation, legacies and gifts is also exempted if it is applicable to religious or charitable purpose, which includes relief of the poor, education, medical relief and the advancement of any other object of general public utility. The expression "Charitable purpose" should ordinarily apply to public charities.

(d) Income of the Local Authorities—The income of the Local Authorities was wholly exempt from income-tax until 1939, when on the recommendation of the Expert Committee this exemption was withdrawn with regard to income from a trade or business carried on by the Authority, so far as that income does not arise from the supply of a commodity or service within its own jurisdiction. A Local Authority is defined as "A Municipal Committee, District Board, Body of Port Commissioners or other Authority legally entitled to or entrusted by the Government with the control or management of a Municipal or Local Fund". Income from sale of water to other Municipalities or to shipping is liable to tax although a fair share of general administration and possibly of loan charges is allowable in computing this income.

(e) Income from interest on securities held by Provident Funds—Interest on securities which are held by or are the property of any Provident Fund to which the Provident Funds Act, 1925, applies, i.e., Government and Railway Provident Funds and Provident Funds established for the benefit of its employees by any Local Authority, etc., are exempt from tax. Income received by Trustees on behalf of a recognised Provident Fund as defined in Section 58A(a) is also exempt. Since Provident Funds are authorised to invest in any Trustee Security, the words "Interest on Securities" cannot bear the same restricted meaning as in Section 8 of the Act, but include all securities mentioned in Section 20 of the Indian Trust Act.

(f) Agricultural income—Any rent or revenue derived from land used for agricultural purposes is exempt from tax only when the land is assessed to Land Revenue by an Authority in India or is subject to a local rate assessed and collected by an Authority in India. But where the Land Revenue or local rate is paid to an Authority outside India the exemption does not apply.

Income from fisheries, markets, moorings, ferries, stone quarries, coal, manganese, mica, etc., is not agricultural income. Income from the use of land for storing purchases of crops by merchants and from land let out for making bricks is not agricultural income. Nazar paid by tenants at the beginning of the Zemindary year known as Punnyaha Nazar—a voluntary payment on an auspicious day, and Nazar paid for the recognition of succession, inheritance, etc., not in connection with the land or tenure held by the tenant are not agricultural income. Interest on cash loans made to tenants at the beginning of the cultivating season repayable in kinds at harvest time is not agricultural income.

Income from sale of catechu, Kah-charai (dues paid for grazing wild grass), Narkul Jalkar (reeds growing on banks of rivers), forest timber, grass, phus (thatching straw) and bhang and fruits of mango, imli (tamarind) and kathal (jack fruit) trees which have grown on land naturally and spontaneously and without the intervention of human agency is not agricultural income even if such land is assessed to land revenue, and such income is not exempt from income-tax.

Weighing charges levied by a landlord on his tenants in addition to the rent under agreements entered into with the tenants and cess collected from tenure-holders and raiyats under the Bengal Cess Act, 1880, are agricultural income and exempt from tax. Income derived from, pasture is income from land for agricultural purposes and is therefore exempt. Profit derived from sale of tobacco leaves by a Biri Manufacturer is not agricultural income but profit derived from cultivation of tendu leaves is agricultural income and exempt. Income derived from “toddy” is agricultural income in the hands of the actual cultivator whether owner or lessee of the land on which the tree is grown. Profits derived by a cultivator from the sale of the produce raised by him are exempt even if he keeps a shop for the sale of such produce, provided no process has been performed in respect of the produce other than those ordinarily employed by cultivator to render the produce fit to be taken to market. Where income is derived partly from agriculture and partly from business the following rules shall be observed:—

“Rule 23. (1) In the case of income which is partially agricultural income as defined in Section 2 and partially income chargeable to income-tax under the head “Business” in determining that part which is chargeable to income-tax the market value of any agricultural produce which has been raised by the assessee or received by him as rent in kind and which has been utilised as raw material in such business or the sale receipts of which are included in the accounts of the business shall be deducted, and no further deduction shall be made in respect of any expenditure incurred by the assessee as a cultivator or receiver of rent in kind.

(2) For the purpose of sub-rule (1) “market value” shall be deemed to be:—

(a) Where agricultural produce is originally sold in the market in its raw state, or after application to it of any process ordinarily employed by a cultivator or receiver of rent in kind to render it fit to be taken to market, the value calculated according to the average price at which it has been so sold during the year previous to that in which the assessment is made.

(b) Where agricultural produce is not ordinarily sold in the market in its raw state, the aggregate of—

- (i) the expenses of cultivation,
- (ii) the land revenue or rent paid for the area in which it was grown; and
- (iii) such amount as the Income-tax Officer finds, having regard to all the circumstances in each case, to represent a reasonable rate of profit and the sale of the produce in question as agricultural produce.

“Rule 24. Income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller in British India shall be computed as if it were income derived from business, and 40 per cent. of such income shall be deemed to be income, profits and gains liable to tax:

Provided that in computing such income and allowance shall be made in respect of the cost of planting bushes in replacement of bushes that have died or become permanently useless in an area already planted, unless such area has previously been abandoned.”

(g) Special Allowances, Benefit and Perquisites for expenses of Office etc.—Any special allowance, benefit or perquisite specifically granted to meet expenses wholly and necessarily incurred in the performance of the duties of an office or employment of profit, is exempt from taxation. This covers motor car or entertainment allowances and travelling expenses of commercial travellers and representatives. (Also see Appendix A).

(h) Allowance received by a member of a Hindu Undivided Family. [Section 14 (1)]—Income received by a person under any customary or legal right, from the funds belonging to a Hindu Undivided Family as one of its members, is exempt from tax in his hands. The income is however assessable in the hands of the Family as a separate composite unit. Those members of a Hindu Undivided Family, who either on partition would be entitled to demand share or are entitled to maintenance under the Hindu Law, can only claim exemption from taxation. (Also see Chap. IV §2.)

(i) Income from houses constructed during 1-4-46 to 31-3-52.—Income from a house, the construction of which was begun and completed between 1st April 1946 and 31st March 1952, would be exempt for two years from the date of completion. The exemption applies to a complete unit of a building and not to any additions or replacements to an existing building unless the total expenditure is more than Rs. 10,000. The exemption relates to net annual value computed after allowing the deduction admissible under Section 9 which would have otherwise been chargeable.

§3—Income excluded from total income for Income-tax but included for Super-tax. (Section 15A).—For calculating income-tax “earned income allowance” is treated as “no income” and as such is excluded from the computation of total income. The concession does not however apply for calculating super-tax. For example, if the total income from business amounts to say Rs. 36,000 then income-tax should be payable on Rs. 32,000 (Rs. 36,000 less maximum allowance of Rs. 4,000) whereas super-tax should be payable on Rs. 36,000 at the rates ruling in the year of assessment. (Also see Chap. X §7.)

§4—Income excluded from total income for Super-tax but included for Income-tax. [Sections 55 & 14 (2)].—The amount of income which a partner of an unregistered firm or a member of an Association of persons other than a Hindu Undivided Family or a company, is entitled to receive, in respect of which super-tax has already been paid by the firm or the Association. (See Illustration 5.)

§5—Income included in total income but exempt from both Income-tax and Super-tax—The following classes of income shall be exempt from income-tax and super-tax but shall be included in the total income for determining the rate of tax applicable to other taxable income.

(a) Any income, profits or gains accruing or arising to an assessee within an Indian State unless such income, profits or gains are received in or are brought into India. (Also see Chap. III § 4.)

(b) The profits of any Co-operative Society or the dividends and other payments received by the members of any such Society out of such profits. The profit should not however include any income from securities, properties, shares and other sources of income referred to in Section 12 of the Act.

(c) Donations amounting to more than Rs. 250 made by an assessee after 1-4-48 to any Institution or Fund established in India for charitable purposes and approved by the Central Government. The maximum limit of the donation in the case of a Company is 5% and in other cases 10% of total income as reduced by non-taxable portion. The amount of relief of tax is, however, restricted to half of the amount of donation.

§6—Income included in total income but exempt from Income-tax and not from Super-tax—The following classes of income shall be exempt from income-tax (not super-tax) but shall be included in the computation of the total income of the assessee.

(a) Interest receivable on any Rupee Security issued or declared to be income-tax free by the Government.

(b) The amount of income which a partner of an unregistered firm or a member of an Association of persons other than a Hindu Undivided Family or a Company, is entitled to receive, in respect of which the tax has already been paid by the firm or the Association.

(c) Employers' and Employees' contributions to a recognised Provident Fund up to one-sixth of the Employee's Annual salary or Rs. 6,000, whichever is less. In addition interest at any rate up to 6 per cent. credited on the accumulated balance of an employee to the extent of one-third of his salary.

(d) Any sum paid by an assessee to effect an insurance on his life or on the life of his wife or in respect of a contract for a deferred annuity on his life or on the life of his wife, and contributions to the Widows, Orphans and Old Age Contributory Pension Fund, 1925, are exempt from income-tax. The total amount exempted under (c) excluding interest and (d) shall not exceed one-sixth of the total income of the assessee (before deduction of the allowance for earned income) or Rs. 6,000, whichever is less. In the case of a Hindu Undivided Family however the limit is raised to Rs. 12,000. (Also see Chap. V § 5.)

(e) Sums received by an assessee on account of salary, bonus, commission or other remuneration for services rendered or in lieu of interest on money advanced to a person for the purposes of his business, where such sums have been paid out of profits on which income-tax has been charged in the hands of the payer.

§7—Income included in total income but exempt from Super-tax and not from Income-tax—The income of any Investment Trust Company which is derived from dividends paid by other Companies which have paid super-tax in respect of their profits out of which such dividends are paid, is exempt from Super-tax. The income is however included in the computation of the total income of the Investment Trust Company, and income-tax is payable by it in respect thereof.

§8—Liability to Tax—The amount of tax payable by an assessee is determined in relation to his total income. Incomes mentioned in §2 do not increase the amount of tax payable as they being treated as "no income" are not included in the computation of the total income. But incomes discussed in §5, §6 and §7, being included in the total income, increase the average rate of tax applicable to other incomes. The average rate of income-tax of Rs. 10,000 (unearned) is 13.65 pias per rupee whereas the rate on Rs. 15,000 (unearned) is 21.1 pias per rupee at the rates applicable in the fiscal year 1950-51. Consequently if interest on tax-free securities amounting to Rs. 5,000 is included in the total income, then the amount of income-tax payable on other incomes, i.e., Rs. 10,000 at 21.1 pias per rupee will be Rs. 1,099 whereas the amount of tax on Rs. 10,000 at its own rate of 13.65 pias per rupee is Rs. 710-15 only.

Illustration 1—Dr. Akinchan Adhichary had the following sources of income during the year ended 31st March 1950—(1) One-fourth share of income from the properties belonging to the undivided family amounting to Rs. 6,000, (2) Income from medical profession Rs. 15,000, (3) Half share of profit of an unregistered firm (sleeping partner) amounting to Rs. 1,750, (4) Interest on Fixed Deposit with Central Co-operative Credit Society amounting to Rs. 250.

He paid Life Insurance premium of Rs. 2,000 (Capital sum assured being Rs. 35,000). Find out the amount of Income-tax payable by him.

ANSWER

Statement of income for the year ended 31st March 1950.

Professional income	Rs. 15,000
Share of income from unregistered firm	1,750
Interest on Fixed Deposit	250
Total income	Rs. 17,000

Income-tax payable on Rs. 14,000 (Rs. 17,000 less earned income allowance @ 20% of Rs. 15,000) at the rates ruling in the fiscal year 1950-51—

Rs. 1,500	Nil.	Nil.
3,500 @ 9 pias per Rupee		Rs. 164 1
5,000 @ 21 " " "		546 14
4,000 @ 36 " " "		750 0
		Rs. 1,460 15
Less: Rebate in respect of Life Insurance Premium.
of Rs. 2,000 @ 20.035 pias per Rupee		208 12
Net Income-tax payable		Rs. 1,252 3

Note.—(1) Average rate of income-tax

$$= \frac{\text{Rs. 1460-15}}{\text{Rs. 14000}} = 20.035 \text{ pies per Rupee.}$$

(2) Interest received on Fixed Deposit with the Co-operative Society is taxable, only profits are "tax-free".

(3) Share of profit of an unregistered firm is usually "tax-free" but as no income-tax has been paid in this case (total income of the firm being below Rs. 3,600) it is taxable in the hands of Dr. Adhicary. Earned Income Allowance in respect of the share of profit of the firm has not been allowed as Dr. Adhicary was not an active partner.

(4) Share of income of a Hindu Undivided Family is treated as "No income" as such it has been excluded from the computation of total income.

CHAPTER III

FOREIGN INCOME AND SCOPE OF ITS TAXATION

§1—Assessment of foreign income—Income which accrues, arises or is received outside India is termed foreign income. The imposition of tax in respect of foreign income has necessitated the creation of a distinction between permanent residents of India and persons whose presence in India is more or less of a temporary or casual nature. Consequently in respect of certain class of assessee, i.e., non-residents, the foreign income is included in the total world income for determining the rate of tax applicable to Indian income, whereas it is not taxable in the hands of another class of assessee, i.e., residents but not ordinarily residents, unless it is brought into India, lastly in respect of still another class of assessee, i.e., residents and ordinarily residents, it is taxable subject to an allowance of Rs. 4,500 if such income is not brought into India. Before the incidence of taxation between these three classes of assessee is further discussed let us examine the difference between their status.

§2—Resident but not ordinarily Resident. (Section 4A):

(a) Residence of individuals—An individual is resident in India in any year if he (i) stays in India for 182 days or more in that year; (ii) keeps a dwelling house for him for 182 days or more and stays for any time in that year; (iii) stays for a period of 365 days or more during four years preceding to that year and is present in India for any time in that year otherwise than on an occasional or casual visit, or (iv) arrives in India during the latter portion of the fiscal year but intends to stay for more than three years from the date of his arrival. An essential condition common to all the four definitions is that there must be physical presence in India even for a day in any year to constitute a person resident in that year. Consequently a person who remains outside India for the whole of the fiscal year (1st April to 31st March) cannot be a resident whatever connections he may have in India during that year.

Maintenance of a house does not necessarily mean that it should be owned by the assessee but it must be available for occupation by him at any time during the year. Maintaining a residence and setting up an establishment are different things from owning or contracting to buy an unfurnished house. The question of ownership is not at all necessary for the purpose of determining residence in as much as a tenant can also maintain a dwelling place for him. The word "resident" indicates a personal quality and is not descriptive of a person's property.

The test of determining whether a visit is casual or not is to find out if it was of an accidental or uncertain nature and if the intention of the person visiting the place was for a temporary stay with a view to reverting back to the place of his abode. It is easy to give instances of casual visits rather than to define in precise terms the essence and the nature of a casual visit. In order to determine whether a visit to India is of a casual or occasional nature, the assessee's conduct prior to the period of charge could be taken into consideration. His object and intention can be gathered from the circumstances in which he paid the visit as well as his declarations and past conduct.

For the purpose of determining the residence of a person the 'merged States' (excluding Jammu and Kashmir) should be taken to be part of India for any of the relevant years.

(b) Residence of Hindu Undivided Families, Firms and other Associations—A Hindu Undivided Family, Firm or other Association of persons is resident in India unless the control and management of its affairs is situated wholly without India. Families, Firms or Associations will be resident in India even if any part of the control or management is situated in India. Consequently when a partner of a firm carrying on business in Ceylon resided in India and managed a branch of the firm in India it was held that the control was not situated wholly outside India and the firm was therefore resident in India.

The control and management must be de facto and not de jure. A liberal meaning is to be given to the words "wholly situated" and it must be ascertained in every case where in fact the control and management of the business is situated apart from the temporary journeyings of the active partner or the residence of the dormant ones.

One Mr. "B" carried on business in South Africa. In 1912 he returned to India leaving his business in the hands of three managers. In 1937 he executed a Deed by which he admitted the three managers as partners having a share in profits and losses but retained to himself the full control of the business and even the right to dismiss any of the three partners. Mr. "B" however stated in an Affidavit that he had not at any time either controlled and managed or attempted to control or manage the affairs of the business in South Africa. Two of the partners also filed Affidavits stating that they had been carrying on the business of the firm without receiving any instructions from Mr. "B" who only kept himself in touch just to caution the partners while they informed him about the general condition of trade prevailing in South Africa. It was held, under the circumstances, that the firm was not resident in India.

(c) Residence of Companies—A Company is resident in India in any year (i) if the control and management of its affairs is situated wholly in India in that year or (ii) if its income arising in India in that year exceeds its income arising outside India in that year. The definition shows that the country of incorporation does not determine its place of residence but it is the place of control and management that determines a Company's place of residence. So if any part of the control and management is outside India then the Company would not be treated as resident in India. But the Companies who have most of their trading activities in India and earn a substantial income here would be treated as resident even though they may be registered and controlled from a foreign country.

For the purpose of the 50% income for Clause (c) of Section 4A it is only the income arising in India and not the income which may be deemed to arise in India, which has to be taken into account in determining whether a Company is resident in India. The whole of the income arising in India (including agricultural income and any other income which may be exempt from tax) has to be taken into account in determining whether more than half of the income of the Company arises in India.

§3—Resident and ordinarily Resident. (Section 4B):

(a) An individual is "Resident and ordinarily resident" in any year, i.e., accounting year if he has been resident in India in nine out of ten years of 12 calendar months preceding that year and has stayed in India for more than 730 days in last seven years of 12 calendar months preceding that year. Both these conditions are cumulative and if we fail to prove either of the conditions then we fail to establish that he is "resident and ordinarily resident". Ordinary residence is not measured by the length of technical residence alone but also by the period of physical presence during preceding seven years; on the other hand the period of physical presence alone, however long, is not enough, there must also be technical residence for nine out of ten preceding years.

The object of taking both these factors into account is clear. Two classes of individuals were considered when the Legislature introduced the principle of taxing permanent residents, viz., those who were on the upward path of progress from foreigners to full citizens and those who were on the downward path, falling off from full citizens to foreigners. In the case of the former, merely because they come and go, and stay in India, they should not be taxed as ordinary residents. They can be taxed as such, only after they complete a period of nine years' residence. In the case of the latter, even if they have been technically residents for over nine years they should not be taxed if they have not stayed in India for more than 730 days in the preceding seven years.

Complete absence from India for two fiscal years (1st April to 31st March) will destroy the status of a "resident and ordinarily resident" until the individual completes the fresh period of nine years' residence. Complete absence for one full fiscal year in every five years would enable an individual, who has not become an ordinarily resident to keep up the status of "not ordinarily resident".

(b) A Hindu Undivided Family is ordinarily resident in India if its Manager is "ordinarily resident" in India in accordance with the principle discussed above. When the Manager of a Hindu Undivided Family dies or is replaced by another for any reason, the period of residence in India of the successive Managers of the Family during its continued existence should be taken into account in determining whether the Family is Ordinarily Resident in India or not.

(c) "Ordinary residence" with regard to a Company, Firm or other Association of persons is the same as residence, i.e., they are "ordinarily resident" if they are "resident". Consequently a Company will be "ordinarily resident" in India and taxed as such if (i) the control and management of its affairs is situated wholly in India in that year or (ii) if its income accruing in India in that year exceeds its income accruing outside India: but a firm or other Association of persons will be "ordinarily resident" unless its control and management is situated wholly without India. There is therefore much difference between the treatment accorded to the firms and companies which are entirely controlled from abroad. If more than 50% of the income of such a company accrues in India it will be treated as "ordinarily resident" but if more than 50% of the income of such firm is derived from India it will still be treated as "Not ordinarily resident".

§4—Income which accrues, arises or is received in an Indian State. [Section 14(2) (C)]—As explained in Chapter II §5 (a) income which accrues, arises or is received in an Indian State is included in the total income of the assessee if he is “resident and ordinarily resident” for determining the rate of tax applicable to other taxable income, but it is not included if the assessee is “resident but not ordinarily resident” unless the income is derived from a business controlled from or profession or vocation set up in India (including Indian States). The income is however taxable if it is brought into India in the year of its accrual. Income received in India and income brought into India are not identical and their difference will be discussed later on. (See § 8.)

The intention of exempting this income from taxation was to avoid a loss of revenue that would arise through Double Income-tax Relief, if the Indian States also adopt residence basis of taxation. But in order to provide relief from the hardship which would be incurred if income accruing in an Indian State and once included in the total income for rate purposes in the year of accrual, were again taken into account in the year of remittance into India, the Legislature has enacted that the income shall not be taken into account for rate purposes in the year of remittance so long as it does not exceed the amount of Indian income of that year but if it does exceed, then the rate of tax will be the rate applicable to the amount of the income brought into India on the supposition that it represented the total income of the assessee. (See Illustration 33.)

In the case of a non-resident the income is included in his total world income for determining the rate of tax applicable to his total Indian income. If the income is brought into India in the year of accrual or in any subsequent year, it is treated as “No income” and excluded from the computation of total income liable to tax in India.

As the Indian States have now merged in the Union of India, Section 14 (2) (C) will apply only to the State of Jammu and Kashmir which has specifically been excluded from the territorial jurisdiction to which the Income-tax Act now applies. The taxation laws of the ‘merged States’ become inoperative with effect from the assessment of the income of any previous year ending after 31st March 1948 or profits of any chargeable accounting period ending after that date, which would be assessable under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, as extended. The merged States taxation laws remain operative in relation to assessment of the income of the preceding periods and the assessment would be made by the corresponding authorities appointed under the Indian Taxation Laws.

§5—Income which accrues, arises or is received outside India. [Section 4 (1)]—It is taxable in the hands of an assessee who is “resident and ordinarily resident” subject to an allowance of Rs. 4,500. If the income is brought into India in the year of accrual it is taxable in full, but if it is brought in any subsequent year it should be excluded from the computation, provided it has been taxed in the year of accrual. For example, say in the fiscal year ended 31st March, 1947 an assessee’s income accruing outside India was Rs. 2,500 which was brought in full in India on the 1st June, 1949. In compiling his return of income for the year ended 31st March, 1947 the amount of Rs. 2,500 should be excluded (as it is less than Rs. 4,500), but it should be included in his return of income for the year ended 31st March, 1950. Now, if the income be Rs. 7,500 then Rs. 3,000 (Rs. 7,500 less Rs. 4,500) should be included in the return of income for the year ended 31st March, 1947 whereas Rs. 4,500 (Rs. 7,500 less Rs. 3,000 taxed in an earlier year) should be included in the return of income for the year ended 31st March, 1950.

If the assessee is "resident but not ordinarily resident" the income is excluded from the computation of total income unless it is derived from business controlled in or profession or vocation set up in India but it would be taxable if it is brought into India in the year of its accrual or in any subsequent year.

If the assessee is a "Non-Resident" the income is included in his total world income for determining the rate of tax applicable to his total Indian income. If the income is brought into India in the year of accrual or in any subsequent year it should be excluded from the computation of total income liable to tax in India.

§6—Computation of foreign income—If any tax or rate is levied or assessed in the country in which the foreign income accrues, on the basis of such income, then it will not be allowed as a deduction from the computation of the total foreign income. Foreign losses should be computed in the same manner as profits are computed and set off against income, profits and gains arising in India. But since the status of an assessee is changeable from year to year and as a consequence the world income will be taxable in certain years and Indian income or some intermediate figure in others, the question arises as to how the foreign losses should be carried forward. Of course in a year in which foreign business profits are taxable on accrual basis foreign losses are also entitled to be set off and carried forward to the next year. But if in the next year the assessee becomes non-resident the foreign business losses carried forward from the previous year cannot be set off against Indian business profits since the foreign source is not taxable in that year. The loss should be set off against profit accruing outside India within 6 years following that year. Consequently foreign losses should be set off only against foreign income accruing or arising from the same business, profession or vocation.

§7—Income which accrues, arises or is received in a country which prohibits remittance of money. (Section 45)—The laws of a country may sometimes prohibit or restrict remittance of money earned there to other countries and the necessity of giving relief to an assessee in respect of taxation of such income is obvious. Consequently if an assessee is assessed in respect of income accruing outside India in a country, the laws of which prohibit or restrict the remittance of money to India then he will not be treated as in default in respect of that part of tax which is due in respect of that amount of his income until the prohibition or restriction is removed. The assessment of such income to tax is not postponed but collection of the tax will be postponed. But the income will be treated as remitted to India if it has been or could have been utilised for expenditure incurred abroad and it will be deemed to have been brought into India if it is brought into India in any form even after it has been capitalized, e.g., if the foreign income is invested in securities abroad and then they are brought into India, there will be a constructive receipt of the income in India and as such taxable.

§8—Foreign income brought into India. [Section 4 (1)]—Income cannot be received twice by or on behalf of the same person. The word "received" means "to take in one's hand or into one's possession something held out or offered by another, to take delivery of a thing from another, either for oneself or for a third party". Consequently the word "received" implies two persons, viz., the person who receives and the person from whom he receives. Since a person cannot receive a thing from himself the income should be treated in such case as "brought into". The receipt of an income must refer to the first occasion upon which the recipient got the money under his own control but it can then be "brought into" as many countries as he likes. An income can be received either in India or in the United Kingdom but after it has been received in India it can be remitted to Ceylon and then again to the United Kingdom. In both these countries that is, in Ceylon and United Kingdom the income would be treated as "brought into".

A sum of money may be received in more than one ways, that is, by transfer of a coin or a negotiable instrument or other document which represents and produces coin and is treated as such by business men, even a settlement in account may be equivalent to a receipt of a sum of money although no money may pass. In some instances a sum may be regarded as having been "constructively remitted" to this country, i.e., where an assessee draws a cheque on his banker abroad and cashes it here. It is impossible to define the various ways in which "a remittance" to this country can be made or to lay down exactly the circumstances in which the liability can be avoided.

Borrowing money in India is not the same as receiving income, as such if a debt due by an assessee to a Bank of India is transferred to its London Office and discharged at London by the sale of sterling securities belonging to the assessee then it cannot be said a "constructive remittance" to India of the sale proceeds of the sterling securities has taken place. But if the Bank in India allows the assessee to overdraw in anticipation of getting money from London then the overdraft should be treated as a "constructive remittance" of the sale proceeds of the sterling securities to India.

Remittance received by wife resident in India out of the income of her non-resident husband which is not included in his total income liable to Indian income-tax shall be deemed to be income accruing in India to the wife and is assessable to Indian income-tax in her hands. But the Act is silent in respect of the reverse case of remittance from a wife resident abroad to a husband resident in India. [Also see Chap. IV §1(b)].

CHAPTER IV

CLASSIFICATION OF TAX-PAYERS (Section 3)

Income-tax is payable by every individual, Hindu Undivided Family, Company, Local Authority and by every firm and other Association of persons or the partners of the firm or members of the Association individually. The liability of each class of tax-payers will now be discussed.

§1—Individual—The term "Individual" has not been defined in the Act. It means a "human being" or a single person in its ordinarily accepted sense. A minor who earns by his own skill or a person of unsound mind who carries on a business under his control is assessable as an Individual. A trustee or Administrator or Executor is also assessable as an Individual in his representative character.

In computing the total income of an individual the following kinds of income should be included: (i) Income derived by membership of wife or minor children in a firm of which the husband or father is a partner; (ii) Income from assets transferred to wife or minor children otherwise than for adequate consideration or in connection with an agreement to live apart; (iii) Income from assets transferred to third parties otherwise than for adequate consideration if the transfer was for the benefit of his wife or minor children.

But, income derived from properties conveyed by an individual under a Deed of Trust, in pursuance of a consent decree, and payable to his wife during her lifetime for maintaining her minor children and running the household, could not be deemed to be his income although the said income would be paid back to him in the event of his surviving his wife. Again, where an individual with a view to make a provision for his wife in fulfilment of a promise made at the time of her marriage that out of his funds he would hand over to her an Estate worth Rs. 20,000 for her benefit up to her death, the income of which would be spent by her according to her wish, made an entry in his business books, it was held that the said entry was an irrevocable covenant to pay the income accruing on Rs. 20,000 to the wife and as such could not be deemed to be the income of the husband although during his wife's lifetime he would have full control over the capital and which would revert to him in the event of his surviving his wife.

(Regarding Residence—see Chap. III. §§ 2 & 3: Rate of tax—see Chap. X § 5 and Chap. XI § 2).

(a) Dead person (Sections 24B & 49F)—An Executor, Administrator or legal representative of a deceased person should be treated as the assessee for the purpose of assessment of the income of the deceased person. The liability is however confined to the payment of tax to the extent to which the estate is capable of meeting the charge and does not rank in any way prior to other charges to which the estate may be liable.

When no notice has been served on a deceased person, a notice may be served on the executor, administrator or other legal representative and an assessment made as if such person were the assessee. Where notice has been served on a deceased person, but no return has been made or where the return made is in the Income-tax Officer's opinion incorrect or incomplete.

the Income-tax Officer may assess the income and determine the tax. For the purposes of making such assessments the Income-tax Officer may require the executor, administrator or legal representative of the deceased to produce documents or other evidence.

The executor, administrator, or the legal representative is similarly authorised to claim a refund of income-tax which would but for his death, have been payable to the deceased person and to appeal against the order of the Income-tax Officer who refuses to grant the refund.

(b) Married woman. [Sections 4(2) & 16(3)]—A married woman is liable to Income-tax in respect of any income which she earns on her own account or any income from assets inherited by her or gifted to her by any one other than her husband. The residence rules will be applied to her in her individual capacity.

Remittances received by wife resident in India out of the income of her non-resident husband, which is not included in her husband's total income liable to Indian income-tax, shall be deemed to be income accruing in India to the wife and is assessable to Indian income-tax in her hands. Income from assets transferred by a husband to his wife for adequate consideration or in connection with an agreement to live apart is taxable in the hands of the wife.

The income of a married woman living with her husband should for the purposes of assessment and collection of income-tax in the United Kingdom, be regarded as the income of the husband. Where she is not living with her husband she will be assessed and charged as if she were unmarried. Moreover, where a married woman living in the United Kingdom is in receipt of any foreign or colonial income (excluding her husband's earned income), she should be assessed and charged as a feme sole, if she received the income in her own right and as the "agent" of her husband if she received it on behalf of him.

In India the wife will be taxed in respect of her income from sterling securities if she is "resident and ordinarily resident", whereas her husband will be taxed in the United Kingdom in respect of his wife's sterling income, along with his own personal income. If the wife pays income-tax in India in her own name and if the husband pays the tax in the United Kingdom in his own name it is doubtful whether any Double Income-tax Relief will be admissible, in respect of the income from the sterling securities which is apparently taxed in both the countries.

(c) Guardians, Trustees and Agents. (Section 40)—Guardians and trustees of a minor, lunatic or idiot are liable to be assessed in respect of any income which they are entitled to receive on behalf of the beneficiaries concerned. The liability to assessment is to be in the same manner and to the same extent as it would have been, had the assessment been made directly on the beneficiary. The Act however does not permit double taxation in the case of trusts once in the hands of the trustees and again in the hands of the beneficiaries. Its inclusion in the total income may raise the rate of tax leviable on the remaining income of the beneficiary or render that income liable to super-tax but the income should not itself be subjected to income-tax or super-tax a second time in the hands of the beneficiary if it has borne income-tax and super-tax in the hands of the trustees. In determining the extent to which a beneficiary has been taxed when a part of the income of a trust has suffered taxation, his share is deemed to have been derived proportionately from the whole income of the trust and therefore to have been taxed in the same proportion as the income of the trust has been taxed.

Any person employed by or on behalf of a person residing outside India or having any business connection with such person or through whom such person is in receipt of any income, profits or gains, which are chargeable under the Act, is liable to be assessed in the like manner and to the same amount as tax would be leviable from such non-resident. The tax may however be levied upon and recovered from the non-resident direct. The liability of the agent to pay tax is personal though he is entitled to recoup himself from the non-resident.

(d) Court of Wards, Administrator-General, Official Trustees, etc. (Section 41)—Courts of wards, Administrator-General, Official Trustees, Receivers and Managers appointed by Courts and trustees appointed under duly executed trust instrument or will, who are entitled to receive any income, profits or gains on behalf of a beneficiary, are liable to tax in the like manner and to the same amount as would be leviable upon the beneficiary and all the provisions of the Act are to apply accordingly. Where the income is not specifically receivable on behalf of any one beneficiary or where the individual shares of the beneficiaries are indeterminate or unknown the tax is leviable at the maximum rate.

It does not however prevent the direct assessment of the beneficiaries specifically on whose behalf the income is receivable or the recovery of the tax from him direct. But the income should not itself be subjected to tax a second time if it has already borne tax in the hands of the trustees.

§2.—Hindu Undivided Family.—The Income-tax Act does not define a Hindu Undivided Family and we have to seek guidance from the sacred books and customs of the Hindus and from judicial pronouncements. A Hindu Undivided Family is a coparcenary or tenancy in common arising by law among certain relatives of stated degrees including relations by adoption. It cannot be created by contract among strangers or others outside the stated degree of relations.

There are two Schools of Hindu Law, the Dayabhaga and the Mitakshara—the former prevailing in the greater part of Bengal and the latter in the rest of India. The fundamental difference between the two is in their attitude towards ancestral property and the admission of females into the coparcenary under certain circumstances. Under the Dayabhaga Law a son has no right in the family property so long as his father is alive, whereas under the Mitakshara Law every male member of the family has a right in the family property as soon as he is born.

The departmental instructions in this connection are as follows:—

“The son of a Hindu (governed by any school of Hindu Law) does not acquire by birth any interest in his father's self-acquired property. In respect of the income of such property the father is to be assessed as an individual. In the case of Hindus not governed by the Dayabhaga Law the son acquires by birth an interest in his father's ancestral property and therefore after the birth of a son the income from ancestral property is to be assessed as the income of a Hindu Undivided Family. According to the Dayabhaga Law, however the son does not acquire by birth any interest in ancestral property. His rights arise for the first time on his father's death. In the father's lifetime, therefore, the income from ancestral property is to be assessed as the income of an individual unless the father himself is a member of a coparcenary. The income of a sole surviving male member of a Hindu Undivided Family governed by the Mitakshara Law is to be assessed as his personal income if he has no son. The existence of a wife and daughters does not alter the position. Under the Dayabhaga Law the position is different. According to that law a coparcenary is formed only when the inheritance opens, and there must be two or more male heirs before a coparcenary can be formed. But if any of these male coparceners dies leaving surviving him a widow or a daughter that widow or daughter would be admitted into the coparcenary in the place of the deceased coparcener. As for example, a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga Law dies leaving three sons A, B & C. The three sons, A, B and C, inherit the property jointly and form a coparcenary (although each inherits a defined share). If before partitioning their shares, B dies leaving a widow, BW and C dies leaving a daughter CD. then A, BW and CD will be members of the coparcenary originally formed by A, B and C. It will thus be seen that the Dayabhaga Law differs from the Mitakshara in admitting females into the coparcenary in certain circumstances although they cannot originally form a coparcenary. A coparcenary is a fortiori an Undivided Hindu Family and the income from the coparcenary property will, according to the Dayabhaga Law, be assessable as the income of an Undivided Hindu Family notwithstanding that such coparcenary consists of only one male member and one or more female members. The income from ancestral property of a Hindu (governed by any school of law) with no son but with a wife and/or daughters is to be assessed as the income of an individual. It would be inconsistent with the interpretation of the law of the Dayabhaga as of the law of the Mitakshara to hold that property which a man has obtained from his father belongs to a Hindu Undivided Family by reason of his having a wife and/or daughter. Indeed since under the Dayabhaga Law a son has no greater right in his father's property than that of maintenance during his minority and the father is the absolute owner of property developing upon him, even the existence of a son will not make the income of the property in the father's hands the income of an undivided family."

Basis of Taxation—For income-tax and super-tax purposes a Hindu Undivided Family is treated as a separate entity and no account is taken of how that income is distributed amongst the individual members when such individual members are assessed to income-tax and super-tax in respect of their separate income. A member of a Hindu Undivided Family cannot be called upon, in his individual capacity, to pay any further tax in respect of his share of income or to pay a higher rate of tax by including his share of the family income in his own total income. This applies even in cases where the amount of income of the family is below the taxable limit and therefore not liable to taxation in the hands of the manager of the family. Conversely a member of an Undivided Hindu Family cannot claim a refund of tax on the ground that his own total income including his share of the family income, entitles him to a lower rate of taxation than the family.

In the assessment year 1949/50 the minimum exemption limit for income-tax was raised to Rs. 5,000 for a Hindu Undivided Family having at least 2 members of more than 18 years of age, neither of whom is a lineal descendent of the other. The limit was further raised to Rs. 7,200 in the assessment year 1950/51 providing relief to a considerable number of tax-payers.

Whether the present day facts correspond to the law or not, the law assumes that the normal status of a Hindu Undivided Family is one of jointness in residence and estate. The law also presumes that the property once joint continues as such until the contrary is proved by a member of the family who claims any advantage for the purpose of tax. If at the time of assessment it is claimed by a member that a partition has taken place among the members of the family the Income-tax Officer shall enquire therein and if he is satisfied, shall assess total income of the family up to the date of partition. Each member shall then in addition to any income-tax and super-tax for which he may separately be liable, be called upon to pay his share of the tax so assessed according to the portion of the family property allotted to him.

§3—Company—Under Income-tax Act a “Company” means (a) any Indian Company as defined in the Indian Companies Act 1913, the registered office of which is situate in India or (b) any Association whether incorporated or not and whether Indian or non-Indian which is declared by general or special order of the Central Board of Revenue to be a Company for the purpose of the Act.

The word “Company” has been used in the Income-tax Act in a much wider sense and includes any foreign association like the French Societies Anonyms which have many characteristics in common with the Companies recognised by the Indian Law. The rules about incorporation of Companies outside India may differ but if a Company has been duly registered in accordance with the laws of the country, it is a “Company” for the purposes of the Income-tax Act, no matter what the motives of registration were. A Company in liquidation is a “Company” within the meaning of the Income-tax Act and the Revenue Authorities can call upon the liquidator to submit a return of income and to pay the amount of tax due.

Basis of taxation—A Company is assessable to income-tax on its profits at the maximum rate irrespective of the amount of its profit. The shareholders are however entitled to get credit for the amount of income-tax payable by the Company in respect of the dividends received by them. The dividend is not exempt from taxation in the hands of the shareholders and is included in their total income.

In addition, the Companies pay a flat rate of super-tax on their entire profits. This tax is not, however, paid on behalf of the shareholders nor can it proportionately be credited to the shareholders as in the case of income-tax. Thus the shareholders have to pay an additional super-tax through the Company, in respect of the dividends receivable by them. An Investment Trust Company however is exempt form paying super-tax a second time in respect of the dividends received from other Companies which have paid super-tax in respect of the profits out of which such dividends are paid.

The super-tax payable by Companies is entirely a Federal source of Revenue and is excluded from the proceeds of income-tax which are distributed to the Provinces. Though it corresponds to Corporation tax it is not allowed in India as a deduction in computing the profits of the Company for income-tax purposes as in the case of the United Kingdom profits tax.

With a view to prevent the avoidance of the payment of super-tax through non-distribution of income of a Company, in which the public do not hold more than 25 per cent. of the voting powers allotted to the ordinary shareholders or the shares of which are not dealt with in any Stock Exchange in India, the Income-tax Officers are authorised to tax the shareholders directly in respect of their proportionate share of the income. If the Company does not distribute 60 per cent. of its assessable profits as reduced by the amount of Income-tax and Super-tax payable in respect thereof, to its shareholders the Income-tax Officer shall assume that all the profits have been distributed and shall tax the shareholders directly unless he is satisfied that having regard to the previous losses or the smallness of the profits made, the payment of a dividend or of a larger dividend would be unreasonable. Further, if the accumulation of the past profits exceed the paid up capital of the Company together with any loan capital which is the property of the shareholder, or the actual cost of the fixed assets of the Company whichever is greater, then the Income-tax Officer shall take action unless all the assessable profits of the Company are distributed in the form of dividends. In all cases however the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner must be taken, who, in his turn shall not give his approval without hearing the objection, if any, of the Company concerned. Where tax has been paid in respect of any undistributed profits and gains of a Company and such profits and gains are subsequently distributed in any year the proportionate share therein of any shareholder of the Company shall be excluded in computing his total income of that year. These regulations were held in abeyance in the assessment years 1944-45 and 1945-46.

(Regarding Residence see Chap. III §§ 2 & 3.)

§4—A local Authority is defined as "a Municipal Committee, District Board, Body of Port Commissioners or other Authority legally entitled to or entrusted by the Government with the control or management of a Municipal or Local Fund". It includes Improvement Trust, Inland Navigation Boards, Water Boards, etc. There cannot be any "Local Authority" outside India within the meaning of the Income-tax Act.

Income arising from a trade or business carried on by any Local Authority outside its territorial jurisdiction in respect of the supply of a commodity or service, is liable to Income-tax at the maximum rate. Income from supplying gas, electricity, water, etc., to other Municipalities is taxable, subject to a fair allowance in respect of general supervision and possibly of loan charges, if any.

Bombay Municipal Corporation supplied water outside the city to Government and other persons from the Municipal Water Works situated outside the city on property belonging to the Corporation and the supply was metered at water works. It was held that in supplying water to Government and other persons outside the limits of the city, the Corporation was carrying on a trade or business and as the income arose from the supply of a commodity or service outside its own territorial jurisdiction it was liable to tax.

§5—Firm.—The Indian Income-tax Act adopts the definitions of "Firm", "Partner" and "Partnership" given in the Indian Partnership Act, 1932 which are as follows:—

"Partnership is the relation between persons who have agreed to share the profit of a business carried on by all or any of them acting for all. Persons who have entered into with one another are called individually 'partners' and collectively 'a Firm' and the name under which their business is carried on is called the 'Firm name'".

Under the Indian Partnership Act a minor cannot be a member of a firm though he may be admitted, with the consent of all the other partners, to the benefits of the partnership. The Income-tax Act provides that the expression "Partner" should include any person who being a minor, has been admitted to the benefits of the partnership.

The following sections of the Indian Partnership Act should also be studied in this connection:—

"Section 5. The relation of partnership arises from contract and not from status; and, in particular, the members of a Hindu Undivided Family carrying on a family business as such or a Burmese Buddhist husband and wife carrying on business as such are not partners in such business.

"Section 6. In determining whether a group of persons is or is not a firm or whether a person is or is not a partner in a firm, regard shall be had to the real relation between the parties, as shown by all the relevant facts taken together.

"Explanation 1.—The sharing of profits or of gross returns arising from property by persons holding a joint or common interest in that property does not of itself make persons partners.

"Explanation 2.—The receipt by a person of a share of the profits of a business, or of a payment contingent upon the earning of profits or varying with the profits earned by a business, does not of itself make him a partner with the persons carrying on the business; and in particular, the receipt of such share or payment—(a) by a lender of money to persons engaged or about to engage in any business, (b) by a servant or agent as remuneration, (c) by the widow or child of a deceased partner, as annuity or (d) by a previous owner or part owner of the business, as consideration for the sale of the goodwill or share thereof, does not of itself make the receiver a partner with the persons carrying on the business."

From a strict legal point of view a firm is not a legal entity but for the income-tax purposes it is a distinct unit notwithstanding the fact that the partner may also be separately assessed. It should be noted that a firm cannot legally be a partner in another firm, that no partnership can legally be constituted between a Hindu Undivided Family and a firm and that a partnership cannot be formed between the Karta of a Hindu Undivided Family in his individual capacity and the family. Although a firm as such cannot enter into a contract of partnership because it is not a legal entity there it nothing wrong to bar the individual members of a firm from entering into partnership with other individuals or with the partners of another firm, the contract entered into by the partnership must be regarded as the contract entered into on behalf of all the partners, and that the partner firm is entitled to have its share of loss in the bigger partnership, set off against its profits.

[Regarding Residence of firms see Chap. III §§ 2 & 3.]

For income-tax purposes firms are divided into two categories—registered and unregistered. The main difference in their treatment is as follows:—as regards income-tax, and super-tax it is not payable by the registered firm as such, except in respect of the shares of non-resident partners, the resident partners being assessed directly in respect of their shares of income. An unregistered firm, on the other hand, is assessed like an individual and the partners are not entitled to claim refunds where their individual rate of tax is lower than that of the firm, nor are the partners taxed a second time in respect of their shares of the profits of the firm, but their shares are included in their total income for determining the rate of tax at which they should be taxed on their other income. If, however, an unregistered firm as such, pays no tax on the ground that its total income is below the taxable limit, partners are liable to pay tax on their proportionate shares along with the tax on their other income.

(a) Registration of firms—(Rules 2 to 6)—An application for registration should be made in the prescribed form available from the Income-tax office and must be signed by all the partners. The application, accompanied by an instrument of partnership in duplicate, specifying the individual shares of the partners, should be submitted along with the return of income. When an application is submitted the Income-tax Officer shall enquire into the genuineness of the firm. If there be any evidence direct or circumstantial showing the bogus nature of a so-called instrument of partnership, the Income-tax Officer may refuse registration of the firm in question. Where a partnership consists of a firm and some individuals and the deed of partnership while mentioning the proportion in which the profits and losses are to be shared between the firm and the other partners respectively, does not specify the shares of the partners of the firm which is a member of the partnership, the partnership cannot be registered. Where a partner dies and afterwards an application for registration is made without disclosing the facts of the death of the deceased partner, registration may be refused by the Income-tax Officer.

When the Income-tax Officer is satisfied as to the genuineness of the instrument of the partnership, he shall endorse the original with a certificate to the effect, that the registration has been allowed and return the deed to the assessee, the duplicate being retained as part of the assessee's record. Registration once granted, is valid up to the end of the financial year in which it is allowed but can be renewed each year by the Income-tax Officer on an application in the prescribed form accompanied by a certificate signed by all the partners to the effect that the constitution of the firm has not been changed. In the event of the constitution being changed a fresh partnership deed should be submitted. Registration may be cancelled by the Income-tax Officer if the return of income of the firm is not submitted or evidence called by him is not furnished.

An order refusing to register a firm is appealable. An order for cancellation of registration shall not be passed unless 14 day's notice has been served on the firm.

(b) Assessment of registered firms [Section 23 (5) (a)]—When the total income of a registered firm is computed it should be allocated amongst the partners in proportion to their shares in the accounting year and included in their total income. In computing the total income of a firm (registered or unregistered) any allowance payable by it in respect of salary, commission, interest, or other remuneration to any of its partners should be excluded. Consequently the word "Share" means a partner's portion of the net profit or loss, as the case may be, increased or decreased by any sums payable to him by the firm as salary, interest, commission or other remuneration. The partners are then directly assessed in respect of their total income and the amount of tax is recovered from them. As the tax is not payable by the firm on its own behalf the amount of earned income allowance is admissible to its active partners. If, however, any of the partners be non-resident, his share of profits is assessed on, and tax payable, by the firm at the rate applicable to his total world income including the share of the firm's profit in question after adjustment of earned income allowance admissible in respect thereof. Where, in computing the foreign income of a registered firm the statutory allowance of Rs. 4,500 has been allowed, the rebate cannot again be claimed by a partner in respect of his share of income at the time of his own assessment.

Where there has been a change in the constitution of a firm or it has been newly constituted, the assessment should be made on the firm as it is constituted on the date of assessment and the partners who are entitled to receive the profits of the previous year should be assessed in respect of their proportionate share of profits. Consequently, the total income of the firm should be allocated amongst those who were partners in the previous year (i.e., the Accounting year) in proportion to their shares in such previous year. If, for any reason, the tax thus assessed on any partner cannot be recovered from him, it shall be recovered from the firm as constituted at the time of making the assessment.

In computing the total income of the firm, losses under one head can be set off against profits from any other head. In the event of a loss still remaining, it shall be apportioned among the partners who were entitled to share the profits and losses of the firm in the accounting year in the proportion in which they were entitled to share profits and losses and should, under no circumstances, be carried forward to be set off against the income of the firm itself in the following year. Where a previous partner has given up his share in a firm owing to a change in the constitution or is dead, only his successor by inheritance is entitled to carry forward losses allocated to him by the firm. No other persons including his successor in the firm, can claim to set off the loss against his income.

(c) Assessment of unregistered firm [Section 23 (5) (b)]—The method of assessment of an unregistered firm differs from that of a registered firm in that it is made on the firm direct in the same manner as an individual, on its total income and the amount of tax after adjustment of earned income allowance levied at the appropriate rate is recoverable from it direct. Each partner's share (as explained previously) is then included in his total income for determining the rate of tax applicable to his other income but he is not taxed a second time in respect of his share of the profits of the firm. If, however, the total income of the firm is below the taxable limit and no tax is paid by it then the partners will be liable to pay tax in respect of their proportionate shares after adjustment of earned income allowance admissible in respect thereof. The share of income to be included in the total income should be determined with reference to the total income of the firm and not the income as reduced by the earned income allowance allowed to the firm.

Where the total income of the partners is much higher than that of the firm, it is advantageous for the partners to keep the firm unregistered. In order to put an end to this practice the Income-tax Officers are authorised to treat the firm as registered one and make the assessment on the partners directly, if in his opinion the treatment as a registered firm would be to the benefit of the Government. The option is one-sided and while the firm cannot claim to be treated as registered except by registering itself, the Income-tax Officer can, at his option, treat it as registered if it would be more advantageous to the Revenue.

In the case of an unregistered firm, losses can be set off only against the profits of the firm and not against the income of any of the partners of the firm. In the event of a business loss still remaining, it shall be carried forward to be set off against the business income of the firm itself in the following year. In the case of an unregistered firm, treated by the Income-tax Officer as a registered one and assessed as such, losses can be carried forward and set off in the same manner as a registered firm.

Illustration 5—Debabrata, Dhononjoy and Durgadas have been actively carrying on business in partnership as wholesale hardware dealers and sharing profits in the proportion of 7/15, 5/15 and 3/15 respectively. Net profit of the firm for the year ended 31st March 1949 amounted to Rs. 30,000 after charging partners' salary of Rs. 4,800 (Debabrata Rs. 2,400 and Dhononjoy Rs. 2,400) and interest on Capital of Rs. 5,200 (Debabrata Rs. 1,800 Dhononjoy Rs. 1,400 and Durgadas Rs. 2,000). Private income of the partners—Debabrata Rs. 16,800 from professional fees, Dhononjoy Rs. 31,200 from cloth business, Durgadas sustained a loss of Rs. 5,600 in grain trade. Calculate the amount of tax payable by the partners if the firm is a registered one and also by the firm and its partners if it is an unregistered one.

Total income of the firm Rs. 40,000

$$\text{Average rate of Income-tax} = \frac{\text{Rs. 7004-11}}{\text{Rs. 31,640-}} = 42.506 \text{ pies per Rupee.}$$

As the share of the firm has already been subjected to Income-tax, the amount of income-tax payable by Debabrata on Rs. 13,440 (Rs. 16,800 less earned income allowance of Rs. 3,360) at 42.506 pies per Rupee will be Rs. 2,975-7.

Dhononjoy—Share of the firm	Rs. 13,800

As the share of the firm has already been subjected to Income-tax, the amount of income-tax payable by Dhononjoy on Rs. 27,200 (Rs. 31,200 less earned income allowance of Rs. 4,000) at 46.5 pies per Rupee will be Rs. 6,587-8

As the share of the firm has already been subjected to Super-tax, it should be excluded from the computation of Dhononjoy's total income for calculating super-tax payable by him. So Dhononjoy will be liable to pay super-tax on Rs. 31,200 at "wholly earned income" rates ruling in the fiscal year 1949-50 as follows:—

Illustration 9—Lakshmi, Manick and Narayan are active partners in a firm, the net profit of which for the year ended 31st March 1950 amounted to Rs. 20,000. The partnership deed provides for payment of salaries of Rs. 6,000 to Lakshmi, Rs. 4,500 to Manick and of interest on capital of Rs. 1,000 to Lakshmi, Rs. 1,500 to Manick and Rs. 2,000 to Narayan, the balance being divisible in the proportion of 20%, 20% and 60% respectively. Determine whether it is advantageous for the Revenue Authorities to assess the firm as registered or unregistered. The private income of the partners is as follows:—Lakshmi Rs. 28,000 from cloth business, Manick Rs. 15,000 from wine business and Narayan Rs. 40,000 from professional fees.

As the share of the firm has already been subjected to Super-tax, it should be excluded from the computation of Lakshmi's total income for calculating super-tax payable by him. So Lakshmi's will be liable to pay super-tax on Rs. 28,000 at the rates ruling in the fiscal year 1950-51 as follows:—

As the share of the firm has already been subjected to Super-tax, it should be excluded from the computation of Narayan's total income for calculating

The firm will be assessed as a "Registered Firm" as the amount of tax payable in that case will be higher.

§6—Association of persons—The expression means associations or bodies of individuals, companies, firms, and other bodies of individuals whether incorporated or not, the common generic qualities being joint interest and the right to sue and the liability to be sued as an association. When the resources of a number of individuals are pooled together and one business is carried on by the combined resources, then the unit is assessed as an association of persons, even if some of the individuals are minors and the business is carried on by their guardians. The expression includes Co-owners, Chambers of Commerce, Clubs, Co-operative Societies, Mutual Benefit Societies, Mutual Insurance Companies etc.

An association of persons is assessed in the same manner as an individual on its total income and the amount of tax levied at the appropriate rate is recoverable from the association direct. Members of an "Association of persons" are exempt from tax a second time, in their hands, of their share of profits receivable by them if the profits have been taxed in the hands of the association. Their shares are of course included in their total income for determining the rate of tax at which they should be taxed in respect of their other income. Similarly, they cannot claim a refund where their individual rate of tax is lower than that of the association. Where however the association does not pay any tax on the ground that its total income is below the taxable limit, the members are liable to pay tax on their proportionate shares along with the amount of tax payable in respect of their other income.

(Regarding Residence see Chap. III §§ 2 & 3)

(a) Co-owners—There was much conflict of judicial opinion as to whether Co-owners of properties are to be assessed as separate individuals or as an association of individuals. The conflict has since been remedied and the law at the moment stands as follows:—

"Where property is owned by two or more persons and their respective shares are definite and ascertainable, such persons shall not in respect of such property be assessed as an association of persons but the share of each such person in the income from the property.....shall be included in his total income."

(b) Chambers of Commerce—The income of a Chamber of Commerce from admission fees and annual subscriptions of members are not taxable. But if it performs any specific services for its members for remuneration definitely related to those services, then it shall be deemed to carry on business in respect of those services and the profits and gains therefrom shall be liable to tax.

The rules of a Stock Brokers' Association provided a definite scheme for allowing members to employ authorised clerks and for the admission, registration, conduct, control and supervision of the authorised clerks for the benefit primarily of the members who employed them and received from the members an annual fee of Rs. 100 for the admission of each authorised clerk. It was held, under the circumstances, that the income received by the Association by way of fees, was remuneration definitely related to specific services performed by the Association for its members and as such assessable to income-tax.

A Chamber of Commerce registered without the words "Limited" under Section 26 of the Indian Companies Act 1913, is assessable to income-tax at the rates applicable to a Company.

(c) Clubs—The income derived by a club or society from its members is not liable to tax. But income derived from persons other than members of the Club in the shape of gate-money, sale of liquor etc., is liable to tax even if the surplus is not distributed amongst the members. Surplus arising from members' club, whether incorporated or not, which merely provide social, sporting or other amenities to the members only, is not taxable.

(d) Co-operative Societies—The profits of co-operative societies whether incorporated or not, are exempt both from income-tax and super-tax. The word "Profits" used here does not include interest on securities, dividends on shares, income from house properties or other sources assessable under section 12. Such profits though exempt are included in the computation of total income of the society for rate purposes.

(e) Mutual Benefit Societies & Mutual Insurance Companies—The income of a mutual benefit society derived solely from interest on overdue subscriptions and on loans to its members is not taxable. But interest derived from Government Securities or other investments is assessable. The income of a mutual insurance company derived from its members is also exempt on this principle. But interest derived from Government Securities or other investments is assessable. The income of a mutual insurance company derived from its members is also exempt on this principle. But the companies carrying on business of dividing society insurance where shareholders and policy-holders are not the same, are not mutual societies and as such their income is taxable. The law has since been amended and the income of a mutual insurance business is now liable to tax. (See Section 2(6C) & Rule of the Schedule to the Act).

CHAPTER V

HEADS OF INCOME—SALARIES (SECTION 7)

§1—Income assessable under this head—The following categories of income are assessable as “Salaries”—salaries, wages, annuities, pensions, gratuities, fees, commissions, perquisites, and share of profit in lieu of salary. “Salary” signifies a consideration for services of a higher class, whereas “Wages” is confined to the earnings of labourers and artisans. It connotes a relationship of employer and employed, principal and agent or some similar relation. An “Annuity” is a yearly payment of a certain sum of money for life or for a stated number of years. It means yearly payments in the nature of income (i.e. annuities periodically paid by the employer) as distinguished from annual payments of a capital amount in yearly instalments which are apparently not taxable. Annuities payable by any one other than an employer (i.e. under a Will) is assessable as “Income from Other Sources” and are not subject to deduction of income-tax at source. “Pension” is a compensation for past services usually paid periodically. Commuted value of pension is of course not taxable. “Gratuity” also is paid in consideration of past service, usually paid in lump sum. “Fees” denote fluctuating payments depending on the work done as distinguished from salaries which are fixed in relation to a period of time. Fees paid to Government pleaders are not salaries but professional earnings. “Commission” denotes payment being percentage on amounts involved. “Perquisite” means any casual income attached to an office or position in addition to salary which can easily be converted into money. Perquisites other than free residence, e.g. free medical advice, free conveyance for other than official duties, free board, free uniform etc., which cannot ordinarily be converted into money are therefore not taxable. Rent free residence, on the other hand forms part of the perquisites of an employee, the money value of which is computed under departmental instructions at not more than 10% of his salary.

Honoraria or fees paid to Government servants by local bodies or private persons for professional work, the whole of which in the first instance is credited to Government, after which the whole or part is drawn under proper sanction by the Government servant concerned, should be taxed as salary. They are obviously fees, commissions, or perquisites received in addition to salary. Rewards for passing examinations are not liable to tax unless by the conditions of his employment the assessee is compelled to pass the examinations. Such rewards granted to officials for passing compulsory examination are distinguishable from grants made to assist candidates to meet the expenses for preparing for such examination. These tuition grants are not liable to tax even if they are paid to successful candidates only. The so-called “Rewards” paid to Military Officers and other ranks for passing compulsory language examinations are all to be treated as tuition grants and not as rewards and therefore are not liable to tax.

Bonus, gratuities etc, receivable by an assessee from his employer in connection with the termination of his employment by way of remuneration for his past services is taxable as salary. But if a payment is made solely as compensation for loss of employment and not by way of remuneration for past services, it is not taxable. A gift, pure and simple to an ex-employee or a payment to an ex-employee for refraining from competition would presumably be neither compensation for loss of employment nor remuneration for past services. A payment due to an employee from an unrecognised Provident Fund which represents the employer's contribution and interest thereon, is taxable as salary. But a payment due to an employee from a recognised Provident Fund or Superannuation Fund is exempt from taxation.

Any war gratuity paid in respect of a person's service in His Majesty's Forces in connection with any hostilities in which His Majesty was engaged during 1939-45, excluding gratuities (by whatever name called) payable under a contract of service, shall not for the purposes of the Indian Income-tax be included in the total income or total world income of that person.

[War Gratuities (Income-tax exemption) Ordinance, 1945]

Salaries payable out of Indian Revenues to Government employees in any part of India and salaries payable by a Local Authority, established in exercise of the powers of the Central Government, are liable to tax. All servants of Government or such Local Authorities are therefore liable to pay tax on their salaries if they are employed in any part of India and irrespective of their nationality.

Salaries or pensions payable in India by a foreign Government are taxable as income from "Other sources" and not under the head "Salaries". Deduction of Income-tax at source cannot in this case, be insisted upon by the Income-tax Authorities.

Leave salaries and pensions payable outside India in respect of services rendered within India are liable to tax under the head "Salaries". Similarly, Sterling overseas pay which is payable outside India in respect of services rendered in India is liable to Indian Income-tax. (The rate of exchange being rs/6d per Rupee.)

The payment of salary to a person employed outside India, in respect of work done outside India, is not a payment which is chargeable under the head "Salaries". It is only where a payment is made to a person abroad in respect of services rendered within India that the payment is chargeable under the head "Salaries".

§2—Basis of Liability—Until the Income-tax Amendment Act of 1939, salaries were assessable to tax only when they were 'received' by the assessee. The Amendment Act changed the basis to what is 'due' to the assessee whether paid or not'. The word 'due' is intended to refer to the date on which the remuneration becomes payable and has no reference to the period for which it is earned. Salaries earned by Government employees for any month become payable on the 1st day of the month following, as such salary for March 1947 "is due" in April 1947 and is liable to tax in the assessment year 1948-49. On the other hand salary earned by an employee of a private employer is payable during the month, as such salary for March 1947 "is due" in March 1947 and is liable to tax in the assessment year 1947-48. When any commission is payable to an employee subject to the sanction of the Board of Directors, it 'is due' on the date of sanction irrespective of the period for which it is payable; e.g. if a commission for the year ended 31st December 1946 is sanctioned on the 1st June 1947, it becomes 'due' on the 1st June 1947 and is liable to tax in the assessment year 1948-49.

Advances by way of loan or otherwise of income chargeable under the head salaries will be deemed to be salary 'due' on the date when the advance is received. But it must be distinguished from other classes of advances such as house building advance, motor car purchase advance, etc., which are in the nature of loans. Any portion of salary withheld under an order of the Court is liable to tax.

Though 'salary' is now assessable on 'due' basis, the actual collection of tax from the assessee is postponed till he has received the remuneration. Salary taxed in an earlier year on an accrual basis cannot be taxed a second time on a receipt basis when received in a later year. Further where accrual basis has been adopted and the collection of tax has been postponed till the remuneration has actually been received, it would not be open to the Income-tax Authorities to change the basis afterwards and tax the salary on a receipt basis instead of on an accrual basis. Similarly, it cannot be taxed again when adjusted by the employer against salary earned in a later year.

§3—Deduction of Tax at source—[Section 18 (2)]. Any person responsible for paying 'salaries' shall at the time of payment deduct income-tax and super-tax on the amount payable at the average rate applicable to the estimated total annual income of the assessee under this head. The employer, however, has got the power to increase or reduce the amount to be deducted in making adjustments of excess or deficiency arising out of any previous deduction or failure to deduct. Tax must be deducted even when the salary is payable outside India if it is earned in India. The value of such salary in rupees is to be calculated at the prescribed rate of exchange i.e. rs/6d per rupee. Where salary is payable to a Non-resident income-tax must be deducted at the maximum rate and super-tax at the average rate applicable to the estimated total annual income of the assessee under this head.

The person responsible for making the deduction shall pay the amount of tax deducted to the credit of the Central Government within one week from the date of such deduction. Within 30 days from the 31st March in each year he shall submit to the Income-tax Officer, within whose jurisdiction the deduction is made, an annual return of the names and addresses of the employees, the amount of salary due for the year and the amount of tax deducted therefrom.

Though 'salary' is assessable on accrual basis the liability to deduct tax at source arises only when the remuneration is actually paid. Moreover, when tax is deducted at source, the assessee cannot be called upon to pay tax unless he has received the salary without deduction. If a person fails to deduct or after deduction fails to pay the tax to the Government within a week from the date of such deduction he shall be deemed to be an assessee in default, in respect of the tax. But no penalty can be recovered from him unless such person has wilfully failed to deduct.

The system of "deduction of income-tax and super-tax at source" gives rise to much complication in calculating the amount of tax payable when the rates are changed year to year. To avoid numerous adjustments the Finance Acts provide that the amount of income-tax and super-tax payable by an assessee in respect of income from "Salaries" should be calculated at the rates levied in the accounting year (instead of the rates ruling in the year of assessment).

Illustration 10—Sri Chintaharan Chatterjee receives a monthly salary Rs. 1,500. Calculate the amount of tax deductible therefrom every month during the year ending 31st March 1949.

ANSWER

Estimated total annual income under the head "Salary"

3,600

---

Rs. 14,400

5,000 @ -/2/-	" "	625 0
4,400 @ -/3/6	" "	962 8
		<hr/> Rs. 1,806 4

Average rate of tax =  $\frac{\text{Rs. 1,806 4}}{\text{Rs. 14,400 0}} = 24.083 \text{ pias per Rupee.}$

The amount of tax deductible every month = Rs. 150 8

Occasionally employees get salary free of tax. The real pay in that case is not only the amount of salary but the amount of tax as well and they are liable to pay tax on such amount. If that is again paid by the employer the process goes on ad infinitum.

§4—Provident Funds and Super-annuation Funds (Sections 58A to 58V)—

Provident Funds are always favoured by the State as they encourage thrift. Persons contributing to such Funds are, therefore, entitled to certain tax concessions in respect of the same.

(a) Provident Funds Act 1925 deals with the Provident Funds maintained for the benefit of employees of Government, Railways, Local Authorities, Universities etc. Any contribution made by the employer together with interest on accumulated balance is treated as "No Income" and as such excluded from the computation of total income. The employee's contribution will, however, be included in the computation of total income. Rebate in respect of income-tax (but not Super-tax) will be allowed on the contribution along with any life insurance premia up to one-sixth of total income (before deduction of earned income allowance) or Rs. 6,000 whichever is less. Income derived from the investments of the Fund is treated as "No Income" and as such totally exempt from Income-tax and Super-tax. When the accumulated balance is repaid to the employee at the time of his retirement, it is treated as "No Income" in his hands and is excluded from the computation of his total income for the relevant year.

(b) Recognised Provident Funds—Besides the Provident Funds to which the Provident Funds Act 1925 applies, Provident Funds maintained by private employers which conform to certain conditions, enjoy certain privileges in respect of income-tax. The main conditions to which such Provident Fund must conform in order to secure these concessions are:—

(i) That the funds shall be vested in two or more Trustees or in the Official Trustee under an irrevocable Trust;

(ii) That the employer shall not be entitled to recover any sum whatsoever from the fund except where the employee is dismissed for misconduct or voluntarily leaves employment without adequate reasons;

(iii) That in any case such recoveries shall be limited to the contributions made by the employer himself, and to the interest in respect of such contributions or accumulations thereof ;

(iv) That the subscriptions of the employees and the contributions by the employer shall be regular and not casual;

(v) That the employers' contributions shall not exceed the employees' subscription as a rule, and

(vi) That the employees shall be employed in India or the principal place of business of the employer shall be in India.

The income-tax concessions are as follows—contributions to a recognised Provident Fund both by the employer and the employee taken together shall be exempt from income-tax (but not from super-tax) up to 1/6th of the employee's annual salary before deduction of earned income allowance subject to a maximum of Rs. 6,000. In addition interest credited on the accumulated balance of any employee shall be exempt from income-tax (i) to the extent that it does not exceed 1/3rd of his salary and (ii) to the extent that it is allowed at a rate not exceeding 6% per annum. The accumulated balance due to an employee, which includes interest on contributions, is also exempt, from income-tax and super-tax and is not included in the computation of his total income of the year in which the amount becomes payable. The contributions made by an employer to the individual accounts of his employees are allowed as business expenditure, as the fund is an irrevocable trust. Income on the investments held by the fund is also exempt from income-tax and super-tax.

(c) Unrecognised Provident Funds—Contributions made by an employee to Provident Fund not recognised by the Department are not exempt from income-tax. At the same time the employee does not pay any tax on the employer's contribution and interest credited on the accumulated balance, as these are not treated as income in his hands. As the fund is unrecognised, interest or other income arising out of investments thereof will be taxed in the hands of the fund itself as an 'association of persons'.

Contributions by an employer to a Private Provident Fund are allowed as a deduction if the fund is constituted as an irrevocable trust and if no part of the employer's contributions can be recovered by him, and further the employer has made effective arrangements for deduction of tax at source from any repayments made from the Fund. If the Fund remains in the hands or under the control of the employer by merely setting aside the money in his books without creating an irrevocable Trust, then no deduction can be allowed in the year in which the contributions are made. The total amount of periodical contributions will be allowed as a deduction to the employer in the year in which the accumulated balance is repaid to the employee, even though it includes contributions of earlier years, the reason being that the expenditure is actually incurred at the time of repayment.

Repayments from unrecognised Provident Funds are liable to income-tax and super-tax in the year of repayment in the hands of the recipient to the extent of the employer's contributions and interest thereon. Balance of the accumulated amount consisting of his own contributions and interest thereon is neither liable to any tax nor is included in the total income for rate purposes. The recipient is, however, entitled to get relief under Section 60(2) if the inclusion of the employer's contributions and interest thereon makes him liable to pay tax at a higher rate than that at which he would otherwise have been liable.

(d) Approved Super-annuation Funds—Super-annuation Funds are in the nature of Funds maintained by Insurance Companies, the employees contributing a certain amount from their salary which in fact represents premia for securing to them or to their dependents an annuity or pension at the time of their death or retirement and the employer making similar contributions to the Fund. When a Super-annuation Fund is approved on the lines similar to those for the recognition of Provident Funds, employee's contributions are exempted from payment of income-tax but not super-tax. The contributions are, however, included in the total income of the employee for rate purposes. Employer's contributions is not regarded as the income of the employee as the amount is not presently due to him and as such is, not taxable in his hands. Income derived from the investments of the Fund is treated as "No Income", and is not liable to any income-tax or super-tax.

Contributions made by the employer will be treated as business expenditure in his hands. If the contribution is not an ordinary annual contribution it will be treated either as an expense incurred in the year in which the sum is paid or as an expense to be spread over a number of years as the Central Board of Revenue may determine.

When the annuity or pension is paid to the employee it will be treated as income in his hands under the head "Salary". If, however, an amount is paid out of the Fund on the death of the employee or in lieu of or in commutation of an annuity or by way of refund of contributions on the death of the employee or on his leaving the employment, then no tax is payable thereon. On the other hand if any contribution (including interest thereon) is repaid to an employee while in service then income-tax shall be deducted by the Trustees of the Fund at the average rate of tax at which the employee was liable during the preceding three years.

(e) Unapproved Super-annuation Funds—Contributions made by an employee to a Super-annuation Fund not approved by the Department are not exempt from income-tax. The employee will not at the same time be called upon to pay any tax in respect of his employer's contributions. The Fund will not also get any tax exemption in respect of its income from investments.

Contributions to an unapproved Super-annuation Fund by an employer are treated as business expenditure if the Fund is constituted as an irrevocable Trust and if no part of the employer's contributions can be recovered by him. If, on the other hand, the Fund remains in the hands or under the control of the employer, then no deduction can be allowed in respect of the contributions made by him. Actual payments of pension to employees or to their widows or children should be allowed as business expenditure if the pensionary payment is fixed and recurring one. Pensions paid to persons who had at any time a share of interest in the business should, however, be disallowed.

When the employee gets the pension at the end of his service career, the same will be treated as income in his hands and taxed as "Salary". Lump sum repayment from an unapproved Super-annuation Fund in lieu of recurring pension are also liable to income-tax and super-tax in the hands of the recipient in the year of repayment to the extent of employer's contributions and interest thereon. He is, however, entitled to get relief under Section 60(2).

§5—Rebate on account of Life Insurance Premia & Provident Fund contributions.—(Section 15). Income-tax is not chargeable in respect of sums which the assessee by condition of his employment is required to spend out of his remuneration, wholly, necessarily and exclusively in the performance of his duties. The amount is treated as "No income", as such is excluded from the computation of total income. The cost of travelling from a person's residence to his place of employment is, not admissible nor are any expenses of a private character is allowable.

Income-tax (but not super-tax) is not payable in respect of (1) any sums deducted from salary payable to a Government employee, in accordance with the conditions of his service, for the purpose of securing to him a deferred annuity or of making provision for his wife or children; (2) any contributions to a Recognised Provident Fund by the employer and the employee up to 1/6th of the salary, and interest credited on the accumulated balance up to 6% per annum, in so far as it does not exceed one-third of the salary; (3) any sums paid to effect an insurance on the life of the assessee or his wife for the benefit of his children. The amounts are included in the total income for determining the rate of tax applicable to the gross salary.

Out of the premia paid in respect of the policy that covers the risk of sickness and accidental injury and also the risk of death, only so much as is attributable to the risk of death is admissible as a deduction from the income liable to tax. Insurance premia payable in Sterling should be converted at the rate of exchange in force on the day on which the premia are paid. No relief is admissible on premia paid out of income accruing or arising outside India unless such foreign income is chargeable to Indian Income-tax. Where, however, in the case of Non-residents, foreign income is included in the 'total world income' and it is not possible to allocate definitely from which income—Indian or Foreign—the premium was paid, the relief admissible will be proportionate, i.e., in the same proportion as the Indian income bears to the total world income.

Abatement on account of insurance can be given effect to by the person deducting income-tax from salary at the time of payment. Where abatement is not claimed at the time when the tax is deducted from salary, it can be claimed in the assessment or if no assessment is made, a refund on account of such rebate can be claimed under Section 48 of the Act.

The aggregate of any sums exempted shall not exceed 1/6th of the total income of the assessee (before deduction of the allowance for earned income) subject to a maximum of Rs. 6,000. In the assessment year 1944-45 this allowance has been further restricted to 10% of the capital sum assured excluding bonus, etc., i.e., if the policy is for Rs. 1,000 the maximum premium exempt should be Rs. 100 only. It is to be particularly noted that this abatement does not apply to super-tax.

[Regarding "earned income" allowance see Chap. X § 7]

Illustration 13—Fanindra Nath Sarkar received Rs. 18,000 as salary & allowances during the year ended 31st March 1950. He contributed Rs. 1,500 towards his Provident Fund; a similar amount was contributed by his employer. Interest at 5% amounting to Rs. 500 was credited to his Provident Fund Account. He paid Rs. 2,000 as Life Insurance premium (Capital sum assured being Rs. 25,000). §6—Relief under Section 60(2)—Where, by reason, of any portion of an assessee's salary being paid in arrears or in advance, or by reason of his having received in any financial year salary for more than twelve months, he is assessed at a rate higher than that at which he would otherwise have been assessed, the Central Government may grant him appropriate relief. In calculating relief to be granted to an assessee in respect of a year, any advantage gained by him in a previous year in which part of his salary was short paid will be taken into account.

Relief is also admissible when the accumulated balance due to an assessee participating in an unrecognised Provident Fund is received by him in a year, making him liable to pay tax at a higher rate, owing to the addition of the assessable portion of the money.

In terms of the latest departmental instructions the relief will be calculated as follows:—

- Total income of the assessee during the last three years (the last year being the year of repayment of Provident Fund money) should be computed by including 1/3rd of the Employer's contribution and interest thereon, in each year's income. (Employee's own contribution and interest thereon are treated as 'no income').
- Average rate of tax applicable to the total income as computed in (a) above should be calculated for each of the three years.
- Tax will be levied on the total income of the year of repayment including the assessable portion of the Provident Fund money;

- (i) at the lowest rate of the three average rates computed as at (b) above, if the assessee has served for more than 25 years;
- (ii) at the average rate of the three rates computed as at (b) above, if the assessee has served less than 25 years but more than 15 years;
- (iii) at the highest rate of the three rates computed as at (b) above, if the assessee has served less than 15 years but more than 5 years.

No relief will ordinarily be given where the assessee has served less than 5 years.

In computing the average rate "earned income allowance" should be taken into account if the allowance was admissible for any year or for all the preceding years; and the earned income allowance should also be allowed for the amount of Provident Fund repayment which is treated as a part of the income of the year subject to the condition that the earned income allowance deducted from the Provident Fund repayment plus the earned income allowance deducted from salary of the year does not exceed the maximum allowance admissible in relation to the income chargeable under the head "Salaries" for that year.

Illustration 14—Sri Gangadhar Ganguly who retired from service after completing 23 yrs. 7 months during the year ended 31st March 1950 drew salary, allowances etc. totalling Rs. 18,000, income-tax on which amounting to Rs. 1673-7 was deducted. Provident Fund money standing at his credit Rs. 45,000 (50% being employer's contribution and interest thereon) was paid to him during the year without deduction of income-tax. Calculate the amount of tax payable by him for the year.

His total income for the years ended 31st March 1948 and 31st March 1949 amounted to Rs. 15,000 and Rs. 16,500 respectively from "Salary" only. Calculate the amount of tax payable by Sri Gangadhar Ganguly if relief under Section 60(2) is allowed to him.

CHAPTER VI

HEADS OF INCOME—INTEREST ON SECURITIES (SECTION 8)

§1—Income assessable under this head.—Interest on the Securities of the Central Government and Provincial Governments and on the debentures or other Securities of money issued by or on behalf of a Local Authority or a Company is assessable as 'Interest on Securities.' But interest payable on debentures issued by firms, associations, clubs or individuals is not assessable under this head, it being chargeable under Section 10 or 12. Interest on securities of the Government of India issued, contracted and repayable in India, accrues and arises in India even when it is actually paid outside India. Income under this head cannot be taxed before it is actually received.

§2—Tax-free Securities.—Interest on the securities of the Central Government which are issued or declared to be tax-free are exempt from income-tax. When a Provincial Government issues a security as income-tax free, the income-tax on interest thereon shall be payable by that Provincial Government. So far as investors are concerned, therefore, securities issued income-tax free, whether by the Central or the Provincial Governments, stand exactly on the same footing, i.e., income-tax is not payable on the interest received therefrom by the assessee, the interest should of course be included in the computation of his total income for the relative year, for the purpose of deciding whether he is liable to income-tax, as also for determining the rate at which his other income should be taxed. Tax-free securities, unlike tax-free salaries, are not tax-compounded securities in the sense that the receiver of the interest is credited with a notional payment of income-tax. The owner therefore is not entitled to get credit in respect of such tax constructively paid by him; not even in respect of tax-free securities issued by a Provincial Government, though the tax in such case is paid to the Central Government by the Provincial Government.

§3—Admissible expenses.—In computing the income of an assessee under this head, allowance should be made in respect of any sum deducted from such interest as commission by a Banker for collecting such interest on his behalf. Interest payable on money borrowed by the assessee for the purpose of investment in such securities is also an allowable expense subject to the condition that where the interest is payable outside India, the expense will not be allowed unless tax in respect thereof has been paid or deducted at source or is recoverable from an agent of the recipient in India.

Where a Bank or other concern engaged in business similar to that of a Bank, receives deposits or loans in the course of its business and invests the money so borrowed as occasion arises, it should be allowed in computing its liability to tax to set off the entire interest on such borrowings against its entire income liable to tax. No attempt should be made to allocate a proportion of the borrowed money to investments in tax-free securities and to set off the interest of such proportion against the tax-free income instead of against the taxable income.

But (as an exception to the foregoing) in the rare cases in which there is definite proof (not a mere inference) that a certain sum was specifically borrowed by a Bank or similar concern for the purpose of investment in tax-free securities and has been so invested, the interest on the money so borrowed should be set off against the interest on the tax-free securities and not against the income liable to income-tax.

Assesseees other than Banks may set off interest on money borrowed specifically for investment in taxable securities or shares and so invested, against their income liable to tax taken as a whole and not merely against the interest on such securities or the dividends on such shares. In all such cases there must be a clear proof and not a mere inference that the money was specifically borrowed for such investments and actually invested. They cannot be allowed to set off against their income liable to tax, interest on money borrowed for investments in tax-free securities and so invested.

Occasionally Government issues loans on tap, i.e., the purchase price of the loan payable by a subscriber is increased by certain pies per cent. weekly from the last date of payment of interest to the date of purchase, this weekly increase being the net interest accruing on a de die in diem basis. At the end of the half year, however, full interest is paid to the holder. Where such interest is paid to the Reserve Bank of India, the Revenue Authorities should assess only the difference between the full interest and the increase in price over the nominal value representing the interest paid in respect of the broken period. This concession, however, does not apply to ordinary commercial transactions involving the purchase and sale of securities in the open market where the price including the net interest for the broken period, is settled between the vendor and the vendee. (See §6.)

It will be evident from the above that there is nothing to prevent the net income under this head being negative as a result of the amount of interest paid exceeding the amount of interest received.

§4—Deduction of tax at source—[Section 18 (3)].—The person responsible for paying any income chargeable under this head shall deduct income-tax but not super-tax at the maximum rate. The person deducting income-tax shall furnish a certificate to the effect that income-tax has been deducted specifying the amount and the rate at which the deduction has been made. Any sum deducted shall be deemed to be income received by the assessee and shall be treated as payment of income-tax on his behalf, the necessary credit being given to him in the assessment.

It frequently happens that security-holders hand over their Securities and Bonds to their Bankers for collection of interest. In that event the certificate would be given to the Bank for the whole block of Securities. In such a case the Income-tax Officer shall accept a certificate from the Bank and act upon it as if it were a certificate received direct from the person deducting income-tax at source.

It is desirable that refunds should be avoided as far as possible. There are, for example, certain institutions, authorities, and funds the income of which is exempt from tax. Similarly there are persons whose assessable income is less than Rs. 3,600 and as such are not liable to tax. There are other cases where the Income-tax Officer may be satisfied that the income of a holder of a security while liable to tax is not likely to fluctuate so widely as to alter the rate appropriate to the total income. The Income-tax Officer shall, in all proper cases, on the application made by the assessee, issue a certificate authorising the person paying the interest on securities to make no deduction of tax or to deduct tax at a specified lower rate than the maximum.

When the owner of a security to whom a certificate is granted has endorsed the security to his bank for collection of interest the officer responsible for paying the interest regards the Bank as a real holder of the security and takes no cognisance of any arrangement that may have been entered into between the security-holder and the Bank with the result that the certificates standing in the name of the real owner of the security granted by the Income-tax Officer becomes inoperative. Again sometimes the collecting Bank purchases securities on behalf of its constituents and holds them in its own name and does not endorse them in favour of the constituents who are the actual owners. In such cases the owners obtain exemption certificates from the Income-tax Authorities on production of the Bank's safe custody receipts issued in their favour. To avoid the possibility of paying officers refusing to act on these exemption certificates, Treasury Officers have been instructed to act on such certificates when presented along with a declaration by the Bank to the effect that the security continues to be the property of the person named as the owner in the exemption certificate.

The system of "deduction of income-tax at source" gives rise to much complication in calculating the amount of Income-tax payable when the rates are changed year to year. To avoid numerous adjustments the Finance Acts provide that the amount of income-tax payable by an assessee other than a Company in respect of income from "Interest on Securities" should be calculated at the rates levied in the accounting year. As super-tax is not deductible at source at the time of payment of interest, super-tax payable by the assessee in respect of this income should be calculated at the rates levied in the assessment year.

§5—Appreciation and Depreciation of Securities—When shares and securities are held by a company, firm or individual as part of its or his capital any appreciation or depreciation in their market value is outside the scope of the Income-tax Act, and similarly when the value of the shares and securities so held is realised, the transaction is a capital transaction and no account should be taken for income-tax purposes of any profit or loss resulting from the sale. On the other hand where a company, firm or an individual habitually uses part of its or his resources in the purchase of shares and securities with a view to obtaining profit on their sale and the subsequent reinvestment of the proceeds, the company, firm or individual is, in altering its or his investments, carrying on a trade for the sake of obtaining profit therefrom and the profits thus secured or losses incurred are trading profits or losses which must be taken into account in determining the assessment to income-tax. In such cases appreciation or depreciation in the values of the shares and securities would automatically be allowed in as much as the shares and securities would be treated as stock-in-trade and valued at cost price, or market price, whichever is lower. It will, therefore, always be a question of fact to be decided on the merits of each case whether the changes in investments are of sufficiently systematic a character to constitute the exercise of a trade, but if they are, the profits therefrom are liable to tax and an allowance must be made for any losses in calculating the amount of tax payable.

§6—Sale of Securities "Cum" interest—Interest on securities does not arise from day to day but on certain fixed days and where securities are purchased at a price expressed as a capital sum plus interest computed from the last due date to the date of sale, interest thus paid to the vendor is not deductible from the interest actually received by the purchaser on the next due date, in assessing the purchaser under the head "Interest on Securities". Where a security is sold "Cum" interest after the due date for payment of interest, the purchaser drawing interest, and not the vendor, the vendor cannot claim for the purpose of assessment that the interest should be treated as his income and that he should be given credit for the amount of of tax deducted therefrom; on the other hand if he is a dealer in securities the profits from the purchase and sale of securities will be taxable in his hands. The mere quotation in the bargain of the estimated accrued interest does not establish a separate contract in respect of interest, and if it were considered to be a separate contract, it would remain part and parcel of the whole purchase consideration.

§7—Treasury Bills—The difference between the price paid for a Treasury bill and the sum realised by the purchaser by holding the bill until maturity or by selling it or converting it before maturity, represents a profit chargeable to income-tax as income from "Other Sources" and the profit is not an accretion of capital. The profit, thus made, constitutes income of the year in which it is received. Income-tax is not deducted at source in respect of this income.

CHAPTER VII

HEADS OF INCOME (Continued) INCOME FROM HOUSE PROPERTY. (Section 9)

§1—Scope of the Section—The tax shall be payable by an assessee under this head in respect of properties consisting of buildings or lands appurtenant to a building by the owner of such property. Lands not attached to a building are not chargeable under this head. The income derived from vacant lands let out in Urban areas for the purpose of storing material etc. is chargeable to tax under Section 12 "Income from other sources". Though the word 'building' in ordinary sense means a block of brick or stonework covered by a roof, for income-tax purposes it includes docks, warehouses, bridges, and the like.

It is to be noted that it is only the owner who is liable to pay tax under this head. Where a person derives an income from house property which he holds on lease, such income is chargeable under Section 12. Buildings or lands occupied by the owner thereof for the purposes of his own business, profession or vocation, the profits of which are chargeable to tax, are not liable to pay tax under this head. The full profits of the business, profession or vocation without any deduction for such buildings or lands are chargeable under Section 10. But where a man who has invested his capital in house property and who keeps an office and a staff of rent collector, clerks, etc., is not carrying on a business. He is merely taking the ordinary steps necessary for enjoying the income from his property and the fact that the owner is a limited company having a place of business does not make any difference. Income derived from property belonging to a Company which has been incorporated for the purpose of owning and letting out such property is not assessable as income derived from business but should be assessed under Section 9 of the Income-tax Act.

Income of a building the erection of which was begun and completed between 1st April 1946 and 31st March 1952 is exempt from taxation for two years from the date of completion. The exemption applies to a complete unit of a building and not to any additions to an existing building unless the expenditure is more than Rs. 10,000, in respect of its net annual value computed after allowing all deductions admissible. This concession was given in the assessment year 1946/1947 with a view to stimulating building operations as a means of creating employment till the expected expansion in the industrial activity takes place in due course.

§2—Bonafide Annual Value of a building let out to tenants—Tax under the head "income from property" is chargeable in respect not of any actual rental or cash received but of the "bonafide annual value". The bonafide annual value of a building is the full annual rent at which the building could be let from year to year if the owner bears all owner's burdens including municipal rates or taxes chargeable on the owner and if the tenant bears all tenant's burdens including municipal rates and taxes chargeable on the tenant. It differs from the actual annual rent payable on a long term lease or the actual rent payable on a yearly lease under a privileged rental or with tenant's liability to pay owner's rates of taxes. It is to be particularly noted that no deductions from the bonafide annual value are permissible on account of any municipal or local rates or taxes in respect of property. Where, under the tenancy agreement the owner pays the occupier's share of municipal tax, then the amount included in the rent on account of such tax is deductible from the gross rent for the purpose of arriving at the bonafide annual value. On the other hand if there is a stipulation that the tenant will, in addition to the regular rent payable to the owner, pay to the municipality the owner's share of tax, such tax must be deemed to be a part of the rental value and must be added to the rent to arrive at the bonafide annual value.

§3—Bonafide Annual Value of a building occupied by the owner for residential purposes should not exceed 10% of his total income including this notional income. The annual value in this connection means the gross annual value before making the various deductions permissible under the Section. Ordinarily the net annual value can be found out by dividing the income from the remaining sources by 11.

Suppose X is the income from the remaining sources, and Y is the net annual value of the dwelling house. Then total income = X + Y.

$$Y = \frac{X+Y}{10} \times \frac{5}{6} \text{ or } Y = \frac{X+Y}{12} \text{ or } 12Y = X+Y \text{ or } 11Y = X$$

$$\text{Therefore } Y = \frac{X}{11}$$

Since a fictional person cannot physically reside, an assessee other than individual including Hindu undivided family is not entitled to claim any benefit under this provision.

§4—Admissible deductions.

(a) Repairs—The allowance to be made on account of repairs has nothing to do with the period for which the house has been occupied. In India the cost of repairs is a fixed proportion of the annual value and does not depend on the actual expenditure incurred as in the United Kingdom. Where the owner has to bear the cost of repairs it is fixed at 1/6th of the annual value and it can neither be reduced nor increased by the Income-tax Officer. Where the tenant has to bear the cost, the sum allowable is the difference between the annual value and the rent paid by the tenant up to, but not exceeding 1/6th of the annual value.

(b) Insurance Premia—The only insurance deduction permissible, is the amount of the annual premia paid to insure against risk of damage or destruction of the property concerned. In some cases owners insure against loss of rent. Where an owner asks for an allowance on account of the annual premia for such insurance it should be allowed if such owner agrees to pay tax on any amount recovered from the insurance company. Where no such allowance is claimed or allowed, tax should not be charged on the amount recovered from the insurance company.

(c) Interest on mortgage and charges—Interest on mortgage or charge on the property, annual charges which are not of a capital nature, ground rent and interest on capital borrowed for acquiring, constructing, repairing, renewing or reconstructing the property are allowable deductions, from the annual value. So long as there is a mortgage or charge, the purpose for which the mortgage or charge was created is irrelevant and interest can be deducted from the annual value. But where the property belongs to a Hindu Undivided Family, a charge created by any of its members alone over his share cannot be deducted either from the income of the family or from that of the member. Both the property and the mortgage must relate to the same assessee if the interest is to be deducted. The only condition attached to the allowance is that if the interest or charge is payable outside India, tax on it must have been paid, or deducted at source or recoverable from an agent under Section 43.

(d) Land Revenue—Sums paid on account of land revenue in respect of the property are allowable from annual value.

(e) Collection charges—As regards collection charges Rule 7 fixes 6 per cent. of the annual value as the maximum amount permissible. Where a house has remained vacant for a period, this maximum, of course, would never be reached and in many cases there will be no collection charges. Proof must always be given of the collection charges having been incurred. Rule 7 simply provides that, where there is proof of collection charges such charges may be allowed subject to the provision that in no case shall the amount allowed on account of collection charges exceed 6 per cent. of the annual value.

Legal expenses incurred in recovering rents from tenants should be treated as a permissible deduction included in collection charges subject to the following conditions:—

- (i) Only net legal expenses, that is, expenses after deducting any costs recovered from the opposite party will be deducted.
- (ii) The actual expenses, incurred in excess of the costs deducted will be allowed in the year in which the decree is passed: a further allowance for costs proved to be irrecoverable will be given later, if necessary.
- (iii) The total allowance for collection charges including legal expenses allowed must, of course, not exceed the statutory limit of 6 per cent.

(f) Vacancy—The amount allowable in respect of vacancy is that part of the bonafide annual value which is proportional to the period during which the property is wholly unoccupied. Where a person owns a house and keeps it furnished and ready for his own occupation or for the occupation of his guests, the house cannot be said to be vacant in any year merely because it was not occupied by the owner at any time during that year. Such a house may be unused but cannot be called vacant. So also in the case of a house kept ready as a guest house, it is not vacant on the ground that no guest resided during the year. Vacancy primarily relates to cases in which the house is habitually let out to tenants or intended to be so let out and there is a vacancy between two tenancies. It may also apply where a house is being dismantled and kept shut by the owner.

(g) Unrealised rent—Unrealised rent in respect of any property is exempt from income-tax and is also excluded in computing the total income of an assessee, provided that—

- (i) the tenancy is bonafide;
- (ii) the defaulting tenant has vacated or steps have been taken to compel him to vacate the property;
- (iii) the defaulting tenant is not in occupation of any other property of the assessee;

- (iv) the assessee has taken all reasonable steps to institute legal proceedings for the recovery of the unpaid rent or satisfies the Income-tax Officer that legal proceedings would be useless; and
- (v) the annual value of the property to which the unpaid rent relates was included in the assessed income of the year for which that was due and income-tax has been duly paid on such assessed income.

CHAPTER VIII

HEADS OF INCOME (Continued)

PROFITS AND GAINS OF BUSINESS, PROFESSION OR VOCATION (Section 10)

§1—Scope of the Section—Tax is payable by an assessee under this head in respect of the profits and gains of any business, profession or vocation carried on by him. Before the Amendment Act of 1939, income from profession or vocation was classed under a separate head. But the two heads are now amalgamated as the principles relating to the assessment and allowances are the same. The word "Business" has been defined in the Income-tax Act as including any trade, commerce, or manufacture or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture. A 'profession' on the other hand involves the idea of an occupation requiring purely intellectual skill or manual skill controlled as in painting, sculpture, or surgery, by the intellectual skill of the operator, as distinguished from an occupation which is substantially the production or sale of commodities. The Act does not contain any directions relating to the computation of profits generally, though there are several provisions in it relating to the admissibility of certain allowances and deductions.

§2—Admissible Allowances

(a) Rent of Premises—Rent paid for the premises in which the business, profession or vocation is carried on, is an admissible expense in computing the income under this head. Where a substantial part of the premises is used by the assessee for his own residence the proportionate amount of the rent, as determined by the Income-tax Officer, should be disallowed. Where the premises is owned by the owner of the business, profession or vocation, no allowance on account of rent is permissible, but is admissible when paid to a partner. Where rent fluctuates with profits, it is still allowable; but where it is designed to recoup the landlord for structural improvement it is not deductible.

(b) Repairs to building, machinery, plant etc—Where the assessee is himself the owner of his business premises, the amount spent on repairs to the premises is allowed as an admissible expense. Where he is the tenant of the premises, the amount spent by him on repairs if his lease requires him to execute repairs, is allowed as a deduction. Current repairs as are required to keep the machinery, plant etc., in serviceable condition are also allowable. But expenditure which would have increased the capital value should be disallowed as capital expenditure. Initial repairs of second-hand machinery or of a ship, which is purchased in a state of repair, will be as much capital expenditure as it would have been, if the work had been executed by the seller and the cost added to the ship, as such, they should be disallowed.

(c) Interest on Capital borrowed—Interest paid in respect of the capital which has been borrowed for the purposes of the business is admissible even if it varies with the amount of profits earned. But this allowance is not admissible in the case of interest chargeable under the Act, which is payable outside India, unless tax thereon has been paid, deducted or is recoverable from an Agent under Section 43, except in the case of public loans issued before 1st April 1938. Interest paid to partners by firms cannot be deducted but interest paid to members of other Associations is an admissible deduction. No allowance can be made for interest on share capital of Companies but interest on debentures is admissible.

(d) Insurance premia—Allowance in respect of insurance premia is restricted to insurance policies taken out against the risk of damage or destruction of buildings, machinery, plant, furniture, stocks, or stores used for the purposes of the particular business of which the profits or gains are being calculated but no allowance can be made on account of premia in regard to other insurances. Further, any sums not actually expended on premia but merely set aside by a Company or firm as an insurance fund are simply a particular description of reserve and no allowance or deduction can be given in respect of such reserves.

(e) Rates and Taxes—Land revenue, local rates or municipal taxes paid in respect of the portion of the premises used for the purposes of business, profession or vocation, are admissible expenses. In computing income from business, profession or vocation, a local rate or tax which is payable irrespective of whether profits are made or not, should be treated as expenditure incurred solely for the purpose of earning profits of the business, profession or vocation. No allowance can be given on account of any other rates or taxes whatsoever. All rates and taxes, therefore whether levied on profits of a business, profession or vocation or which are charged on the proprietor in respect of anything other than the actual portion of the premises used for the purposes of the business, profession or vocation must be disallowed. Any sum paid on account of cess, rate or tax levied on the profits or gains of any business, profession or vocation or assessed at a proportion or otherwise on the basis of such profits or gains should therefore be disallowed.

(f) Bonus or Commission to Employees—Sums paid by way of bonus or commission to an employee for services rendered are allowable if such sum would not have been payable to him as profits or dividends and if it is of a reasonable amount with reference to the pay and conditions of his service, the profits of the business and the general practice in similar business, profession or vocation. The condition that it should not be payable as profits or dividends precludes the application of this concession to partners or shareholders. The various conditions laid down are intended to prevent collusive deduction in combination with the influential employees.

(g) Bad Debts and Irrecoverable Loans—An allowance for bad and doubtful debts is made on the following conditions:—(i) It is allowed only where the accounts of the assessee are not kept on the cash basis; (ii) only such amount as the Income-tax Officer estimates to be irrecoverable is allowed; and (iii) the amount allowed must not exceed the amount actually written off in the books of the assessee. If the amount ultimately recovered on such debt is greater than the difference between the whole debt and the amount so allowed, the excess will be deemed to be a profit of the year in which it is recovered and if less, the deficiency will be treated as a business expense.

Whether a debt is bad, and when it becomes such, are questions of facts to be determined in cases of disputes, not by the assessee or by the exercise of any option on his part but by the Revenue Authorities on a consideration of all relevant and admissible evidence. The mere fact that a debt was incurred on a date beyond the period of limitation will not itself make a debt bad; still less will it fix the date at which a debt will become bad. A statute-barred debt is not necessarily bad; nor a non-statute-barred debt necessarily good. The age of the debt is, no doubt, a relevant matter to be taken into consideration. It makes no difference whether the debt is due from a human being or from a joint stock company; in either case it is a question of fact whether and when a debt becomes bad. There is no justification for treating all debts from Companies as necessarily good, merely because the debtor company has not gone into liquidation. The burden of proving that a debt has become bad lies on the assessee; so also the burden of proving that what is claimed as bad debt has already been taxed in an earlier year.

Irrecoverable Loans—When an assessment is made of profits or income from a banking or money-lending business, loans which cannot be recovered should be deducted from the assessed profits of such business at the time when such loan can be definitely proved to be irrecoverable. For example, if a Banker has lent out 5 lakhs of rupees and received Rs. 50,000 as interest but has during the same year lost an irrecoverable loan of Rs. 25,000, he should be assessed on Rs. 25,000. Similarly, if the same Banker receiving Rs. 1,00,000 as interest on his loans, suffers a loss of an irrecoverable loan amounting to one lakh during the same year, the income to be assessed to income-tax from the money-lending business in that year will be nil. These examples will apply whether the assessee had previously been assessed to income-tax or not.

This instruction will also apply to the assessment of other traders, where loans have been made in connection with the business and in which the loans are of the nature of the business and the loss is a true trading loss.

The irrecoverable loans in the sense referred to above are sometimes confused with "Bad Debts" but they are of a totally different nature. Money lent out on interest is the stock-in-trade of a money-lender or Banker and the loss of such stock-in-trade can clearly be regarded as a trading loss like the loss of the stock-in-trade of any other trader where the loss is not covered by insurance. In settling claims of this nature the question has always to be considered whether money-lending is or is not a part of the business of the trader in question. The investments of savings or occasional loans made to acquaintances cannot be considered to be loans made in the course of trading.

(h) Depreciation—There is no definition of "Depreciation." The word is used in practice by Accountants in varying senses. Ordinarily it means, wear and tear which cannot be made good by repairs. That is to say, it means the insidious and irreparable decay of the building, machinery, plants, etc.

The rates of depreciation are prescribed in Rule 8 [see Appendix B] and the information that must be furnished to obtain this allowance is set out in Part V of the form of return of income. The buildings, machinery, plant or furniture for which depreciation allowance is claimed must be the property of the assessee and must be used for the purposes of the particular business in the relevant year, the profits or gains of which are being computed. Moreover it can be claimed only in respect of the particular classes of buildings, machinery, plant or furniture which are mentioned in Rule 8. The word "Plant" includes Vehicles, Books, Scientific Apparatus and Surgical Equipments purchased for the purposes of the business, profession or vocation.

No allowance can be claimed in respect of any portion of a building which is used as a residence by the assessee. Buildings belonging to the owner of a business and used by him to accommodate his employees, are buildings used for the purposes of business where the occupation by the employees is subservient to and necessary for the performance of their duties, irrespective of the fact that rent is charged by the owner or not. When machinery is kept ready for use at any moment in a particular factory under an express agreement, from which taxable profits are earned, the machinery can be said to be used for the purposes of business, although it is not actually worked and depreciation can be claimed in respect of such machinery. Depreciation can also be claimed by the owner of a machinery even if it has been leased to another. Where buildings, machinery, plant and furniture are let out on hire, the person who lets them shall be entitled not only to depreciation allowance but also all other allowances in respect of annual repairs, insurance premia and obsolescence.

Depreciation allowance in respect of ocean-going steamers and motor vessels is computed at certain percentage on the "original cost" thereof. The expression 'original cost' includes the cost of freight, pay of Engineers and staff who erect the machinery, put it in working order and carry out experiments to test it. Depreciation in respect of other assets is computed at certain percentage on the 'written down value' thereof. The expression 'written down value' is (i) in the case of assets acquired in the previous year, the actual cost to the assessee and (ii) in the case of assets acquired before the previous year, the actual cost to him less all depreciation actually allowed to him in the earlier years.

As the scope of "obsolescence allowance" was extended to buildings at the time of demolition or destruction, an assessee might, for example, occupy a building as his residence for many years and when the time to scrap it was drawing near, bring it into use for the purposes of business, and scrap or demolish the building a year later to get an allowance of the whole of the difference between the original cost and one year's depreciation allowance. To safeguard Government revenue "written down value" in the case of building would now mean the actual cost to the assessee less the depreciation that would have been allowable at the existing rates and on the diminishing value basis as if the building had been used for the purposes of business from the date of its acquisition.

Where an assessee owns a number of business and the profits and gains of any one of them are insufficient to cover the full depreciation admissible on the buildings, machinery, plant etc. used for the purpose of that particular business, the excess depreciation can be set off against income which has accrued to the assessee from other heads of income. Where, however, full effect cannot be given, the allowance shall be added to the amount of the depreciation allowance of that year and so on for succeeding years. In carrying forward depreciation, losses should be set off before depreciation, consequently the carry forward of depreciation is not restricted to six years. The aggregate of depreciation allowances made under the Income-tax Act 1922 or any of the earlier Acts repealed by it or under the Act of 1886 must not in any case exceed the original cost to the assessee.

Where a person succeeds to a business, profession or vocation, the depreciation allowance due to the successor in respect of buildings, machinery etc. taken over by him from his predecessor should be worked out on the basis of the original cost to the successor (not on the cost to the predecessor). The same applies where the person is not a successor but merely a purchaser. The successor is not entitled to take advantage of the unabsorbed depreciation which his predecessor might have been entitled to.

With a view to stimulating industrial activity additional depreciation of buildings and machinery was provided for in the assessment year 1946-47. In the case of a new building the erection of which was begun and completed during 1st April 1946 to 31st March 1952 the additional depreciation was 15% of the cost and in other cases of building the rate was 10%. In the case of machinery or plant the rate was 20% of the cost. This initial additional depreciation should not be taken into account for the purpose of determining written down value in the succeeding year but it should, however, be taken into account for calculating "obsolescence" allowance.

To give some more relief to the business community the allowance for depreciation was doubled in respect of buildings and machineries installed after 31st March 1948. Owing to the abolition of capital gains tax with effect from 1st April 1948, it is apprehended that old assets might be transferred at enhanced prices with the main purpose of reducing tax liabilities. To safeguard against such transfer of assets from one business to another it has been provided that the concession of "double allowance" would not be extended to buildings and machineries which had, at any time prior to 1st April 1948, been used in a business. This concession of "double allowance" is admissible in addition to the extra allowance for double or multiple shift-working and the initial depreciation allowance admissible for the first year of erection of the building or installation of machinery. To illustrate, suppose a new machinery of a paper mill was installed on 1st April 1948 the cost incurred being Rs. 10,00,000. The amount of depreciation allowance admissible for the year 1948-49 (assessment year 1949-50) would be:

- (a) 20% of Rs. 10,00,000 being initial depreciation which would not be deductible from Rs. 10,00,000 for determining written down value for the subsequent year, plus
- (b) 20% (10% + 10%) of Rs. 10,00,000 being double allowance which would be deductible from Rs. 10,00,000 for determining written down value.

The total depreciation allowance for the assessment year 1949-50 would be Rs. 4,00,000 and the written down value of the machinery for the subsequent year would be Rs. 8,00,000 (Rs. 10,00,000 less Rs. 2,00,000).

(i) Obsolescence—Ordinarily the word is used to signify the unsuitability of a machinery or plant on account of its being out of date. Whenever any machinery or plant is sold or discarded for whatever reason, a deduction in respect of obsolescence can be claimed; and the amount to be allowed is the excess of the written down value over the sale price or the scrap value as the case may be provided the assets have been written off in the books of the assessee. Where the sale price exceeds the written down value, this excess will be deemed to be profits of the year in which the sale takes place and will be included in the computation of income of that year.

In the assessment year 1946-47 the scope of this allowance was widened to include buildings and to permit the allowance being given in respect of a building, machinery or plant not only when it is sold or discarded but also when it is demolished or destroyed. The difference between the written down value (for this purpose the written down value is arrived by deducting also the initial additional depreciation allowance, if any) and the sale or scrap value is allowed as a deduction. But if any insurance, salvage or compensation moneys are received in respect of these assets, these moneys, if they are less than written down value minus the scrap value, will be deducted from the allowance admissible and, if they are greater, the excess will be taxed to the extent of the difference between the original cost and the written down value less the scrap value. As the clause stood before amendment, if machinery or plant was sold for more than its original cost, the excess over the original cost was taxable. As amended, the excess over the original cost will not be taxable in future.

(j) Dead or useless animals—A deduction is allowed in respect of animals used for the purposes of the business, which have died or become permanently useless. But animals which are the stock-in-trade of the business should not be included in this head. The amount allowable is the difference between the original cost of the assessee and the amount, if any, realised in respect of the carcasses of the animals, and is admissible whether the animals are replaced or not.

(k) Scientific Research—In the assessment year 1946-47 the Act was amended to allow contributions made to Scientific Research Institutions (See Appendix D) and expenditures incurred on Scientific Research related to the business or the class of business carried on by the assessee. The expenditure is admissible irrespective of whether it is of a revenue or capital nature—the latter being allowable in five annual instalments if incurred by the assessee himself. Retrospective effect was given to this allowance from the assessment year 1945-46. The allowance must relate to capital expenditures incurred by an assessee for carrying out Scientific Research in five consecutive “previous years” commencing with the “previous year” in which the expenditure was incurred or if the expenditure was incurred within three years (year here means a period of 12 months) prior to the date of commencement of the business, in five consecutive “previous years” beginning with the year in which the business was commenced.

(l) Miscellaneous deductions—Any expenditure (not being in the nature of capital expenditure or personal expenses of the assessee) laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purposes of business, profession or vocation, should be allowed as a deduction from the computation of income under this head. Whether a particular expenditure has been incurred solely to earn the profits or whether it is capital expenditure depends in each case on the nature of the business, commercial practice, the nature of the expenditure and other relative circumstances. But unless the expenditure is incurred for the purposes of the business, profession or vocation, profits of which are being assessed, it cannot be allowed. Moreover, the outlay in respect of which the deduction is claimed must be an expenditure incurred for the purposes of the business and not for a mere sharing of the profits, as assessability to income-tax is attached as soon as profits accrue, and the Government is not concerned with the destination or application of the profits. A payment out of profits and conditional on profits being earned, cannot actually be described as a payment to earn profits. On the other hand, expenditure in the course of the trade which is unremunerative or in respect of an activity the income of which is not taxable is none-the-less a proper deduction if wholly and exclusively made for the purposes of the trade. It does not require a receipt on the credit side to justify the deduction.

The following instructions on the admissibility of certain expenses may be noted in this connection:—

(i) Contributions to private provident funds by an employer are allowable if the fund is constituted as an irrevocable trust and if no part of the employer's contributions can be recovered by him. If the fund remains in the hands or under the control of the employer, no contributions by him would be allowed as a deduction, but actual payments made to employees leaving the service would be allowed in the year in which such payments are made, so far as such payments relate to the employer's contributions only.

(ii) Contributions to private superannuation funds by an employer are also allowable, if the fund is constituted as an irrevocable trust and if no part of the employer's contribution can be recovered by him. If such a fund remains in the hands or under the control of the employer no contributions by him will be allowed as a deduction but actual payments of pension to ex-employees or to their widows or children should be allowed as a deduction when the pensionary payment is a fixed and recurring one. No claims on account of pensions will however, be entertained when they are paid to persons who have or who at any time had a share of interest in the business, profession or vocation.

(iii) Premia paid by an employer to cover the risk of liability to compensate any of his employees for injuries under the Workmen's Compensation or Accident Insurance Act should be treated as business expenses and allowed as a deduction in assessing income from business.

(iv) The following principle should be observed in dealing with claims that bonafide expenditure for the welfare of the employees of a business should be allowed as a business expense. No contributions towards expenditure incurred by outside bodies which may benefit the employees of a Company or firm incidentally with members of the general public, should be allowed, such as contributions for the support of clubs, recreation grounds, religious institutions, dispensaries, hospitals, schools and the like. If, on the other hand, an assessee maintains a school or a dispensary solely for the benefit of his employees reasonable expenditure on the upkeep of such an institution should be allowed as a business expense. Similarly, expenditure incurred in the maintenance of a conservancy staff employed to keep the surroundings of the dwellings of the employees of a concern in a sanitary condition should be allowed. In no case, however, should any capital expenditure be allowed, such as, for example, the amounts expended on the construction of latrines, drains, water-works or hospitals.

(v) Sums embezzled by an employee are an admissible charge against the business of his employer.

(vi) Assessee sometimes receive from their constituents payments intended to cover Railway expenses, cooly charges, etc., which they have to incur in the course of their business. When payments are made out of the sums and are debited specifically to constituents they may be allowed as deductions from the assessable income, without insisting on strict proof of payment by the production of vouchers, provided that it is reasonably certain that the payments have been made.

(vii) Indian traders and businessmen charge their customers or clients a small fee on each transaction—for example, so many pies on each bag of some commodity sold—the proceeds of which are supposed to be devoted to various religious, charitable or educational purposes. Such customary subscriptions by clients and customers for religious or charitable (including educational) purpose, and the corresponding expenditure by the assessee, should be left out of account altogether in computing the taxable income provided that the Income-tax Officer is reasonably satisfied that the sums in question are really applied by the assessee ultimately (and not necessarily in the year of collection) to the object for which they were ostensibly collected. No attempt should be made to separate these subscriptions from the trade expenses of the customers or clients to whom they are charged and to disallow them as not being trade expenses.

(viii) Sums received for political purpose should be included in income and the corresponding expenditure on these purposes should not be allowed as a deduction from the taxable income.

(ix) Strictly speaking, the cost of audits and similar operations conducted specially for income-tax purposes whether in connection with appeals or with revision petitions cannot be allowed as a deduction from taxable profits.

The reason for this is, of course, that whereas an audit or similar operation conducted in the ordinary course of business is properly treated as a "business expense," it is clear that one conducted purely in connection with Income-tax proceedings cannot be said to be incurred solely for the purpose of earning the profits or gains liable to income-tax. Since, however, there may be difficulty in individual cases in determining whether an audit or similar operation has been conducted wholly or partly for business purposes and, in the latter case, what portion of the expenditure incurred in connection with it can properly be treated as a "business expense," it has been decided that audit or other accountancy services in connection with an assessee's accounts for the previous year rendered before his return of income is made, if such a return is made on the due date, or within any extended period allowed by the Income-tax Officer for its submission, should be treated as work done for ordinary business purposes and therefore the expenditure incurred thereon should be regarded as an admissible deduction in computing taxable income. But expenses connected with subsequent proceedings before the higher authorities in Appeal, Review or High Court will not be allowed.

(x) The premiums received by a Company on issue of shares are capital receipts and the cost of issuing shares is capital expenditure.

[Regarding "earned income" allowance see Chap. X §7.]

§3—Inadmissible expenses.—The following allowances are not admissible in computing the income under this head :

(a) Any sum paid on account of a cess, rate or tax levied on the profits or gains of any business, profession or vocation or assessed as a proportion or otherwise on the basis of any such profits or gains.

(b) A payment which is chargeable under the head "Salaries" if it is payable without India unless tax has been paid thereon or deducted therefrom under Section 18.

(c) Interest, salary, commission or remuneration paid by a firm to any partner of the firm, whether the firm is registered or unregistered.

(d) A payment to a provident fund or other fund established for the benefit of the employees unless effective arrangements have been made to secure proper deduction of tax from any payments made from the fund which are chargeable under the head "Salaries".

§4—Rules for computing profits and gains of Tea Companies—Income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller in India shall be computed as if it were income derived from business, and 40 per cent. of such income shall be deemed to be income, profits and gains liable to tax; provided that in computing such income an allowance shall be made in respect of the cost of planting bushes in replacement of bushes that have died or become permanently useless in an area already planted unless such area has previously been abandoned. Consequently in assessing the profits of tea companies there will be allowed, as a charge against profits the whole of the cost of the upkeep (e.g., weeding and draining) of extensions of the estate which are not in bearing but no capital expenditure in connection with such extensions. Once the cultivation has begun with the completion of the planting, the annual cost of the upkeep of such extensions should be allowed as a business expense even though the estate is not in bearing.

The question as to what is capital or revenue expenditure in respect of tea gardens is one the answer to which depends on certain general principles. The cost of the upkeep (e.g., weeding and draining) of an area that is not in bearing may be charged to revenue. While expenditure on the maintenance of an area that has not reached maturity may be classified as revenue expenditure, any income derived from the sale of tea at this stage is on the same footing as income from the sale of tea at any other stage and should be taken into account in computing the taxable income of the concern.

Under Section 15 of the Indian Tea control Act 1933, the owner of a tea estate may transfer his right to obtain export licenses in whole or in part to any party. Where the export or production quotas are transferred by the owner, of a tea estate to which they appertain, the price realised should be treated as if it were income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller, and 40 per cent. of the income derived from the sale of the rights will be held liable to tax. Where, however, a further transfer is made by a person other than the owner of the tea estate to which the quota has been allotted, whether or not such person is himself the owner of a tea estate to which another quota has been allotted, his profits on that transaction cannot in any sense be said to have resulted from the growth by him of tea and will have to be treated as wholly taxable in the assessment of the seller. The same applies to the profits made by an owner of a tea estate out of a transaction in which he buys a quota and uses it for the export of tea grown in an estate not his own (e.g., after manufacturing tea in his factory from green tea grown elsewhere). If a quota is purchased by the owner of another tea estate and is utilised by him for the exportation of tea grown on his own estate, such purchase enables the purchaser to market the product of his own tea estate, and it follows that the cost of buying the quota will have to be debited to the income of the concern before apportionment under Rule 24. Where the quota is purchased by a person who is not the owner of a tea estate or if purchased by the owner of a tea estate is resold by him, or is used by him for the export of tea grown on an estate not his own, the expenditure will be allowed in full in computing the purchaser's profits, which, however, are not covered by Rule 24 and are, therefore, taxable in full.

§5—Rules for computing profits and gains of Insurance Companies—(Schedule to the Act)—Prior to 1939 Insurance Companies were assessed on what was called their surplus income. The assets of the Company and the year's income were added and from the resultant figure the amount of liabilities of the Company as ascertained by actuarial valuation was deducted, and what remained was the surplus income. On a careful examination it was found that this surplus did not by any means represent income, for a large portion of it was only policy-holder's money which was returned to them as bonus. The method of assessment of Insurance Companies was consequently radically altered by the Amendment Act of 1939.

(A) Mode of assessment—Life business—Rules 2 and 3 provide for the greater of the following two amounts (a) and (b) to be taken as the income for assessment purposes of a life insurance business :—

(a) the gross external incomings of the preceding year, (as defined in clause (ii) of Rule 5), Less management expenses of the preceding year (as defined in clause (iii) of Rule 5) and ..

(b) the annual average surplus of the last inter-valuation period before the assessment year, Less one half of the amount paid to or reserved for or expended on behalf of policyholders.

For the purpose of arriving at the amount (a) above the expenses of management are subject to the following maximum :—

In respect of single premium policies.	7½% of the premiums received in the preceding year.
Plus
In respect of policies for which the number of annual premiums received is less than 12	A percentage of first year's premiums received during the preceding year equal to 7½ times the number of such annual premiums and 12% of renewal premiums received during the preceding year.
Plus
In respect of policies for which the number of years during which premiums are payable is less than 12	A percentage of first year's premiums received during the preceding year equal to 7½ times the number of such years and 12% of renewal premiums received during the preceding year.
Plus
In respect of all other policies.	90% of first year's premiums received during the preceding year and 12% of renewal premiums received during the preceding year.

It is important to note that in calculating the amount (b), (i) any expenditure which cannot be allowed under Section 10 must be disallowed; (ii) the deficit or unappropriated surplus of any period preceding the inter-valuation period under consideration must be excluded from the deficit or surplus shown on the face of the actuarial valuation Balance Sheet on the last day of the inter-valuation period; (iii) in the first computation under the rule, in allowing one-half of the amounts paid to or reserved for or expended on behalf of the policyholders no account is to be taken, of any such amount to the extent to which, it is paid out of or is in respect of the unappropriated surplus of a previous intervaluation period. If, for example, the amount of bonus recommended to be distributed is Rs. 3½ lakhs, but the actuarial valuation includes previous unappropriated surplus of Rs. 1 lakh, one-half of the balance of Rs. 2½ lakhs (i.e., Rs. 1¼ lakhs only) is to be allowed as a deduction, and (iv) depreciation of or loss on realisation of securities or other assets and appreciation of or gain on realisation of securities or other assets should be taken into account.

In calculating amount (b) the whole of the interest on tax-free securities of the Central Government is to be deducted from the adjusted surplus of the inter-valuation period under consideration for income-tax purposes only and not for super-tax. The net amount of adjusted annual surplus arrived at after excluding the interest on tax-free securities will represent "the profits and gains of life insurance business" and not the total income of the company. The annual average of the interest on tax-free securities will then have to be added to the above "profits and gains" and super-tax will be leviable on the whole income. Further if the inter-valuation period exceeds 12 months, then credit is to be given against the tax computed on the annual average adjusted surplus, for the amount of the annual average tax deducted at source from Interest on Securities or otherwise paid during the said inter-valuation period.

In computing income under (b) above, tax-free allowance of Rs. 4,500 admissible in respect of unremitted foreign income should be disallowed.

Non-life business.—As regards non-life insurance business, the profits disclosed in the annual accounts (under the Insurance Act 1938) after adjustment on account of expenses not admissible under Section 10 are to be treated as income for assessment purposes. Profits and losses on the realization of investments and depreciation and appreciation of the value of investments are to be taken into account.

In dealing with non-life insurance business (fire, marine, motor-car, etc.) a fair and proper reserve for unexpired risk are to be allowed with proper safeguard to prevent manipulation of accounts. And, where, as not infrequently occurs, the reserve is divided into two parts, the first of which is intended to cover normal unexpired risks and is generally reckoned at a fixed percentage of the premiums and the second is intended to cover exceptional losses from widespread calamities, such a reserve may also be allowed. The following points have to be borne in mind :—(i) All sums on account of unexpired risks, which a company wishes to have treated as expenditure for income-tax or super-tax purposes, must actually be credited to a Fund in the accounts of the company; (ii) they must also be specifically appropriated to meet liabilities under existing contracts; and (iii) the contracts must be with policy holders.

Dividing Societies.—The companies carrying on dividing society or assessment business are in a different position from insurance companies in that they have not to build up funds similar to the Life Assurance Fund of ordinary Life Assurance business, and their profits are not ordinarily ascertainable by actuarial valuation. Some arbitrary method of determining the taxable income of companies transacting this kind of business has been fixed and under Rule 7 of the Schedule this is done by taking 15% of the premium income of the 'previous year'.

Provident Insurance Societies.—Exemptions granted to Provident Insurance Societies which comply with Provident Insurance Societies Act 1912, or which have been exempted from its provisions, were withdrawn by the Income-tax (Amendment) Act, 1924, but Provident Insurance Societies to which the Provident Insurance Societies Act applies, or which have been exempted from its provisions and which were in existence before 1st April 1924 will continue to enjoy the exemptions under Section 4 (3) (iv) & Section 15(1) to which they were entitled under Act XI of 1922 before it was amended by Act XI of 1924. These concessions cannot be claimed by any other Provident Insurance Societies.

(B) Valuation of Securities.—In computing the surplus of a Life Insurance Company an actuary has to consider first the value of its assets in its Life Insurance Fund and then has to deduct from that the liability to pay sums by way of bonus on capital sums on death of policy-holders. In the valuation of the assets he may or may not, according to his practice, make a deduction for the depreciation of the securities which form part of the Fund. That depreciation may be very considerable, in the case of some of the companies in India, it has in fact been very considerable. When he makes the valuation of the liability, first he has to determine what he thinks the life of each policy-holder will be and for that he uses certain mortality tables. Then he has to determine what proportion of the premiums which he is likely to get will be payable in expenses and how much the expenses will amount to. Then he has to take into account the fact that the funds of the company will be earning interest all the time, so that he finally arrives at this liability by taking for each policy the amount he expects to pay away, the amount of premiums and interest he expects to receive and the amount of expenses he is likely to incur. In determining the rate of interest, he may be optimistic or pessimistic. One actuary may on a set of circumstances determine that there was no surplus, but a loss, whereas another actuary more optimistic, may, in fact, determine quite a large surplus. Most of that difference depends on the rate of interest which is adopted in arriving at the liability. In India the rate of interest adopted is normally calculated in this manner. The value of the investments as depreciated is first ascertained. Then the actual yield as a ratio of that value is secondly ascertained, and then that rate, or an average of that rate, with certain deductions which are dictated by prudence, is adopted for the valuation of the liabilities. So long as that basis is adopted there is no harm but it is possible, and in fact in the United Kingdom it has been done and may be done in India for the company not to write off depreciation heavily but to take a rate of interest which is being, calculated by reference to the yield on the depreciated securities. If that is done then the liabilities are overstated relatively to the assets resulting in a deficit, when there should be a surplus or a much smaller surplus than is in fact warranted. To guard against such cases the Income-tax Officers are authorised to make such adjustments to the depreciation or appreciation of securities as is fair and just where the liability has been stated on a basis which is materially inconsistent with the basis on which the securities have been valued.

Note.—Rs. 6,81,084 only has been deducted from the gross external incomes as the total expenses of the management of the Company (i.e., Rs. 9,43,600) is more than the maximum expenses allowable under Rule 2.

CHAPTER IX

HEADS OF INCOME (Continued) INCOME FROM OTHER SOURCES (Section 12).

§1—Scope of the Section—Tax is payable under this head by an assessee in respect of income, profits, and gains of every kind which may be included in his total income and which is not included under the head 'salaries', 'interest on securities', 'income from house properties' or 'profits and gains of business, profession or vocation'. It is obviously a residuary section, and includes the following kinds of income—dividends from Companies; interest on mortgages, loans, fixed deposits and current accounts; ground rents, mine rents, surface rents and royalties; remittances received by resident wife from her non-resident husband; income from leasehold properties and bustee lands.

Income from licences granted to brick-makers to erect brick kilns upon his land and to take away brick earth for making bricks is assessable under this head. Income from the settlement of the right to collect the particular kind of earth in a particular area during a particular season for the purpose of extracting Saltpetre, where it is of a recurring nature is similar to rent and royalties from the letting of coal and other minerals and is liable to be taxed as income from other sources. Income from dramatic troupe maintained by an assessee (other than a hobby) is assessable under this head. Income from Treasury Bills are also assessable under this head.

Income, profits and gains chargeable under this head is computed after making allowance for an expenditure incurred solely for the purpose of earning such income. It must be incurred in the year in respect of which the income, profits and gains are assessable. Capital expenditure and personal expenses of the assessee are, however, not allowed to be deducted under this head. This expenditure is also not admissible in respect of any salary or interest chargeable under the Act, which is payable outside India, unless tax has been paid or deducted at source, except in the case of public loans issued before 1st April 1938.

§2—Dividends from Companies.

(a) Definition [Section 2 (6A)]—For the purposes of Indian Income tax dividend includes several classes of distribution which are not regarded as dividends for the purposes of other Acts. In addition to dividends declared by a Company as such, the following kinds of advantages received by shareholders from Companies are liable to Indian Income-tax :—(i) Distribution of accumulated profits, excluding capital gains arising between 1.4.46 and 31.3.48 capitalised or not, by way of releasing of all or any part of the assets of the company. It may be distributed in cash or in the shape of chattels and bonus shares of the same company or of another company. (ii) Distribution of debentures to the extent to which the company possesses accumulated profits excluding capital gains arising between 1.4.46 and 31.3.48. The question whether the distribution entails the release of any assets of the company or not, does not arise in this case. (iii) Distribution of accumulated profits excluding capital gains arising between 1.4.46 and 31.3.48 on the liquidation of the company. It will be included for the purposes of taxation only if the accumulated profits arose within six years* of liquidation. (iv) Distribution of accumulated profits excluding capital gains arising between 1.4.46 and 31.3.48 by way of the reduction of the ordinary capital. The object of this clause is to prevent the distribution of profits in the guise of reduction of capital and thus to allow the Shareholders to escape Super-tax.

In view of war conditions, a Company did not pay any dividend in cash to its shareholders but issued to them deposit certificates for equivalent amount payable after a certain date with interest. It was held that as there had neither been a release of assets of the Company nor a distribution of the debentures and that as the deposit certificates were something like post-dated cheques or promissory notes, the sum represented by the deposit certificates were, therefore, not liable to be taxed as dividends.

Although the definition includes certain categories of capital receipts as income liable to tax, it does not affect in any way the taxability, in the hands of the Shareholders, of the dividends paid by the company from sources of income not liable to tax, e.g. from agricultural income or from tax-free securities. Consequently the agricultural portion of tea dividends is treated as "No income" in the hands of the shareholders.

Following the Privy Council decision in the case of Raja Kamakshya Narain Singh wherein it was decided that interest on arrears of agricultural rent was not "Agricultural Income", the department has changed its views regarding taxability of tea dividends in the hands of shareholders. It is now argued that the immediate and effective source of a dividend being the profit fund of a Company, and a profit fund not being land, the dividend cannot be regarded as anything but non-agricultural income. From the assessment year 1949-50 the dividend is, therefore, being treated as an independent source of income from investments wholly assessable under Section 12.

(b) Computation of gross dividend. [Section 16(2)]—Dividends shall be deemed to be the income of the year in which they are paid, credited or distributed and shall be increased proportionately by the amount of income-tax (but not super-tax) applicable to the total income of the Company for the year in which it is paid, credited or distributed. If a dividend is paid on 15th April 1947 then it should be deemed to be the income of the year 1947-48 and the dividend should be grossed up at the rate of income-tax applicable to the total income of the paying company on the date of payment. All dividends are treated as taxed at source in the hands of the Company, even when they are paid "free of tax" as such they should proportionately be increased by the amount of income-tax paid by the Company in respect thereof. The amount of dividend received by a shareholder is always "net" and it should be grossed up as follows :—

of income-tax in pies per Rupee and 'P' represents the percentage of the Company's profits which have borne income-tax.

Any sum by which the net dividend is increased shall be treated as a payment of income-tax on behalf of the shareholders and credit shall be given to them therefor in the assessment. Dividends, therefore, are not exempt from income-tax in the hands of the shareholders even if they are paid "free of tax" but the full amount of income-tax appropriate to the dividend is deemed to have been paid on behalf of the shareholders. (See Chap. XIV §4). All that is necessary in such a case is to determine the tax payable on the total income of the shareholder and to give him credit for the tax thus deemed to have been paid on his behalf by the Company, any difference being payable by or refundable to him.

(c) Certificate of Tax paid by the Company (Section 20).—The principal Officer of every Company shall at the time of distribution of dividends furnish to every shareholder a certificate to the effect that the Company has paid or will pay income-tax on the profits which are being distributed. It often happens that the holders of shares authorise their Bankers to collect dividend on their behalf. When they do so, it is the practice of the person distributing the dividend to issue certificates in the name of the Bank for the whole block of shares held by the Bank on behalf of its constituents so that it is not possible for an individual shareholder for whom dividends are collected by his Banker to produce the certificate. The Income-tax Officer in such cases shall accept a certificate from a responsible Officer of the Bank and act upon such certificate as if it were a certificate issued by the Company.

§3—Annuities.—The Income-tax Act does not define what is an annuity. In the ordinary sense it means the purchase of an income involving conversion of capital into a recurring income. Annuities payable by employers to their employees or dependants of ex-employees are taxable under the head

"salaries". But annuities payable under a deed of separation to a wife or accruing under a family arrangement or by way of bequests under a Will are assessable under this residuary section and even when the payments are made on a monthly basis, no income-tax is deductible at source.

Annuities may be purchased under a contract with a Life Assurance Company. In case of a terminable annuity, the annuitant gets back his capital by instalments along with a certain sum of interest. Such interest would of course attract tax under this head but the capital portion of the annuity would not be liable to tax. To explain, suppose 'A' pays ten annual premia of say Rs. 92/- in consideration of an annuity of Rs. 100/- per annum for ten years commencing on the 56th year of his life; in case of death occurring before 65th year of his life, the remaining annuities are payable to his heir. The interest portion of this annuity as certified by the Company would be liable to tax in the hands of the recipient, the capital portion being outside the scope of the Act.

But in the case of an annuity payable whole life, the capital nature of the purchase price vanishes. The sum receivable by the whole life annuitant would have no relation at all to the premia paid by him earlier. Consequently such a contract cannot be treated as identical to an investment producing a return of capital originally invested. The entire amount of the whole life annuity under the circumstances, would be liable to tax. To explain, suppose "B" pays 15 annual premia of say Rs. 90/- in consideration of an annuity of Rs. 100/- per annum, payable whole life on attaining 50th year of his life and ceasing with his death. As his span of life is not known to the Company the annuity may cease at the end of five years or may be continued for 25 years. The entire amount of the annuity in this case would be liable to tax as the capital nature of the repayment cannot be established. In every case therefore the taxability of an annuity depends on whether it is a return of capital by instalments or otherwise.

§4—Bank interest—Interest on current account or on Fixed Deposits with a Bank is assessable under this head. If the assessee maintain more than one account then the total amount of interest should be taxed. If any account is overdrawn, the debit interest should be set off against the credit interest and the net amount should be taxed. In the event of an overdraft being created from purchase of shares and securities then the debit interest should be set off against the income from the relative shares and securities.

Interest on deposits in the Post Office Saving Bank is treated as "No income" and should be excluded from the computation of total income.

CHAPTER X

Computation of total income and the rate of tax.

§1—Previous year [Section 2 (11)]—So far we have discussed how the income is computed under different heads of income, we shall now discuss the period in relation to which the income is ascertained. The tax is payable in respect of the total income of the 'previous year,' the meaning of which is thus of considerable importance. Usually it means the fiscal year i.e. the 12 months ending on the 31st March next preceding the year for which the assessment is to be made. But if the accounts are made up to a date within the said 12 months in respect of a year ending on any date other than 31st March, the assessee can adopt that as his 'previous year.' To illustrate, income of the year ended 31st March 1948 is assessable in 1948-49; if the books of account have been closed on say 31st December 1947 then income for the year ended 31st December 1947 is assessable in 1948-49. Moreover an assessee has the option to have separate previous years for each separate source of income, i.e., he can choose his previous year for his income from 'business' as ending on 31st December, and for his income from 'interest on securities' as ending on 31st March. But once the option has been exercised he cannot change it without the consent of the Income-tax Officer and upon such conditions as the latter may think fit. Ordinarily the Income-tax Officer will not permit the change of the previous year unless he is satisfied that it is sought on substantial grounds other than the avoidance of the tax.

In the case of certain communities whose commercial year is not necessarily an English Calendar year but is a period which expressed in Calendar months varies from year to year and in one year may be slightly over and in another slightly under 12 months. In some cases the Commercial year may even terminate in the month of April. To minimise the difficulties referred to above the Commissioners of Income-tax have been authorised to determine as the 'previous year' in the case of any person, or business,

(a) a commercial year consisting of not less than 11 months and not more than 13 months,

(b) a commercial year ending after the fiscal year but not later than 30th April.

In the case of a business, profession or vocation newly set up in the financial year preceding the year for which the assessment is to be made, the 'previous year' is the period from the setting up of the business, profession or vocation to the 31st day of March following or if the accounts of the assessee are made up to some other date than the 31st day of March, then at the option of the assessee the period from the date of the setting up of the business, profession or vocation to this other date. If however this other date does not fall between the setting up of the business, profession or vocation and the next following 31st day of March it will be deemed that there was no 'previous year.'

To illustrate, if a business is set up on 1st July 1948 and the accounts are made up to 30th June 1949, the assessee can choose to have the year ended 30th June as his 'previous year' and in such circumstances there will be deemed to have been no 'previous year' for assessment for the year

1949-50, the profits for the year ended 30th June 1949 being taken as profits of the 'previous year' for assessment for the year 1950-51. If, however, the assessee elect the calendar year to be taken as 'previous year' the profits for the period 1st July 1948 to 31st December 1948 will be taken as the profits of the 'previous year' for assessment for 1949-50. If the assessee makes no choice the 'previous year' for 1949-50 will be 1st July 1948 to 31st March 1949.

When the assessee is a partner of a firm, the 'previous year' in respect of his share in the firm shall be 'previous year' of the firm itself. But in respect of his other sources of income he can have a separate 'previous year.'

§2—Method of Accounting (Section 13)—Profits and gains of business, profession or vocation and income from 'other sources' shall be computed in accordance with the method of accounting regularly followed by the assessee. No uniform method of accounting is prescribed for all tax-payers alike. Every assessee may, so far as possible, adopt such form and system of accounting as is best suited for his own purpose. Broadly speaking there are two main systems of keeping accounts. Firstly the cash basis system, where a record is kept of actual receipts and actual payments, entries being made only when money is actually collected or disbursed. It is probably unusual for a trader to ascertain his profits on this system. If however he does so the difference in the value of his opening and closing stocks must be taken into account when computing the year's profits. Secondly, the mercantile accounting system under which a profit and loss account is maintained and a comparison is made of the value of opening and closing stocks. Under this latter system entries are recorded in the accounts on the date not of receipt or disbursement of money but on the date of pecuniary transactions irrespective of the date of payment.

The method of accounting regularly followed by an assessee for the purposes of computing income from business, profession, or vocation or other sources should be followed for determining his profits for income-tax purposes. It is a practice among certain merchants to prepare their accounts on the basis of the mercantile accounting system in respect of transaction between themselves and members of their own community, but on the basis of cash payments in the case of transactions between themselves and other customers. Provided that the system is continuously employed and if taking one year with another the full income is shown on a consistent basis, it should be followed for income-tax purposes. Again there are cases where various branches of a business are only closed once in three or five years and where the account of the branches are not annually incorporated in the head-quarter's business account. In such a case it might be possible to assess either on the average annual profits of the branches as disclosed by the accounts last filed or on the actual profits brought to account owing to particular branches closing in particular years.

Where no method of accounting has regularly been followed or where the method followed is such that in the opinion of the Income-tax Officer, income, profits or gains cannot properly be deduced therefrom, then the computation shall be made on such basis as the Income-tax Officer may think fit. The computation should, of course, be based on reasonable materials though the estimate may only be a rough one.

§3—Total income—Under the Indian Income-tax Act, tax is levied in respect of the total income of the previous year. The 'total income' determines the rate or rates of tax applicable to successive slices of income though certain parts thereof may be exempt on one ground or another i.e. interest on tax-free securities, premia paid for life assurance etc. Before an item can be included in 'total income' it must be in the nature of income, profits or gains. Consequently total income does not include any item which is specially exempt from tax. But it should include in addition to income on which tax is payable by the assessee directly, items taxed at source on his behalf as also items of income which really belong to him though nominally to others (i.e. income of wife, minor children, etc.). We have discussed earlier in detail the different classes of income which are not liable to tax or are only partially liable. Total income being so determined the assessee's liability to tax and the rate at which he should pay are fixed by the annual Finance Act.

§4—Set off and carry forward of loss (Section 24)—In computing the total income of an assessee, loss under any head of income should be set off against income from any other head. To illustrate, if there be any minus income say under property, it can be set off against the plus income say under interest on securities. If the resultant figure is still minus, the assessment should be at nil.

Different businesses do not constitute different heads under the Income-tax Act. All business wherever carried on constitute one head and in order to determine what are the profits and gains of "business" under Section 10, an assessee is entitled to show all his profits and set off against those profits losses incurred by him under the same head. Losses incurred in a business, profession or vocation, may, if they cannot be set off against income from other heads of the same year, be carried forward and set off against the profits and gains, if any, of the assessee from the same business, profession, or vocation of the following year. It should be noted however, that losses which have been brought forward from the previous year cannot be set off against any other source of income of the following year or against income from any other business, profession or vocation. They can only be set off against income from the same business, profession or vocation. Consequently, if that particular business, profession or vocation has been discontinued, the right to set off the loss, which has been brought forward from the previous year, will automatically be forfeited. The period of carrying forward the losses is restricted to six years but in the transitional period it will gradually be extended as follows :—

Col. I. Profits of the accounting period ended on	Col. II. Loss determined in the assessment year	Col. III. Assessments against which the loss in column II can be set off

31st March 1944	1944-45	1945-46, 1946-47, 1947-48, 1948-49, 1949-50, 1950-51

Although business loss can be carried forward for six years, unabsorbed depreciation can be carried forward for any number of years till it is fully written off. Consequently if business loss has been arrived at say, Rs. 1,00,000 after charging depreciation say, for Rs. 30,000 then Rs. 70,000 will be carried forward for six years while Rs. 30,000 will be carried forward for more than six years until it can fully be written off against business income of the subsequent years. Provisions regarding carrying forward of losses incurred by registered firms and unregistered firms have been discussed in detail in Chapter IV § 5. Where however, a change has occurred in the constitution of a firm or where there has been a succession to a business, profession, or vocation, the person actually incurring the loss is entitled to set off his share of loss, provided the firm is a registered one, against his income from other sources for the same year, but he is not entitled to carry forward the loss as he will no longer have any income from the same business, profession or vocation. Partners of unregistered firms can neither set off their share of loss against their income from other sources for the same year nor have they any right to carry forward their share of loss against their business income of subsequent years.

Thus, if a registered partnership consisting of A, B & C, is re-constituted, A retiring and D coming into the partnership, A by leaving the firm forfeits the right to carry forward the loss made by A, B & C, but B, C & D, do not inherit this loss and cannot claim to set off against their shares of future profits, the share of loss incurred by A, B can carry forward his own share of the loss made by A, B & C, while C can carry forward his share. It should be noted of course that A's right to set off his share of loss against his income from other sources for the same year, as distinct from his right of carrying forward and setting off against his income from other sources for subsequent years, remains unaffected. Similarly if E is succeeded in a business by F, and E has incurred losses, he forfeits the carry forward of losses by transferring the business to F, who however cannot claim to set off against his profits the losses incurred by E. E's right to set off loss against his income from other sources for the same year will however remain unaffected.

§5—Rate of Income-tax.

Indian Income-tax Act contemplates an annual Finance Act fixing the rate of tax in relation to the total income of the previous year. Income-tax is thus an annual tax not only in the sense that it is imposed annually by the Legislature, but also in the sense that it is annual in its collection. Although it was originally imposed as a temporary tax, the Act regulating its collection have always been so drawn as to expire automatically at the end of the period of such imposition. The period being for a fiscal year only, the Income-tax Act provides that if on the 1st day of April in any year the Finance Act is not passed, the rates imposed by the previous Finance Act or the rates proposed in the pending bill whichever is advantageous to the assessee, should be levied.

The rates are levied under "Slab system" by which successive slices of total income are charged at progressively higher rates, the first slice bearing no tax whatsoever. Different slabs being liable to tax at different rates, an average rate of tax is determined by dividing the amount of tax calculated by the amount of total income, reduced by earned income allowance, if any. Rebate admissible in respect of provident fund contribution, life assurance premia etc., is then calculated at this average rate. The principle adopted is to calculate the tax on the "total income" of the assessee minus earned income allowance, if any, and to levy that portion of it which the taxable income bears to the "total income" minus earned income allowance, if any. The amount of tax payable by a non-resident who is a British subject is determined on the same principle by calculating the amount of tax payable on the "total world income" and levying that portion of it which the taxable income bears to the "total world income". In the case of other non-residents however, income-tax is payable at the maximum rate (the residents being taxed, of course, in the sliding scale).

The rates which are in force with effect from the assessment year 1946-47 are as follows :—

A. In the case of every individual, Hindu Undivided Family, unregistered firm and other Association of persons, not being a case to which paragraphs B or C applies—

	Rate—pies per Rupee
	Assessment years 1946-47 to 1948-49	Assessment year 1949-50	Assessment year 1950-51
on the 1st Rs. 1,500 of total income	Nil	Nil	Nil
" , next , , 3,500 " , , "	12	9	9
" , , " , 5,000 " , , "	24	21	21
" , , " , 5,000 " , , "	42	42	36
" , , balance of total income	60	60	48

Provided that in the assessment year 1950-51—

(i) No income-tax shall be payable on a total income which (before deduction of earned income allowance) is less than Rs. 3,600. If the total income be Rs. 3,500 income-tax payable shall be nil although income-tax on Rs. 2,000 @ 9 pies per Rupee is Rs. 93-12. The limit of Rs. 3,600 is increased to Rs. 7,200 if the assessee is a Hindu Undivided Family, having at least 2 members of more than 18 years old, neither of whom is a lineal descendant of the other.

(ii) The income-tax payable shall not exceed half the amount by which the total income (before deduction of earned income allowance) exceeds Rs. 3,600. If the total income be Rs. 3,700 income-tax payable on Rs. 2,200 @ 9 pies per Rupee is Rs. 103-2 but the amount shall be restricted to half of Rs. 100 i.e. Rs. 50.

(iii) The income-tax payable on the total income as reduced by earned income allowance shall not exceed either,

(a) a sum bearing to half the amount by which the total income (before deduction of earned income allowance) exceeds Rs. 3,600 the same proportion as such reduced total income bears to the unreduced total income, or

(b) the income-tax payable on the income so reduced at the rates specified above, whichever is less.

If the total income (being salary) be Rs. 3,700 income-tax payable on Rs. 2,960 (Rs. 3,700 less earned income allowance of Rs. 740) is Rs. 68-7. (9 pies per Rupee on Rs. 2,960 less Rs. 1,500 i.e. Rs. 1,460), but the amount shall be restricted to  $\frac{1}{2}$  of Rs. 100  $\times \frac{2960}{3700}$  or Rs. 40 only.

But, if the total income be Rs. 3,800 then income-tax payable shall be calculated on Rs. 3,040 (Rs. 3,800 less earned income allowance of Rs. 760). Income-tax on Rs. 1,540 (Rs. 3,040 less Rs. 1,500) at 9 pies per Rupee is Rs. 72-3.

B. In the case of every Company—

	Rate—pies per Rupee
	Assessment years 1946-47 to 1949-50	Assessment year 1950-51
On the whole of total income	60	48

Provided that (for the assessment year 1950-51) in the case of a Company which declares and pays dividends within India or deducts super-tax from dividends paid to non-residents—

(a) Where the total income, as reduced by  $6\frac{1}{2}$  annas in the rupee and by the amount, if any, exempt from income-tax exceeds the amount of any dividends (including dividends payable at a fixed rate) declared in respect of the whole or part of the previous year assessable in 1950-51 and no order has been made under Section 23A(1), a rebate shall be allowed at the rate of one anna per rupee on the amount of such excess.

If the total income of the Company for the year ended 31st March 1950 amounts to Rs. 80,000 and the dividends declared for the relative year amount to Rs. 27,500, then the amount of income-tax payable by the Company for the assessment year 1950-51 shall be calculated as follows :—

Total Income	Rs. 80,000
Less : $6\frac{1}{2}$ As. per Rupee on total Income	32,500
	Rs. 47,500
Less : Dividends declared	27,500
Undistributed Income	Rs. 20,000

Income-tax @ 48 pies per Rupee on total Income of Rs. 80,000	Rs. 20,000
Less : Rebate @ 12 pies per Rupee on undistributed Income of Rs. 20,000	1,250
Net Income-tax payable	Rs. 18,750

(b) Where the amount of dividends referred to clause (a) above exceeds the total income as reduced by  $6\frac{1}{2}$  annas in the rupee and by the amount, if any, exempt from income-tax, there shall be charged on the total income an additional income-tax equal to the sum, if any, by which the aggregate amount of income-tax actually borne by such excess (hereinafter referred to as "the excess dividend") fall short of the amount calculated at the rate of 5 annas per rupee on the excess dividend.

For the purpose of (b) above, the aggregate amount of income-tax already borne by the excess dividend shall be determined as follows :—

(1) The excess dividend shall be deemed to be out of the whole or such portion of the undistributed profits of one or more years immediately preceding the previous year as would be just sufficient to cover the amount of the excess dividend and as have not likewise been taken into account to cover an excess dividend of a preceding year;

(2) Such portion of the excess dividend as is deemed to be out of the undistributed profits of each of the said years shall be deemed to have borne tax,—

- (i) if an order has been made under Section 23A(1) in respect of the undistributed profits of that year at the rate of 5 annas in the rupee, and
- (ii) in respect of any other year, at the rate applicable to the total income of the Company for that year reduced by the rate at which rebate, if any, was allowed on the undistributed profits.

If the total income of the company for the year ended 31st March 1950 amounts to Rs. 80,000 and the dividends declared for the relative year amount to Rs. 62,500, the excess dividend amounting to Rs. 15,000 (Rs. 62,500 less Rs. 47,500) is liable to additional income-tax at the rate of 1 anna in the rupee if the amount of income-tax actually borne by the Company had been at the rate of 4 annas in the rupee. But if the amount of income-tax actually borne by the Company had been at the rate of 5 annas in the rupee, then no additional income-tax is payable by the Company for the assessment year 1950-51.

C. In the case of every Local Authority and in every case in which income-tax is to be charged at the maximum rate—

The system of 'deduction of income-tax at source' as in the case of interest on securities and salaries and of 'taxation at source' as in the case of dividends, gives rise to much complication in calculating the amount of tax payable when the rates are changed year to year. To avoid numerous adjustments the Finance Acts provide that the amount of income-tax payable by an assessee other than a company in respect of income from 'Salaries, interest on securities and dividends' should be calculated at the rates levied in the accounting year and in respect of income from the remaining sources, it should be calculated at the rates levied in the assessment year. It is explained fully in the illustrations.

§6—Pay-as-you-earn—[Section (18A)]—The Act was amended in the fiscal year 1944-45 making provision for collection of income-tax and super-tax in respect of those sources of income on which tax is not deductible at source i.e. income from house properties, business, profession, vocation and other sources. If the last assessed total income of an assessee exceed Rs. 6,000 and include any income other than salary and interest on securities, then he will be liable to pay quarterly (15th June, 15th September, 15th December and 15th March), income-tax and super-tax in respect of the “untaxed income”. The tax shall be calculated proportionately at the rates in force in the financial year in which the assessee is required to pay. The year in respect of which the tax is to be paid is his own “previous year” for the next year’s assessment. Thus if his year end on the 31st December, he is to pay the tax in advance in 1944-45 on the basis of his last assessed total income, and when the assessment for 1945-46 in respect of his income for the year ended 31st December 1944 is made he will be credited with the advance tax paid in 1944-45. Simple interest at 2% per annum from the date of advance payment to the date of regular assessment is payable by the Government. If any of the sources of income in respect of which the advance payment is demanded by the Department ceases or if the assessee estimate a reduced income from any of those “untaxed sources” then he is at liberty to estimate his own total income for the year and pay tax on that basis. But if his estimate fall short of 80% of tax determined on regular assessment, he is liable to pay a penal interest at 6% per annum on the difference from the first day of January of the financial year in which the tax is paid to the date of regular assessment. No penal interest is, however, payable where the assessee chooses to pay on the basis of his last assessed income even if the tax determined on regular assessment is much greater.

§7—Earned income Allowance [Section 2 (6AA) & 15A]—In the assessment year 1945-46 a distinction was made between incomes that are earned by personal exertion and incomes that are not so earned. Section 7(2) of the Indian Finance Act 1945 provided for an allowance of 1/10th of the ‘earned income' with a maximum of Rs. 2,000 for calculating income-tax but not super-tax, that is, for calculating income-tax 'earned income allowance' is treated as 'no income' and as such is excluded from the computation of total income. Since the concession was not allowed for calculating super-tax, the Finance Act 1946 provided lower rates for 'wholly earned incomes' as distinct from "wholly unearned incomes". The allowance was raised in the assessment year 1946-47 to  $1/5$ th of the 'earned income' with a maximum of Rs. 4,000 (See Illustrations 5 & 9).

The allowance is admissible to an individual, hindu undivided family, unregistered firm or other association of persons. In the case of a registered firm the allowance is admissible to its active partners only as the tax is not payable by the firm on its own behalf. If an unregistered firm is not liable to pay any tax owing to its income being less than the taxable minimum, any partner who is actively engaged in the conduct of the business would be entitled to the earned income allowance appropriate to his share, in his own assessment. It should, however, be carefully noted that the share of income of a partner of an unregistered firm or a member of an association of persons which is includible in his total income, should be treated as "un-earned income" and consequently determined with reference to the total income of the firm or the association and not the income as reduced by the 'earned income allowance' allowed to the firm or the association.

The allowance is admissible in respect of incomes chargeable under "salaries", "profits and gains of business, profession or vocation" and "other sources" derived from personal exertion. Pensions or other allowances on account of past services, and 'annual accretion' in any year to the balance at the credit of an employee participating in a recognised Provident Fund should be treated as "Salary" for the purposes of determining the earned income allowance. In the case of an individual whether the business, profession or vocation is carried on by him or through employees or trustees, the allowance is admissible because for all practical purposes the control and management of the business is in his hands. But no relief will be admissible on the income he receives as a beneficiary where the business is carried on by the trustees. If the individual is a partner in a firm and is actively engaged in the conduct of the business, relief will be allowed on his share of the profits. But if he is not actively engaged in the business, no relief will be allowed. In the case of a hindu undivided family or an unregistered firm the position is similar to that of an individual. An unregistered firm is entitled to the earned income allowance on its total income under the head "business, profession or vocation" irrespective of whether any or all of the partners carry on the business, profession or vocation. Examples of income under the head "other sources" in respect of which earned income allowance is admissible are director's fees, royalty on books received by an author, rent for letting machinery or plant on hire, where the assessee exercise constant supervision.

For the purpose of determining the maximum amount on which rebate in respect of life insurance premium or provident fund contribution is admissible, the "total income" is the amount before deduction of the earned income allowance but the rate at which rebate is to be allowed is the average rate applicable to the total income after deduction of the earned income allowance. (See Illustration 13). In deducting income-tax and super-tax during the year ending 31st March 1949 under Section 18(2) an employer should adjust the "earned income allowance" as per Illustration 31.

§8—Donation for Charitable purposes (Section 15B)—In the assessment year 1948-49 provision was made for exemption of donations made to an institution or a fund which is established in India for charitable purposes and is approved by the Central Government (See Appendix E). The exemption is admissible subject to the following restrictions :—

- (1) The total amount of donations paid to one or more approved institutions should not be less than Rs. 250;
- (2) The maximum amount of the donation is, however, limited in the case of a Company to 5% and in other cases to 10% of total income as reduced by any portion thereof which is otherwise exempt from tax or Rs. 2,50,000 whichever is less;
- (3) In the case of a Company the exemption is applicable only in respect of income-tax but not super-tax. In the case of other assesseees the amount of donation is exempt both from income-tax and super-tax but it is includible in the computation of total income for rate purposes;

- (4) The amount of relief of tax is restricted to half the amount of donation. The relief should be calculated at the average rate of tax as determined in the case of rebate on Life Insurance premium.

§9—Exemption from tax of new industrial undertakings (Section 15C)—To encourage rapid industrialisation of the country, the profits of new industrial undertakings are exempted from paying income-tax and super-tax for five years beginning with the assessment year 1949-50 under certain conditions. The undertakings must not be formed by splitting or reconstructing an old business concern but newly set up employing more than 50 persons and producing articles after 31st March 1948 with the help of electrical energy or any other form of energy which is mechanically transmitted and is not directly generated by human agency. The exemption of profits is up to 6% of the Capital employed in the business. The exempted income should, however, be included in the total income for the purpose of determining rates of income-tax and super-tax applicable in respect of other incomes. Dividends paid by a Company out of exempted profits, would also be exempt in the hands of shareholders in the same proportion as the exempted profits bear to the total profits of the company.

CHAPTER XI

SUPER TAX

§1—Scope of Taxation (Section 55)—Super-tax is an additional duty of Income-tax payable by an Individual, Hindu Undivided Family, Company, Local Authority, Unregistered firm and Association of persons. We have discussed in Chapter II the different categories of income which are liable to super-tax or otherwise exempted. Super-tax is payable on a scale of graduated rates just as in the case of Income-tax. It is however payable by Companies and Local Authorities at a flat rate on their entire income.

Although Super-tax is an additional duty of income-tax, Super-tax payable by Companies has got some special characteristics. The Government of India Act, 1935 [Sections 138, 139 and 311 (2)] provides that it should be a "Corporation tax", i.e. a tax levied on Companies as such and not an income-tax, though calculated with reference to income and treated as income-tax for the purpose of a Double Taxation Relief claim by a Company. It is entirely a Federal Source of revenue and is excluded from the proceeds of income-tax which are distributed to the Provinces under the Niemyar Award. Though Company super-tax is a Corporation tax it is not allowed as a deduction in computing the profits of the Company for income-tax purposes. It is paid on behalf of the Companies themselves and not on behalf of the share-holders and to which in consequence, the refund provision will not apply. Where dividends are received by a Company from another Company which has itself paid super-tax on its profits, super-tax is charged again in the hands of the recipient Company, except in the case of Investment Trust Companies which are specially exempted in this respect.

Hindu Undivided Families are treated for the purposes of super-tax as separate assesseees. Registered firms are not assessed to super-tax but the partners are assessed to it, if any, in relation to their total income including partnership profits. Unregistered firms and other associations of persons are also treated as separate assesseees. Where, however, an unregistered firm itself is not assessed to super-tax, its assessable income being less than Rs. 25,000, or where it has been assessed as a registered firm under Section 23(5)(b) super-tax is payable by each partner of the firm individually on his share and not by the firm. Similarly, members of an association of persons will be liable to super-tax on the portions of income which they are entitled to receive from such an association only if it has not been charged to super-tax.

§2—Rates of Super-tax—Rates of super-tax are fixed annually by the Finance Acts, in relation to the total income of the previous year. The rates which are in force with effect from the assessment year 1946-47 are as follows :—

D. In the case of every Company—

Assessment year 1946-47.—The rate was fixed at one anna in the Rupee. To discourage excessive distribution of dividends a sliding scale of additional super-tax was introduced in respect of dividends declared in excess of 5% of the capital of the Company. A rebate at the rate of one anna in the Rupee was provided for Life Insurance Companies which in effect meant that these Companies were not liable to pay super-tax.

Assessment year 1947-48.—The rate was increased to two annas in the Rupee and the sliding scale was still more tightened up to discourage the dissipation of a Company's resources in paying excessive dividends. The Life Insurance Companies continued to pay no super-tax as the rebate was also increased to two annas in the Rupee.

Assessment year 1948-49.—The rate was further increased to three annas in the Rupee with a proviso that a rebate of one anna in the Rupee will be allowed to those Companies which declare their dividends in India and deduct super-tax from dividends payable to non-residents. The sliding rates of additional super-tax were abolished in this year. In the case of Life Insurance Companies the rebate at two annas in the Rupee continued which in effect meant that these Companies were not liable to pay super-tax if they declared their dividends in India and deducted super-tax from dividends payable to non-residents.

Assessment year 1949-50.—The rate was again increased to four annas in the Rupee with a proviso that—

- (i) a rebate of three annas in the Rupee will be given to a public company having total income of less than Rs. 25,000 and declaring its dividend in India and deducting super-tax from dividends payable to non-residents;
- (ii) a rebate of two annas in the Rupee will be given to a company having total income of more than Rs. 25,000 which declares dividends in India and deducts super-tax from dividends payable to non-residents;
- (iii) a rebate of one anna in the Rupee will be given to a public company shares of which are offered for sale in a recognised Stock Exchange and which is not entitled to any rebate under items (i) or (ii).

In addition to the above rebates Life Insurance Companies were allowed a further rebate of two annas in the Rupee.

Assessment year 1950-51.—The rate was further raised to four and half annas in the Rupee. The rebates continued at the old rates which in effect meant four rates of super-tax for Companies as per below—

- (i)  $1\frac{1}{2}$  annas in the Rupee—A “public” Company (Indian or non-Indian) having total income of less than Rs. 25,000 which declares and pays dividends within the territorial jurisdiction of India excluding the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Note:—Companies whose total income exceeds Rs. 25,000 but does not exceed Rs. 29,545 will be eligible for the marginal relief. The tax will be Rs. 2,343-12 plus half the amount by which the total income exceeds Rs. 25,000.

- (ii)  $2\frac{1}{2}$  annas in the Rupee—
  - (a) A non-“public” Company (Indian or non-Indian) which irrespective of its total income, declares and pays dividends in India.
  - (b) A “public” Company (Indian or non-Indian) having a total income of more than Rs. 29,545 and which declares and pays dividends in India.
- (iii)  $3\frac{1}{2}$  annas in the Rupee—Any “public” Company which does not declare and pay dividends in India.
- (iv)  $4\frac{1}{2}$  annas in the Rupee—Any non-“public” Company which does not declare and distribute dividends in India.

The rebate of two annas in the Rupee allowed to Life Insurance Companies in the preceding year was allowed to continue this year.

§3—Deduction of tax at source (Section 18)—Normally super-tax is levied and collected directly from the assessee. But it should be deducted at source in respect of the following: (a) Salaries—If the estimated total annual salary of an employee exceed Rs. 25,000 the employer should deduct super-tax at the rates ruling in the year of payment. (b) Dividends, interest (excluding interest on securities), rent, royalty, commission, brokerage, etc. payable to a person residing outside India—Super-tax should be deducted at the direction of and at the rate determined by the Income-tax Authorities but when no such direction is received by the payer from the Authorities it should be deducted at the rate applicable to the amount payable; i.e. if the recipient is an 'Individual' it should be deducted on the excess over Rs. 25,000 of such payments and if the recipient is a "Company" it should be deducted even if the amount payable be one rupee only. (See Chapter XV §1).

The system of "deduction of super-tax at source" as in the case of salaries, gives rise to much complication in calculating the amount of super-tax payable when the rates are changed year to year. To avoid adjustments, the Finance Acts provide that the amount of super-tax payable by an assessee other than a Company in respect of income from "Salaries" on which super-tax has been or might have been deducted under the provisions of Section 18(2) (i.e. when it is more than Rs. 25,000) should be calculated at the rates levied in the accounting year and in respect of income from the remaining sources it should be calculated at the rates levied in the assessment year.

Illustration 33.—Calculate the amount of tax payable by an assessee in the following cases assuming that he is Resident and Ordinarily Resident in India.

CHAPTER XII

ASSESSMENTS AND APPEALS.

§1—Normal Assessment [Section 23(1) & (3)]—Towards the end of April every year the Income-tax Authorities give notice under Section 22(1), through the medium of leading newspapers, to every person having taxable income to submit within 65 days a return of his total income and total world income of the previous year. On publication of this notice all assesseees irrespective of their status are under a statutory obligation to submit returns of their total income in the prescribed form obtainable from the Income-tax Office on application. The form of return contains explicit notes for the guidance of the assesseees who should study such of the notes as are appropriate to their case. Returns must be signed by the assessee in person or by a person duly authorised to represent the assessee legally and in such a way as will bind his principal. Failure to make a return in response to the general public notice will render an assessee having an income of more than Rs. 3,500 liable to a penalty not exceeding one and half times of the tax payable by him. (See Chap. XIII § 1).

In addition to the public notification the Income-tax Authorities issue notice under Section 22(2) to those persons who are already known to have taxable income, requiring them to submit within 35 days, returns of their total income and total world income of the previous year. Date of submission of a return may be extended on reasonable grounds. Failure to make a return in response to this particular notice will render an assessee to be assessed Ex-parte as also to a penalty not exceeding one and half times of the tax payable by him. (See Chap. XIII § 1).

If a return has not been submitted within the time prescribed in the notice it may be filed any time before the assessment. There is no statutory bar to an assessee making a return under Section 22(1) even after the expiry of the assessment year. It is not necessary for the Income Tax Officer to issue a notice under Section 34 to regularise such an assessment. At any rate there is nothing to prevent an assessee from submitting and the Department from accepting such a return under Section 22(3). If there is any error or omission in a return furnished, a revised return may be filed any time before the assessment, but the assessee cannot escape the penalty for submitting an original false return.

When the Income-tax Officer is satisfied that a return submitted is correct and complete, he shall assess the income under Section 23(1) and determine the amount of tax payable on the basis of such return. This method should be adopted only in case of those assesseees who have more or less an unvariable annual income derived from salaries, interest on securities and house properties where the figure shown in the return can be verified from the employer's annual return, certificates of tax deducted at source and Municipal registers.

When the Income-tax Officer has reason to believe that the return submitted by an assessee is not correct or complete he shall serve a notice on him under Section 23(2) to attend in person or to produce any evidence in support of his return. The Income-tax Officer is also empowered under Section 22(4) to call for any books of accounts or documents as he may require but he cannot ask an assessee to produce books of accounts relating to a period of more than three years prior to the 'Accounting Year'. Moreover he is not authorised to ask the assessee to prepare accounts which he does not already possess and does not require for his own purpose, all that the Income-tax Officer is authorised, is to call for accounts and documents which are believed to be in existence. To comply with the notices referred to, the assessee need not attend in person and may be represented by a lawyer, auditor, income-tax practitioner or by an employee or relative, authorised by him competent to answer questions and whose statement will of course be binding on him. If on production of the necessary evidence the Income-tax Officer is satisfied, he shall make an assessment under Section 23(3) and determine the amount of tax payable. Failure to produce accounts or documents asked for by the Income-tax Officer, will render an assessee to be assessed Ex-parte, in addition to his being prosecuted and penalised (See Chap. XIII § 1).

§2—Ex-Parte Assessment [Section 23 (4)]—Where no return has been submitted within 65 days from the date of publication of the general notice, the Income-tax Officer should issue a notice under Section 22(2) to the assessee asking him to file within 35 days a return of his total income and total world income. If a return is not submitted in response to the notice under Section 22(2), the Income-tax Officer shall make an Ex-parte assessment to the best of his judgment. An Ex-parte assessment can also be made where an assessee has failed to comply with the notice for production of books of accounts under Section 22(4) or with a notice for attendance or production of evidence under Section 23(2).

In completing an assessment under Section 23(4) the Income-tax Officer must make what he honestly believes to be a fair estimate of the proper amount of assessment and for this purpose he must be able to take into consideration the local knowledge and repute in regard to the assessee's circumstances and his own knowledge of the previous returns by, and assessment of the assessee, and all other matters which he thinks will assist him in arriving at a fair and proper estimate. He must not act dishonestly or vindictively or capriciously because he must exercise his best judgment in the matter.

Although an Ex-parte assessment is more or less a penalty assessment which is invariably in excess of the assessee's actual income, it is intended to prevent the offence being repeated. In the case of a registered firm the Income-tax Officer may even refuse registration or cancel it where already allowed, subject to an opportunity being given to the assessee to explain his default. The refusal or the cancellation of the registration is however subject to appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner.

If, however, the assessee can prove to the satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer within one month of the receipt of the demand notice that he was prevented by sufficient cause from submitting his return of income or that he did not receive the notices issued under Sections 22(4) and 23(2) or that he could not comply with the terms of the notices for reasons beyond his control, then the Income-tax Officer shall cancel the Ex-parte assessment and proceed to make a fresh normal assessment. The Income-tax Officer has no option in the matter and he is bound to cancel the assessment if the assessee can prove that the default was caused unintentionally and owing to circumstances beyond his control.

§3—Emergency Assessment (Sections 24A, 44A,B,C.)—Since a notice under Sections 22(1) and (2) cannot be issued before the close of the fiscal year for the purposes of assessing the income of that year, Commercial Travellers,

Touring Theatrical Parties, Temporary Residents or persons about to leave India permanently, can escape tax by departing from the country before the close of the year. To provide for such emergencies the Income-tax Officers are authorised under Section 24A to serve a notice on an assessee requiring him to furnish within seven days a return of his estimated total income for the period from the expiry of the last previous year to the probable date of his departure. The rate applicable in respect of these assessments is the rate in force for the financial year in which the assessment is made.

This section contains an exception to the general rule that assessments are made on the income of the previous year. It should be noted however, that the onus of discovering such assesseees and of putting the emergency machinery in motion, is with the Income-tax Authorities. The Act does not place any obligation on those, who intend to leave the country to notify the authorities of their intention to do so.

Sections 44A, B, C, provide for the assessment and collection of tax in case of certain classes of shipping. The procedure is mainly intended to rope in non-resident owners of such vessels from whom the tax would otherwise be irrecoverable. Before departure from any port of India the Master of the ship shall furnish to the Income-tax Officer a statement of the full amount paid or payable to the Master's principal on account of passenger fares and freight on the livestock and goods shipped at the port since the arrival of the ship thereat. The Income-tax Officer shall thereafter assess the income at 5% of the figure furnished. The tax is then levied at the maximum rate applicable at the time of assessment and the ship is not allowed to leave the port until the Collector of Customs is satisfied that the tax has been paid. Any adjustments in respect of the tax paid can however be made in the following year in course of a normal assessment.

§4—Provisional assessment (Section 23B)—To speed up collection of revenue Income Tax Officers were empowered in the assessment year 1949-50 to make provisional assessments on the basis of assessee's own return of income accompanied by accounts and documents, if any, in support thereof. In selecting cases for making provisional assessment, priority was therefore given to old cases in which the net amounts payable were substantial. If on the basis of the return of income and the accounts submitted by an assessee, the Income-tax Officer finds that there will actually be a net demand payable then the provisional assessment is made. No appeal lies against a provisional assessment. Without prejudicing the merits of any issue involved the amount of tax paid on provisional assessment is adjustable in the regular assessment, the difference being payable or refundable to the assessee.

§5—Income escaping assessment (Section 34)—Under certain circumstances the Income-tax Officers are empowered to re-open an assessment if they discover, in consequence of definite information, that the income has escaped assessment. The Section covers four alternatives (i) where the income was not disclosed in the return; (ii) where the income has been under-assessed owing to mistakes in computations including wrong allowances and so forth; (iii) where the income has been assessed at a lower rate of tax than is appropriate; and (iv) where the income has been the subject of excessive refunds or reliefs.

The intention of the Income-tax Officer must properly be notified to the assessee before any action is taken. If it appears at any stage of the proceedings that no income has escaped assessment or been assessed at a lower rate, the Income-tax Officer must promptly stop the proceedings. It is not intended that when a man has concealed part of his income and the Income-tax Officer is proceeding to re-assess the income the assessee should be entitled to have any benefit out of that re-assessment. Still less it is intended that the Income-tax Officer should be invested with wide powers of revision or review merely because he has caused a mistaken impression that certain income has escaped assessment or been assessed at a lower rate. His powers under Section 34 can never be used, therefore, to effect a reduction of tax already levied upon the assessee.

The rate of tax chargeable in respect of re-assessment must be levied at the rate at which it would have been levied had the income not escaped assessment. To illustrate, if the income of the accounting period ended 31-3-46 (assessable in the year 1946-47) which has escaped assessment, be re-assessed in the assessment year say 1948-49, then the tax chargeable on the total re-assessed income should be calculated at the rates levied in the assessment year 1946-47 and not at the rates of the year 1948-49.

All assessments whether under Section 23 or 34 must be completed by the Income-tax Officer within four years from the end of the year in which the income being assessed was first assessable. When, however, an assessee is guilty of wilful concealment or mis-statement of income, this period extends to eight years. To illustrate, normal assessment in respect of the income of the year ended 31-3-46 must be completed by the Income-tax Officer within 31-3-51, but if a source of income deliberately concealed by the assessee is detected then re-assessment can be completed within 31-3-55. The period is on the other hand restricted to one year only, where a non-resident is assessed through an agent under Section 43.

Section 8 of the Income-tax and Business Profits Tax (Amendment) Act, 1948 has drastically recasted this section making a distinction between two categories of assessee, namely those who make a full and fair disclosure of all material facts to the Income-tax Officer and those who do not. In the latter case if the Income-tax Officer satisfies the Commissioner that he has reason to believe that by reason of the assessee's failure to make a full disclosure of his income there has been escapement of tax, he can initiate reassessment proceedings. The period of completing the assessments has been extended and the assessment can now be completed within one year of the service of the notice provided the notice has been served within the time limit. The amendment has been based on the recommendation of the Income-tax Investigation Committee who are of the opinion that the existing law, under which completed assessments cannot be reopened unless the Income-tax Officer actually discovers an under-assessment in consequence of definite information which has come to his possession, does not afford adequate safeguard against loss of public revenue, particularly as such loss arises from the tactics employed by dishonest tax-evaders.

§6—Place of Assessment (Section 64)—With a net work of Income-tax Officers scattered throughout India, it is but logical that there must be some hard and fast method to map out their individual jurisdictions. Ordinarily an Income-tax Officer is empowered to assess any income, profits or gains accruing arising or received within a certain territorial jurisdiction. Consequently an assessee has to be assessed by the Income-tax Officer of the Area within which he ordinarily resides, but if he carries on a business, the assessment should be made by the Officer of the Area within which his principal place of business is situate. If there be any dispute regarding jurisdiction of the Income-tax Officer, the matter should be settled by the Provincial Commissioner of Income-tax. Where the areas are situate in more than one Province, the matter should be settled by the Central Board of Revenue if the Provincial Commissioners are not in agreement. In all cases of dispute, however the assessee should be given an opportunity of representing his views although these are not necessarily accepted. Under special circumstances the Income-tax Officers are appointed not in relation to the territorial jurisdiction but in relation to certain classes of assessee or certain classes of income. A list of the areas or classes of persons comprised in each Officer's jurisdiction is displayed on the notice board of the Income-tax Officer concerned and if any person is in doubt as regards the Officer to whom he should submit his return of income he may enquire either from the nearest Income-tax Office or from the Provincial Commissioner of Income-tax.

The form of return requires an assessee to state his principal place of business and if he has made a statement he should obviously be bound by it. Where, however, he defaults in submitting a return of his income even though asked to do so under Section 22(2) he is deprived of the right to raise any question about the jurisdiction of the assessing Income-tax Officer.

§7—Demand Notice and date of payment (Sections 29 & 45)—In addition to making an assessment, the Income-tax Officer is responsible for recovering all demands resulting from his own order or that of his higher Authorities in an appeal or review or for a penalty imposed. As soon as an assessment is complete, the Income-tax Officer shall serve upon the assessee a demand notice specifying the amount payable by way of tax or penalty. Although the Act does not specify the minimum period to be allowed for payment, the department usually allows 14 days for payment except in cases involving a risk to the Revenue.

A demand must be paid on or before the date specified in the notice but where no date is mentioned the amount should be paid "on or before the first day of the second month following the date of service of the demand notice." Failure to pay the tax or penalty specified in a demand notice by due date will make the person liable to be "deemed to be in default" except where (i) either the person has presented an appeal, or (ii) the assessee has been assessed in respect of income arising outside India in a country the laws of which prohibit or restrict the remittance of money to India. In the former case, if the Income-tax Officer is satisfied that the appeal involves a really contentious issue, he may postpone the collection of the disputed portion of the tax. In the latter case the assessee will not be treated as in default in respect of the proportionate amount of tax applicable to such foreign income so long as the prohibition or restriction is not removed. Intentional non-payment of tax on or before the due date leaves the assessee open to the imposition of a penalty as great as the amount of tax due from him.

Section 9 of the Income-tax and Business Profits Tax (Amendment) Act, 1948 empowers an Income-tax Officer to attach debts due from any person to an assessee who is in default in making payment. Any amount paid by a person in compliance with the Income-tax Officer's order is a sufficient discharge of his liability to the assessee. If the person concerned does not pay the amount to the Income-tax Officer, further proceedings may be taken against him as if the attachment were made by the Collector.

§8—Appeals (Section 30)—It is an established rule of law that there cannot be any inherent right of appeal and that the right of appeal must expressly be given by the Statute. Section 30 of the Income-tax Act specifically provides for the right of appeal under certain circumstances and we shall now deal with them.

(a) Appeal to Appellate Assistant Commissioner—Where an assessee denies his liability to be assessed under the Act, he can appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. Mere filing one's return of income cannot by itself be taken to be an indication of his consent to the assessment as such the assessee has an unqualified right of appeal whether he had questioned his liability to assessment under the Act before the Income-tax Officer or not.

All assessments whether normal or Ex-parte are subject to appeal. If the assessee is of the opinion that the amount of his total income has wrongly been computed by the Income-tax Officer or that the amount of tax payable in relation to his total income has wrongly been calculated he can appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. Where an Ex-parte assessment has been re-opened under Section 27 and the assessee is not still satisfied, he can appeal against the re-opened assessment.

Under Section 24 the assessee has the right of carrying forward losses to future years. If the Income-tax Officer refuses to determine this loss or wrongly computes it, then the assessee can appeal against the decision of the Income-tax Officer.

Cancellation of registration under Section 23(4) or refusal to register a firm under Section 26(A) or to re-open an Ex-parte assessment under Section 27 is appealable. Similarly orders passed by an Income-tax Officer under Sections 23(A) (1), 25(A), & 26(2) are also appealable.

An appeal can also be filed against orders imposing penalty under Section 28, 44(E) (6), 44(F) (5) or 46(1) as also against any order passed in connection with refund claims submitted under Section 48, 49 or 49F.

An appeal shall ordinarily be presented within 30 days of the receipt of the demand notice relating to the assessment or penalty objected to or of the intimation of the refusal of the Income-tax Officer as the case may be. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner has the discretionary power to extend the period of limitation on reasonable grounds. The appeal must be filed in the prescribed form available from the Income-tax Office and shall be verified in the prescribed manner. Any false statement made in the verification clause is an offence punishable under Section 52 of the Income-tax Act.

(b) Hearing of Appeals by Appellate Assistant Commissioner (Section 31)—On receipt of the appeal the Appellate Assistant Commissioner shall fix a date and place for hearing and shall send the notice to the assessee asking for any evidence he may desire. Adjournment can of course be given at his discretion on reasonable grounds. Appeal should not be dismissed for default of appearance but should always be decided under merits. The Assistant Commissioner has the authority to make any enquiry he thinks necessary or to have such enquiries made by the Income-tax Officer. He has also the authority to admit additional grounds of appeal provided the omission was not wilful or unreasonable.

In the case of an appeal against an order of assessment the Assistant Commissioner may confirm, reduce, enhance, annul or set aside the assessment and direct the Income-tax Officer to make a fresh assessment after making such enquiries as the Income-tax Officer may consider necessary or the Assistant Commissioner may direct.

In case of an appeal against an order refusing to register a firm under Section 26A or to make a fresh assessment under Section 27, the Assistant Commissioner may confirm such order or cancel it and direct to register the firm or to make a fresh assessment.

In the case of an appeal against an order Section 23A (1), 25(2), 26(2), 48, 49, or 49F the Assistant Commissioner may confirm, cancel, or vary such order.

In the case of an appeal against an order under Section 25A(1) the Assistant Commissioner may confirm or cancel such order and direct the Income-tax Officer to make further enquiry and pass fresh order or to make an assessment in the manner laid down in Section 25A(2).

In the case of an appeal against an order under Section 28, 44E(6), 44F(5), or 46(1) the Assistant Commissioner may confirm, cancel, enhance, or reduce the penalty.

In the case of appeal against the computation of loss under Section 24 the Assistant Commissioner may confirm or vary such computation.

Although the Assistant Commissioner has the power to enhance an assessment or penalty, he cannot exercise it without giving a reasonable opportunity to the assessee to explain his position. This power of enhancement does not authorise the Assistant Commissioner to go beyond the subject matter of the assessment and assess entirely new sources of income which were not the subject matter of the assessment appealed against. In dealing with an appeal against an assessment under Section 34 the Assistant Commissioner can only deal with that part of the income which had escaped assessment at the original assessment or with an enhancement of rate of tax at the re-assessment. He cannot entertain any argument that involves any reduction of the amount determined at the original assessment.

As the Appellate Assistant Commissioner now performs 'quasi-judicial' functions, the Income-tax Officer is authorised to be represented at the time an appeal is heard. On conclusion of the appeal the Appellate Assistant Commissioner shall communicate his orders to the assessee and also to the Commissioner of Income-tax.

(c) Appeals to the Appellate Tribunal (Section 33)—An assessee can lodge an appeal to the Appellate Tribunal within 60 days of the date on which an order by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner under Sections 28 and 31 is communicated to him. The department is also authorised to lodge an appeal to the Appellate Tribunal against any order passed by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner under Section 31. The Appellate Tribunal is empowered to admit an appeal out of time if there is sufficient cause for the delay. The appeal must be filed in the prescribed form with a fee of Rs. 100. The department is however, exempted from paying this fee. After hearing both parties the Appellate Tribunal shall pass an order as it thinks fit and shall communicate its decision to the Assessee as well as to the Commissioner. Orders passed by the Appellate Tribunal shall be final and conclusive unless any question of law arises out of such order.

(d) Appeals to the High Court (Section 66)—Should the assessee or the Commissioner be not satisfied with the decision of the Appellate Tribunal, either of them may require the Tribunal to refer the matter to the High Court. But no reference can be made to the High Court on a question of fact in which case the decision of the Tribunal is final and conclusive. The application for a reference to the High Court should be made within 60 days of the date on which the decision of the Tribunal has been communicated. It must be made in the prescribed form accompanied by a fee of Rs. 100/-. The department is however, exempted from making this deposit. If the Tribunal is of the opinion that a question of law arises out of its order, then it shall within 90 days of the receipt of the application draw up a statement of the case and refer it to the High Court. If on the other hand, the Tribunal consider that a point of law is not involved then it may refuse to state the case. Where a reference is withheld on this ground the applicant may apply to the High Court direct within six months from the date on which he is served with the notice of refusal, to make a reference for a 'mandamus' requiring the Tribunal to state a case. Where such an order has been passed by the High Court, the Tribunal must state a case. These references should be heard by a Bench of not less than two Judges and a copy of the judgment under the Seal of the Court and the signature of the Registrar should be sent to the Appellate Tribunal for disposal in the light of the orders passed by the Court. Costs will be decided at the discretion of the Court. Where as a result of the reference, a refund is due to the assessee it shall be granted along with any interest, the Commissioner may allow unless he decides to appeal to the Supreme Court and intimates the Court of his intention to ask for leave to this effect, within 30 days of the receipt of the Court's order. The refund may then be stayed with the Court's permission until such time as the appeal to the Supreme Court is disposed of.

(e) Appeals to the Supreme Court (Section 66A)—An appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any judgment of the High Court if the High Court certifies that the question of law involved is one of great importance. Usually the High Court will certify a case where the correct interpretation of the law will benefit not only the parties to the proceedings but also other persons similarly situated. Effect shall be given to the order of the Supreme Court where the judgment of the High Court is varied or reversed with the result that the Commissioner would no longer be able to withhold a refund under any circumstances. The decision of the Supreme Court shall be final and conclusive.

§9—Revisionary Power of the Commissioner of Income-tax (Section 33A)—The Commissioner of Income-tax as administrative head of the department in his Province is authorised to call for the file of any assessee and revise at his discretion, any order passed by an authority sub-ordinate to him. But he shall not pass an order prejudicial to the assessee. The Commissioner shall not also revise any order which is subject to an appeal to the Appellate Authorities or which has been made more than one year ago.

The assessee can also ask the Commissioner to revise an order passed by an authority sub-ordinate to him. With a view to discourage frivolous applications, a fee of Rs. 25/- has been prescribed. On receipt of the application the Commissioner shall call for the records and pass orders as he thinks fit. But he shall not revise any order which is subject to an appeal to the Appellate Authorities. As the Commissioner has expressly been prohibited from making an order prejudicial to the assessee, his decision shall be final and conclusive. No appeal or reference shall lie from his orders.

Section 7 of the Income-tax and Business Profits Tax (Amendment) Act, 1948 empowers the Commissioner to revise within two years any order of the Income-tax Officer which is prejudicial to the Revenue. The assessee has however been given the right of appeal to the Appellate Tribunal against the Commissioner's order of revision in exactly the same manner as he has the right of appeal against the Appellate Assistant Commissioner's order.

CHAPTER XIII

PENALTY AND PROSECUTION.

The Income-tax Act has imposed certain obligations on the assessee, non-compliance of which will render them liable to be penalised and prosecuted. Under certain circumstances the Department is authorised to levy a penalty while in other cases fines and penalties can be levied by a Magistrate in the event of a prosecution being launched.

§1.—Penalties leviable by the Department (Section 28)—A notice under Section 22 (1) issued through the medium of press or otherwise, imposes a statutory obligation on all tax-payers to submit returns of their total income, non-compliance of which is punishable with a maximum penalty of one and half times of the Income-tax and Super-tax payable on the total income of the offender. But the penalty cannot be levied if the total income of the assessee is less than Rs. 3,500 or if the assessee is the agent of a non-resident.

Failure to submit a return of income in response to a notice under Section 22(2) or 34 is punishable with a maximum penalty of one and half times of the Income-tax and Super-tax payable on the total income of the offender. But the penalty is restricted to Rs. 25 only, if the total income of the assessee is less than Rs. 3,600.

Failure to produce books of accounts called for by the Income-tax Officer under Section 22(4) or to furnish evidence asked for under Section 23(2) or concealment of income or deliberate mis-statement of actual income in the return submitted, is punishable with a maximum penalty of one and half times the difference between the Income-tax and Super-tax finally found to be payable and that calculated on the basis of the return submitted by the offender. It should be noted in this connection that the correction of return or the submission of a fresh return before the date of final assessment does not condone a deliberate omission or wilful mis-statement made in the original return.

Improper distribution of the profits of a registered firm with the object of returning the income of a partner below the real amount, is punishable with maximum penalty of one and half times the Income-tax which would have been avoided, had the return of income submitted by the partners been accepted.

Penalties are always leviable in addition to the income-tax and super-tax normally payable by the offender. When a penalty has been imposed under Section 28 a notice of demand should be served on the assessee under Section 29 and if he is not satisfied he can appeal within 30 days of the receipt of the demand notice to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner.

In all cases of penalty proceedings under Section 28 the Income-tax Officer must have the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner. Moreover, no order shall be passed unless the assessee or the partner has been given a reasonable opportunity of explaining his position. No prosecution can be instituted in respect of the same facts on which a penalty has been imposed.

Section 25(2) imposes a statutory obligation on persons discontinuing business, profession or vocation to give notice of such discontinuance within 15 days thereof, non-compliance of which is punishable with a maximum penalty of a sum equal and in addition, to the Income-tax and Super-tax finally levied.

Section 44 enacts that where any business, profession or vocation carried on by a firm or Association of persons has been discontinued or dissolved, each partner or member is liable jointly and severally for the tax assessed in addition to his personal assessment, if any.

Section 44E empowers Income-tax Officers to call for certain particulars to examine whether any tax has been avoided by sale of securities and shares with the option of re-buying them. Failure to comply with any of these requisitions will render the assessee liable to an initial penalty up to Rs. 500 plus a further penalty of the like amount for every day of the default after the imposition of the initial penalty.

Section 46(1) empowers the Income-tax Officers to impose a penalty where the tax demanded, has not been paid within the prescribed time and in case of continuous default the penalty may be enhanced from time to time up to the amount of arrear demand.

§2—Penalties leviable on prosecution before a Magistrate (Sections 51 and 52)

—The following offences are punishable, on conviction, with a fine of Rs. 10 per day of default.

- (1) Failure to deduct and pay tax as required by the provisions relating to deduction of tax at source under Section 18.
- (2) Failure to deduct and pay arrears of tax from salary if asked by the Income-tax Officer under Section 46(5).
- (3) Failure to furnish certificates of deduction of tax at source as required by Section 18(9).
- (4) Failure to furnish certificates of payment of tax in respect of dividends declared by a Company as required by Section 20.
- (5) Failure to furnish in due time the following returns :—
  - (a) Return of persons to whom dividends of more than Rs. 5,000 has been paid.—Section 19A.—Due date 15th June each year.
  - (b) Return of persons to whom interest of more than Rs. 400/- has been paid.—Section 20A.—Due date 15th June each year.
  - (c) Return of employees to whom salary of more than Rs. 1,600 has been paid and the amount of tax deducted in respect thereof.—Section 21.—Due date 30th April each year.
  - (d) Return of total income and total world income in compliance with special notice issued under Section 22(2).
  - (e) Return of members of firms or adult male members of a Hindu Undivided Family or of beneficiaries, etc.—Section 38.
  - (f) Return of persons to whom rent, interest, commission, royalty, brokerage or annuity of more than Rs. 400/- has been paid.—Section 38.
- (6) Failure to produce or caused to be produced books of accounts or documents asked for by the Income-tax Officer under Section 22(4).
- (7) Failure to grant inspection or to allow copies to be taken in accordance with the provisions of Section 39.

Deliberate mis-statement in the verification clause of any of the forms prescribed in Section 19A, 21, 22, 26(2), 30(3) or 33(3) is punishable on conviction with simple imprisonment which may extend to six months or with a fine up to Rs. 1,000 or with both.

No prosecution can be instituted for any of the above offences without the approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner who is also empowered to compound such offences even after prosecution has been launched.

§3—Judicial proceedings (Section 37)—This section empowers the Income-tax Officer, Appellate Assistant Commissioner, Commissioner and the Appellate Tribunal,

- (a) to enforce the attendance of any person and examine him on oath or affirmation,
- (b) to compel the production of documents, and
- (c) to issue commissions for examination of witness.

The above proceedings shall be deemed to be "Judicial proceedings" as covered by Section 193, 196 and 228 of the Penal Code. Scale of diet money and travelling expenses for witnesses, summoned under this Section will be that prescribed for attendance in Civil Courts in the respective provinces.

Although Section 61 permits an assessee to be represented by an Agent, it does not exempt him from being summoned by the Income-tax Officer under this Section, if he considers the assessee's personal attendance necessary. The penalties for disobeying the summons issued under this Section are the same as those for disobeying similar summons issued by a Civil Court. Relevant Sections of the Penal Code are as follows :—

- 193. Whoever intentionally gives false evidence, in any stage of a judicial proceeding, or fabricates false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of a judicial proceeding shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and whoever intentionally gives or fabricates false evidence in any other case, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.
- 196. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true or genuine evidence, any evidence which he knows to be false or fabricated, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave or fabricated false evidence.
- 228. Whoever intentionally offers any insult, or causes any interruption to any public servant, while such public servant is sitting in any stage of judicial proceeding, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

§4—Disclosure of information by the Income-tax Authorities (Section 54) — Income-tax returns and statements are confidential as between the assessee and the Income-tax Department, the breach of which is punishable with imprisonment up to six months and a fine at the discretion of the court. The intention of this Section is to encourage the assessee to make a full and true disclosure of all relevant facts within his knowledge, knowing that any statement made by him will not subsequently be used against him. But the particulars may be disclosed to such persons only who act in the execution of the Act itself, as also under certain circumstances provided in the Section. No prosecution shall be instituted under this Section without the previous approval of the Commissioner.

CHAPTER XIV

REFUND AND RELIEFS.

§1—Refunds (Section 48)—Refunds are necessitated owing to the system of "taxation at source" as in the case of dividends, and "deduction at source" as in the case of interest from securities, salaries and certain other payments. In both these groups of cases the average rate of tax, if any, appropriate to the "total income" or the "total world income" as the case may be, of the recipient of the income is not known at the time the tax is assessed or deducted. It is quite likely in such cases that the individual rate of tax would be lower than the maximum rate at which the deductions are made. For the purposes of refund dividends are deemed to have been taxed at the maximum rate of income-tax in force in the financial year in which they are paid, credited or distributed.

If any Individual, Hindu Undivided Family, Company, Local Authority, Firm or other Association of persons, or any partner of a firm or member of an Association can prove to the satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer that the amount of tax paid by him or on his behalf or treated as paid on his behalf in any year exceeds the amount with which he is properly chargeable under the Act for that year then he can apply for a refund of tax overpaid. The application must be made in the prescribed form accompanied by a return of the "total income" or of the "total world income" as the case may be unless such a return has already been submitted.

An Executor, Administrator or other legal representative of a person who is dead, lunatic or otherwise incapacitated can lodge claims for a refund of tax for the benefit of such person. In cases where the applicant is a resident outside India whose income is wholly taxed at source or whose only income for direct assessment is derived from dividends or both, the application should be made to the Income-tax Officer, Non-Residents Refund Circle, Bombay. In case of other claimants, the application should be submitted to the Income-tax Officer within whose jurisdiction they ordinarily reside.

Section 18(g) makes it obligatory upon the person deducting income-tax or super-tax to issue a certificate specifying the amount of tax deducted from the income concerned and the rate at which it has been deducted. Similarly Section 20 requires the principal Officer of a Company distributing dividends, to issue to the shareholders a certificate stating that the Company has paid or will pay the income-tax on the profits that are being distributed. These certificates are accepted by Income-tax Authorities as a proof that the tax has been paid.

The onus of proving the claim to a refund and therefore of adducing satisfactory evidence of his total income and of total world income lies on the claimant, and if he fail to discharge it, his claim will be rejected. Certificates of the Revenue Authorities of the United Kingdom or a Dominion will normally be accepted as proof of the amount of income arising or assessable in that country.

Claims should be submitted within four years from the last day of the assessment year. To illustrate, if the income arose in the year ended 31-3-46, (assessable in the year 1946-47) the claim must be submitted within 31-3-51. Refund admissible to an assessee may be set off against outstanding demands, if any. Where an assessee is not satisfied with the decision of the Income-tax

Officer, in disposing of the claim for refund, he can appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner.

§2—Double Income-tax Relief (Section 49)—The position of those persons who are called upon to pay tax in two or more different countries on the same source of income is one that gives rise to much complications. Consequently provisions have been made in the Indian Income-tax Act for granting appropriate relief in respect of the income which have been subjected to tax in more than one country. Though this branch of the Income-tax Regulations involves numerous complexities in practice, the root principles on which the relief is given will be discussed hereinafter.

Sections 10, 11 and 12 of the Income-tax and Business Profits Tax (Amendment) Act, 1948 have drastically changed the existing arrangements of Double Taxation Relief. Moreover, a large number of the Indian States have acceded to the Union of India. It, therefore, follows that the main principles on which the relief was so long being given, will have to be changed in the light of the changing circumstances. Already an agreement has been concluded between India and Pakistan by which the question of Double Taxation has been avoided. (See § 3).

(a) India and United Kingdom—If an assessee who has paid tax in India proves to the satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer that he has also paid United Kingdom tax for the corresponding year in respect of the same income, he shall be entitled to a proportionate refund of tax paid in both the countries. Briefly the United Kingdom Law gives relief at a rate up to either the Indian rate of tax (if the Indian rate of tax is lower than half of the United Kingdom rate of tax) or half the United Kingdom rate of tax in other cases, whilst the Indian Law gives further relief so that in effect the assessee pays in the aggregate tax at either the United Kingdom rate of tax or the Indian rate, whichever is higher.

The United Kingdom rate of tax means the rate at which the assessee has borne United Kingdom Income-tax and Super-tax for that year. Indian rate of tax means (1) the amount of Indian Income-tax paid by the assessee after adjustment of rebates regarding Life Assurance premia, Provident Fund contributions etc., divided by his total income as reduced by any income exempted from Indian Income-tax under the Provisions of the Act i.e. income from tax-free securities, Life Assurance premia, Provident Fund contributions etc., plus (2) the amount of Indian Super-tax divided by his total income (See Illustration No. 44).

When the income has been taxed in both the countries the assessee should at the first instance claim the relief in the United Kingdom. If the Indian rate of tax is less than half of the United Kingdom rate, no further relief is admissible in India. Where, however, the Indian rate is more than half of the United Kingdom rate the assessee is entitled to a further relief in India which would of course, be the amount by which the Indian rate exceeds half of the United Kingdom rate. To illustrate, if the Indian rate is 12 pies per Rupee and the United Kingdom rate is 30 pies per Rupee, the assessee is entitled to a relief of 12 pies per Rupee in the United Kingdom; no further relief is admissible in India. If, on the other hand, the Indian rate is 18 pies per Rupee (the United Kingdom rate remaining same) the assessee is entitled to a relief of 15 pies per Rupee in the United Kingdom and 3 pies per Rupee in India.

To obtain relief in India, the assessee should submit the official receipt for the United Kingdom tax paid, the notice of assessment showing the basis on which the liability has been computed and a certificate of the Revenue Authorities showing what relief has actually been granted to him in the United Kingdom. The Indian assessment in respect of which the relief is claimed will then be compared with the United Kingdom assessment based on the same period of accounts and the relief will then be allowed by reference to the United Kingdom rate of tax charged on that United Kingdom assessment.

In order to determine the "same part of income" which has suffered tax in both the countries, and on which relief is to be given in India, the sources of "Incoming profits" included in both the assessments will alone be compared. Income from any source included in the assessment by one country but not by the other will be excluded from the comparison. But no comparison will, however, be necessary between allowances or deductions permissible in one country and those in the other. The amount of income in respect of which relief is admissible will then be the amount of Indian assessment as reduced by such deductions or the amount of comparable United Kingdom assessment, whichever is less.

Where the accounts on which the Indian assessment is based, enter into United Kingdom assessments for two different years; the Indian assessment will for the purposes of relief, be divided into two portions, relief on each being allowed by reference to the taxation of that particular portion in the United Kingdom. If a carry forward of loss is allowed in one country but not in the other, the income considered in the assessment of the country in which the loss is allowed, will be reduced by the loss allowed as a set off. The finally reduced income will then be compared with the income of the other country and relief will be allowed on the lower of the two amounts thus compared. If the difference between the incomes charged in the two countries is due to the fact that remittances only are taxed in India and the whole income in the United Kingdom, the remittances alone should be regarded as having suffered double taxation.

Where a defined part of the income is exempted from tax or falls altogether outside the scope of the tax in either country e.g. interest on tax-free securities in either country or Agricultural Income in India, relief will not be allowed in respect of the tax on such part of the income. If, however, the exempted or untaxed part of the income is not separable but forms an element in the doubly taxed income, relief will be allowed on the proportionate amount of income which is derived from sources subjected to tax.

The application should be submitted in the prescribed form within four years from the end of the assessment year. Where, however, there is a delay in settling assessments and claims to the relief in the United Kingdom, provisional claims for double income-tax relief unsupported by any proof that relief has actually been obtained in the United Kingdom will be accepted by the Authorities in India if presented within the limitation period.

Illustration 44—Mr. Price of Illustration No. 34 paid the amount of tax due from him and sent the tax receipts to his London agents for claiming Double Income-tax Relief admissible to him in the United Kingdom, in respect of his sterling income which was also taxed in that country. After the claim was settled in the United Kingdom his London agents forwarded him the following certificate to enable him to lodge a reciprocal claim in India. Calculate the amount refundable to him.

ANSWER

- Doubly taxed income on which relief has been allowed in the United Kingdom = £450,000 @ 1s. 6d. = Rs. 60,00,000
- Indian rate of tax—Income-tax = 60 pies per Rupee.
Super-tax = 30     "     "     "
- U.K. rate of relief allowed £0-4-6d. in the £ 96 pies per Rupee.
43.2     "     "     "

(4) Indian rate of relief	=52.8 pies per Rupee.
* But the rate is restricted to	43.2 pies per Rupee.
(5) Total amount of relief admissible in India = 60,00,000 × 43.2 pies	=Rs. 13,50,000

* The rate of relief in India is restricted to half of U.K. rate which is lower than the Indian rate of tax.

(b) India and Ceylon—If an assessee who has paid tax in India proves to the satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer that he has also paid Ceylon tax for the corresponding year in respect of the same income, he shall be entitled to a repayment of half the Ceylon tax after deducting therefrom any relief due under Section 45(2) of the Ceylon Income-tax Ordinance, 1932, calculated on that part of his total income on which relief if admissible under the Ceylon Income-tax Law, or half the Indian tax suffered on account of the doubly taxed income whichever is lower. It should be noted in this connection that "Ceylon tax" does not include for the purposes of relief either in India or Ceylon (i) the additional tax charged on non-resident companies under Section 20(7) of the Ceylon Income-tax Ordinance, 1932 and (ii) tax on any sum payable by way of interest, annuity, ground rent, or royalty out of the income in respect of which the tax is charged.

The Ceylon rate of tax shall be ascertained by dividing the Ceylon tax by the income on which the tax has been paid. "Indian tax" includes Company Super-tax as regards Companies themselves but not as regards Shareholders.

Relief cannot be granted unless tax is paid for the same year in each country on the source in question e.g. in the first year of a business, tax will be levied on its profits in Ceylon but not in India; in the year after a business ceases its profits should be liable to tax in India but not in Ceylon. Consequently relief will not be given in either of these cases.

Illustration 47—Sri Uma Kanta Parasar, Ceylon Government pensioner, settled in India. During the year ended 31st March 1950 he brought into India Rs. 8,000 from his pension received in Ceylon. Total income	Rs. 23,000 0
Income-tax paid on total income on 20-7-50	Rs. 3,648 7

Ceylon Income-tax Assessment
Income-tax year ending 31st March, 1951.
Income of the year ending 31st March, 1950.

Ceylon income	Rs. 9,000 0
Non-Ceylon income	15,000 0
	<hr/>
Total world income	Rs. 24,000 0
	<hr/>
Income-tax paid on Ceylon income on 9-8-50	Rs. 1,078 14
	<hr/>

ANSWER

(1) Doubly taxed income in respect of which relief is admissible in India = Rs. 8,000

(2) Ceylon rate of tax =  $\frac{\text{Rs. 1,078 14}}{\text{Rs. 9,000}} = 23.016$  pies per Rupee.

(3) Indian rate of tax =  $\frac{\text{Rs. 3,648 7}}{\text{Rs. 23,000}} = 30.456$  pies per Rupee.

As the Ceylon rate of tax is lower than the Indian rate of tax, the relief admissible in India will be half of the Ceylon rate of tax multiplied by the doubly taxed income i.e.

$$\frac{8000 \times 23.016}{2} \text{ pies} = \text{Rs. 479 8.}$$

(c) India, Ceylon and United Kingdom—It is not unlikely that an assessee may be taxed in India, in Ceylon and in the United Kingdom in respect of his same income. The income may arise in a country (say India a/c Interest on Securities) and pay tax there, it can then be brought into another country (say Ceylon) and be subjected to tax there and lastly the same income may be taxed in a third country (say United Kingdom) owing to the assessee being treated as Resident in that country (say a sterling company registered in the United Kingdom). In such cases the Ceylon relief admissible in India will be the difference between half of the Indian rate and the relief already allowed in India (a/c United Kingdom).

To illustrate, if a company, pays tax in the United Kingdom, say at 96 pies per Rupee, in India, say at 56 pies per Rupee and in Ceylon, say at 30 pies per Rupee, then the Company will be entitled to a relief of 48 pies per Rupee in the United Kingdom, 23 pies per Rupee in India, (8 pies a/c United Kingdom and 15 pies a/c Ceylon), and 15 pies per Rupee in Ceylon. Though the Company pays 182 pies per Rupee at the first instance it ultimately pays in all the countries 96 pies per Rupee. (182 pies less total relief 86 pies).

Ceylon Income-tax.

I hereby certify that the Exchange Bank of Asia Ltd. of P.O. Box No. 314, Colombo, Ceylon, has paid Ceylon Income-tax for the year of assessment ending 31st March 1949 amounting to Rs. 3,10,000 on a total income of Rs. 10,00,000 at the rate of 25% plus 6% on account of non-resident Companies. The said total income includes Rs. 4,00,000 being interest on the Government of India Securities.

ANSWER

- (1) Triply taxed income in respect of which relief is admissible in India = Rs. 4,00,000.

- (2) Ceylon rate of tax =  $\frac{\text{Rs. } 3,10,000}{\text{Rs. } 10,00,000} = \text{Rs. } 31$  per cent. (of which Rs. 25 per cent. is eligible for Relief. See page 164).

- (3) Tax paid in Ceylon in respect of the triply taxed income of Rs. 4,00,000 @ Rs. 25 per cent. = Rs. 1,00,000; 50% thereof being Rs. 50,000.

- (4) Indian rate of tax as per Illustration 46 = 96 pies per Re.

- (5) Tax paid in India in respect of the triply taxed income of Rs. 4,00,000 @ 96 pies per Re. = Rs. 2,00,000; 50% thereof being Rs. 1,00,000.

- (6) Relief already allowed as per Illustration 46 @ 43.2 pies on Rs. 4,00,000; = Rs. 90,000.

- (7) Relief admissible in India in respect of the triply taxed income = Rs. 1,00,000 less Rs. 90,000 = Rs. 10,000

(d) India and Aden—Any assessee who pays income-tax in India as also in Aden in respect of the same income, is entitled to claim Double Income-tax Relief in both the countries. The relief admissible in India will be calculated on the doubly taxed income at a rate bearing to the Indian rate of tax or the Aden rate of tax, whichever is the lower, the same proportion as the Indian rate of tax bears to the sum of the Indian rate and the Aden rate of tax. To illustrate, if the doubly taxed income be, say Rs. 32,000 the Indian rate of tax, say 60 pies per Rupee, and the Aden rate of tax, say 36 pies per Rupee, then the relief admissible in India will be calculated as follows:—

$$\text{Doubly taxed income} \times \left( \frac{\text{Indian rate of tax}}{\text{Indian rate of tax} + \text{Aden rate of tax}} \right) \times$$

(Indian rate of tax or Aden rate of tax, whichever is lower.)

$$= 32,000 \times \frac{60}{60+36} \times 36 \text{ pies} = \text{Rs. } 3,750.$$

(e) India and Dominions—Arrangements have been made with Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda, Zanzibar, Gold Coast, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Gambia and Mauritius for granting reciprocal relief in those countries and India in respect of any income which is taxed in India and those countries. The relief admissible in India in respect of the doubly taxed income will be determined as follows:—

- (i) If the assessee is resident in India, the rate of relief shall be the Dominion rate of tax when it does not exceed half of the Indian rate and in other cases half the Indian rate.
- (ii) If the assessee is non-resident in India, the rate of relief shall be half of the Dominion rate of tax if it does not exceed the Indian rate and in other cases the amount by which the Indian rate of tax exceeds half of the Dominion rate.

§3—India and Pakistan—Double Taxation avoidance—(Section 49AA).

Whereas the Government of the Dominion of India and the Government of the Dominion of Pakistan desire to conclude an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation of income chargeable in the two Dominions in accordance with their respective laws.

Now, therefore, the said two Governments do hereby agree as follows:—

Article I.—The taxes which are the subject of the present Agreement are the taxes imposed in the Dominions of India and Pakistan by the Indian Income-tax Act 1922 (XI of 1922), the Excess Profits Tax Act, 1940 (XV of 1940), and the Business Profits Tax Act, 1947 (XXI of 1947), as adapted in the respective Dominions.

Article II.—Subject to the provision of Article IX this Agreement shall continue in force so long as the basis of residence and the scope of the charging provisions in the aforesaid Acts as adapted remain unaltered in both the Dominions, and shall apply to the following assessments made under the said Acts in the Dominions—

(i) Assessments made on or after the 15th day of August 1947 for the assessment year 1947-48 (or for the corresponding chargeable accounting period).

(ii) All other assessments made on or after the 1st day of April 1948, excepting excess profits tax assessments for chargeable accounting periods for which provisional assessments have been made before 1st April 1948.

Article III.—Save under the provisions of Section 34 of the Income-tax Act, 1922, and Section 15 of the Excess Profits Tax Act, 1940, as adapted neither Dominion shall charge to tax any income of a person whose assessment (whether regular or provisional) including such income had been completed before the 15th day of August, 1947, or 1st day of April, 1948, as the case may be by an Income-tax Officer or Excess Profits Tax Officer functioning respectively under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, or the Excess Profits Tax Act, 1940, or under those Acts as adapted and applied to any Areas or to either Dominion.

Article IV.—Each Dominion shall make assessment in the ordinary way under its own laws; and, where either Dominion under the operation of its laws charges any income from the sources or categories of transactions specified in column I of the Schedule to this Agreement (hereafter referred to as the Schedule) in excess of the amount calculated according to the percentage specified in columns 2 and 3 thereof, that Dominion shall allow an abatement equal to the lower amount of tax payable on such excess in their Dominion as provided for in Article VI.

Article V.—Where any income accruing or arising without the territories of the Dominions is chargeable to tax in both the Dominions, each Dominion shall allow an abatement equal to one-half of the lower amount of tax payable in either Dominion on such doubly taxed income.

Article VI.—(a) For the purposes of the abatement to be allowed under Articles IV or V, the tax payable in each Dominion on the excess or the doubly taxed income, as the case may be, shall be such proportion of the tax payable in each Dominion as the excess or the doubly taxed income bears to the total income of the assessee in each Dominion.

(b) Where at the time of assessment in one Dominion, the tax payable on the total income in the other Dominion is not known, the first Dominion shall make a demand without allowing the abatement, but shall hold in abeyance for a period of one year (or such longer period as may be allowed by the Income-tax Officer in his discretion) the collection of a portion of the demand equal to the estimated abatement. If the assessee produces a certificate of assessment in the other Dominion within the period of one year or any longer period allowed by the Income Tax Officer, the uncollected portion of the demand will be adjusted against the abatement allowable under this Agreement; if no such certificate is produced, the abatement shall cease to be operative and the outstanding demand shall be collected forthwith.

Article VII. (a) Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed as modifying or interpreting in any manner the provisions of relevant Taxation laws in force in either Dominion.

(b) If any question arises as to whether any income fall within any one of the items specified in the Schedule and if so under which item the question shall be decided without any reference to the treatment of such income in the assessment made by the other Dominion.

Article VIII.—The Schedule to this Agreement may be modified from time to time by agreement between the Central Boards of Revenue of the two Dominions and references to the Schedule in the foregoing Articles shall be read as references to the Schedule, as modified.

Article IX.—Either of the Contracting Parties may, six months before the beginning of any financial year (beginning on the 1st day of April) give to the other Contracting Party, through diplomatic channels, notice of termination, and in such events this Agreement shall cease to have effect in relation to any assessment to income-tax for the financial year beginning with the first day of April next following and in relation to assessments to any other tax on the income of the corresponding chargeable accounting period.

§4—Relief granted to a company to be deemed relief granted to Shareholder.

[Sections 16(2) 49B & 49C]—Section 16(2) read with 49B provides that a dividend shall be increased proportionately by the amount of income-tax (not super-tax) payable by the Company at the rate applicable to its total income for the financial year in which the dividend is paid, credited or distributed and that the recipient shall be deemed to have himself paid the tax. (See Chapter IX §2). Section 49C similarly provides that when a Company which has obtained any double (or triple) income-tax relief, distributes a dividend, the shareholder shall be deemed to have himself proportionately obtained such relief. If the rate of relief granted to the Company in respect of income-tax only for the financial year preceding the year in which the dividend is paid, exceed the rate of relief to which he would directly be entitled in the year of assessment of such dividend, then the excess relief shall be recovered from

Illustration 49—Utkal Trading Co., Ltd. paid income-tax at 60 pies per rupee and Super-tax at 24 pies per rupee for the assessment year 1948-49 on its entire income of Rs. 5,00,000. The Company was granted double income-tax relief at 41.13 pies per rupee for the assessment year 1947-48 (the original rate of tax was—income-tax 60 pies per rupee and super-tax 24 pies per rupee). Sri Bimal Baran Bhattacharjee, a shareholder of the Company received during 1948-49 dividends amounting to Rs. 1,100 free of tax. As he had no other income during the year ended 31st March 1949 he applied for a refund of income-tax paid at source by the Company in respect of the dividend. Calculate the amount refundable to him.

Illustration 50—Universal Investment Trust Ltd. paid Income-tax at 60 pies per rupee and Super-tax at 24 pies per rupee for the assessment year 1947-48 and obtained double Income-tax relief in India at 42 pies per rupee. It paid Income-tax at 60 pies per rupee and Super-tax at 24 pies per rupee for the assessment year 1948-49 on its entire income of Rs. 5,00,000. Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee, a shareholder of the Company received during the year ended 31st March 1949 dividends amounting to Rs. 16,500 free of tax.

He had no other source of income and submitted a return of his income in time. He is entitled to double Income-tax relief in India for the assessment year 1949-50 at 18 pies per rupee. Calculate the amount refundable to Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee.

ANSWER

$$(1) \text{ The amount of gross dividend} = \frac{\text{Rs. } 16,500}{1 - \frac{60}{192}} = \text{Rs. } 24,000$$

$$(2) \text{ Proportionate amount of Income-tax paid by the Company at 60 pies per rupee on Rs. } 24,000 = \text{Rs. } 7,500$$

$$(3) \text{ The rate of relief deemed to have been obtained by Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee in respect of}$$

$$\text{Income-tax only} = \frac{42 \times 60}{60 + 24} \text{ pies} = 30 \text{ pies per Re.}$$

$$(4) \text{ The amount of relief deemed to have been obtained by Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee in respect of Rs. } 24,000 @ 30 \text{ pies per Re.} = \text{Rs. } 3,750$$

$$(5) \text{ Income-tax at 38 pies per rupee payable by Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee in respect of his total income of Rs. } 24,000 \text{ at the rates ruling in the fiscal year } 1948-49 = \text{Rs. } 4,750$$

$$(6) \text{ The amount of relief admissible to Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee in India @ 18 pies per rupee on Rs. } 24,000 = \text{Rs. } 2,250$$

$$(7) \text{ Net amount of Income-tax paid at source in respect of the dividend (Item 2 less Item 4)} = \text{Rs. } 3,750$$

$$(8) \text{ Net amount of Income-tax payable by Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee for the assessment year } 1949-50 \text{ (Item 5 less Item 6)} = \text{Rs. } 2,500$$

$$(9) \text{ Net amount refundable to Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee} = \text{Rs. } 3,750 \text{ less Rs. } 2,500 = \text{Rs. } 1,250$$

Note:—Ordinarily the amount refundable to Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee is Rs. 2,750 (Rs. 7,500 less Rs. 4,750). But as the amount of relief deemed to have been obtained by Sri Charu Chandra Chatterjee was more than the amount of relief directly admissible to him the refund is reduced to Rs. 1,250 [Rs. 2,750 less (Rs. 3,750 less Rs. 2,250)].

It may be mentioned in this connection that though the Company, as per Illustration 49 paid Income-tax at 30.62 pies per rupee (60 less 29.38) and the shareholder was credited with the proportionate amount of tax of Rs. 255-3 only (Rs. 500—less Rs. 244-13) the net dividend received by him was increased by Rs. 500. His total income is not only increased by 244-13 which he does not even constructively receive but he is also liable to pay tax on this sum. The inequity of this provision is more apparent where a dividend is paid "less tax." Neither the Indian Income-tax Act nor the Indian Companies Act does empower a Company, to deduct Income-tax from dividend. The authority to deduct it, is of course, regulated by a Company's Articles of Association. Where the Articles authorise deduction of Income-tax, (without mentioning at what rate), it is doubtful whether the Company can deduct Income-tax at the maximum rate if it has obtained any Double Income-tax Relief. It was held by the Bombay High Court in Bai Lalita Ratanchand Khimchand-vs-Tata Iron & Steel Co. Ltd. that, when no tax was payable by a Company (owing to unabsorbed depreciation) there was no right to deduct it. It can be argued on the basis of this decision that, when a Company pays Income-tax say at 24 pies per rupee after adjustment of Double Income-tax Relief, it cannot deduct Income-tax at say 30 pies per rupee. In the United Kingdom the Companies are empowered to deduct Income-tax at "Effective Rate" i.e. standard rate less any double Income-tax relief obtained by it. In India there is no such provisions. Now, if the Company deduct Income-tax at the maximum rate, the shareholder may sue the Company for a proportionate refund of the double Income-tax relief obtained by it. On the other hand, if the Company deduct Income-tax at the "Effective Rate," thereby increasing the net amount of dividend payable to the shareholder, the Revenue Authorities will gross up this increased net dividend for their purposes. To explain, if a Company pays dividend during the fiscal year 1949-50, say at 12% less Income-tax and a shareholder receives Rs. 975/-, (gross dividend Rs. 1,200/- less Income-tax at the "Effective Rate" of 36 pies per rupee) then the gross dividend to be computed by the Department at 60 pies per rupee, will be Rs. 1,418/-. Though the Company pays a gross dividend of Rs. 1,200/- only, for Income-tax purposes it will be taken at Rs. 1,418/- and the shareholder will be liable to pay additional Income-tax in respect of Rs. 218/- which he does not even constructively receive. The difficulties may be eliminated by grossing the dividend at the 'Effective Rate' instead of the maximum rate.

§5—Relief in respect of non-reciprocating countries—If an assessee, who is resident and ordinarily resident in India pays Income-tax in respect of income which arises outside India, in a country which has not arranged for any double Income-tax relief, he is entitled to deduct from his Indian tax payable in respect of the same income, one half of the Indian tax or one half of the foreign tax whichever is less. The concession is only as regards "income arising outside India" as such it is not admissible if the income arise in India and is taxed in a non-reciprocating country in addition to India.

CHAPTER XV

Miscellaneous.

§1—Deduction of Income-tax in respect of the payments made to Non-Residents (Section 18)—We have discussed in earlier Chapters that income-tax must be deducted from interest and other payments made to a Non-Resident, otherwise these amounts will be disallowed in computing the payer's total income. The Act provides that income-tax at the maximum rate in force on the date of payment should be deducted by the person responsible for payment of any sum chargeable to Indian tax i.e. interest, rent, royalty, commission, brokerage etc., to a Non-Resident unless the payer is himself liable to pay tax thereon as agent. The provision covers payments to persons resident outside India. Where, however, the contract for the payment of interest etc., is made abroad and the amounts are payable and paid abroad, deduction of Indian Income-tax cannot be insisted upon by the payer unless there are specific provisions in the contract to that effect.

Though the payers are obliged under the Statute to deduct income-tax the Law does not give any guidance how to determine the status of the payee. The question of residence offers many difficulties which a payer cannot solve and indeed has no information about. A resident within the meaning of Section 4A may be out of India for a considerable time. A Company may be Resident in one year and Non-Resident in the next year. How under these circumstances a payer should know who is resident and who is not? In such circumstances the payer should seek guidance from the Revenue Authorities.

To relieve the Department from the work involved in dealing with numerous trivial claims for refund, the Income-tax Officers have been authorised to issue Exemption Certificates (in suitable cases) directing the payer to make no deduction of tax or to deduct tax at a lower rate than the maximum. Provision has also been made in the Act that deduction of tax shall not apply to transactions such as hedges and straddles carried on between a resident broker and a non-resident broker.

In addition to income-tax, super-tax shall also be deducted at the direction of and at the rates determined by the Income-tax Officer. When no such direction is received from the Income-tax Authorities, the payer should deduct super-tax at the rate appropriate to the excess of the sum payable over the exemption limit for super-tax. Thus, if the payee is an "individual" the appropriate rate should be calculated on the excess over Rs. 25,000 of such payments, and if the payee is a "Company" it should be deducted even if the sum payable is one rupee only.

Super-tax is also deductible from dividends paid to non-residents under certain circumstances. As in the case of interest or other payments, super-tax should be deducted either at the direction of the Income-tax Officer or in the absence of any such direction, by the Company paying the dividend direct. Where the recipient is an individual, super-tax should be deducted if the gross dividend is more than Rs. 25,000. In the case of Company it should be deducted even if the sum payable is one rupee only.

The payer in all cases should furnish the payee with a certificate stating the date and the nature of the payment, the amount paid and the amount of tax deducted. All sums deducted shall be deemed to be income received by the payee and shall be treated as a payment of income-tax or super-tax on his behalf, for which credit shall be given to him in his assessment for the following year.

§2—Rectification of mistakes (Section 35)—Commissioners, Appellate Tribunals, Appellate Assistant Commissioners and Income-tax Officers are authorised to rectify mistakes apparent from the facts or documents which were before them when they passed revisional, appellate or original assessment order as the case may be. They are however debarred from making general review. The rectification may be done on their own motion or on the application of an assessee within four years from the date of the relevant order. The assessee is not allowed to introduce any new facts in this connection. The rectification should be made only in respect of mistake apparent from the records. Where the rectification enhances an assessment or reduces a refund the Income-tax Authorities must allow the assessee a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

§3—Appearance by Authorised Representative (Section 61)—Occasionally the Income-tax Authorities require the assessee to attend in person to produce evidence in the course of assessment proceedings. In such cases the assessee must depute an authorised representative, unless his personal attendance is required under Section 37 for examination on oath or affirmation. In all cases a Power of Attorney on properly stamped paper must be filed. The right of the assessee to appear through an agent has been restricted to a relative, a person regularly employed by him, a Lawyer, an Accountant and an Income-tax practitioner. No other person is allowed to appear before the Authorities in any proceedings.

“ Person regularly employed by the assessee ” includes any Officer of a Scheduled Bank with which the assessee maintains a current account or has other regular dealings.

An ‘ Accountant ’ means a registered Accountant enrolled in the register of Accountants maintained under the Auditor’s Certificate Rules 1932, a holder of a restricted certificate under the Restricted Certificate Rules 1932, or a member of the following Association of Accountants.

- (i) The Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales.

- (iii) The Institute of Accountants and Actuaries in Glasgow.
- (iv) The Society of Accountants in Aberdeen.
- (v) The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland.

		the normal allowance will be allowed by the Income-tax Officer where a concern claims such allowance on account of double shift working and satisfies the Income-tax Officer that the concern has actually worked double shift. An extra allowance up to a maximum of 100 per cent. of the normal allowance instead of 50 per cent. will be allowed in the assessments for five years commencing with the assessment for the year 1949-50, where a concern proves that there has been triple shift working. The calculations of the extra allowances for double shift and for triple shift shall be made separately, proportionate to the number of days during which there was only double shift working and during which there was triple shift working. For the purpose of granting this extra allowance the normal number of working days throughout the year will be taken as 300 and if, for example, a concern has worked only double shift for 100 days and triple shift for another 100 days, the extra allowance for double shift will be 1/3 of 50 per cent. of the normal allowance for the whole year and that for triple shift will be 1/3 of 100 per cent. of the normal allowance for the whole year. This applies to all concerns whether the general rate or any special rate applies to them, but does not apply to an item of machinery or plant specially excepted by the letters 'N.E.S.A.' being shown against it. Explanation.—For this purpose the normal allowance means the amount of depreciation allowance for the year calculated in accordance with Rule 8, but excluding the extra depreciation allowance for multiple shift working or for new plant and machinery.

APPENDIX—C

1. Increased rate of depreciation on ocean-going steamers and motor vessels due to war-time conditions.—The rate of depreciation allowable on ocean-going steamers and motor vessels will be increased from 5 per cent. to 6.25 per cent. per annum for the period commencing 1st September 1939 and ending six months after the cessation of the present hostilities,—the date whereof will be notified. This increase will affect years of assessment 1940-41 onwards. In order to secure that all shipping concerns receive the increased allowance for the same length of time, the allowance for the year of assessment 1940-41 will have reference to the proportions falling before and after the end of August 1939 of the trading year which is the "previous year" for Income-tax purposes for that year of assessment.

Example 1.

If the "previous year" were the calendar year 1939, the depreciation allowance for the year of assessment 1940-41 will be computed at the rate of 5 per cent. for 8 months and at 6.25 per cent. for 4 months.

Example 2.

If the "previous year" were the year ending 31st March 1940, the allowance will be computed at the rate of 5 per cent. for 5 months and at 6.25 per cent. for 7 months.

If the assessment for 1940-41 has been closed, then where that assessment has been made at nil due to the depreciation allowances not being entirely wiped off, the additional allowance due for that year under this paragraph will be deducted from the profit assessable for the year 1941-42 and in any other case an adjustment will be made in the tax demand for 1941-42 equal to the difference in the tax demand which would have resulted if the additional allowance had been given in the assessment for 1940-41.

2. The rate of depreciation on second-hand ocean-going steamers and motor vessels.—In the case of a steamer or motor vessel purchased second-hand the normal allowance will be computed by reference to the actual cost of the steamer or the motor vessel concerned to the new owner and its reasonable expectation of life at the date of purchase. The new rate and the method of computation will have effect from the assessment for 1941-42 and not from any earlier assessment.

The following scale is to be used to determine the fractional part of the cost of a steamer or motor vessel that is to be allowed year by year as depreciation for Income-tax purposes, except where at the date of purchase the steamer or the motor vessel concerned is more than 24 years old. In such a case the rate of depreciation to be allowed will be decided by the Central Board of Revenue on the facts of each case:—

Age at date of purchase.		Expectation of life.	Fractional part of cost to be allowed as depreciation each year.
Over years.	Under years.	Years.
0	1	20	1/20
1	2	19	1/19
2	3	18	1/18
3	4	17	1/17
4	5	16	1/16
5	6	15	1/15
6	7	14	1/14
7	8	13	1/13
8	9	12	1/12
9	10	11	1/11
10	11	10	1/10
11	12	9	1/9
12	13	9	1/9
13	14	8	1/8
14	15	8	1/8
15	16	7	1/7
16	17	7	1/7
17	18	7	1/7
18	19	6	1/6
19	20	6	1/6
20	21	5	1/5
21	22	5	1/5
22	23	4	1/4
23	24	4	1/4

The scale given above having been applied to find the normal allowance, the extra allowance for war-time conditions will be given on the lines laid down in paragraph 1 above. As the increased allowance for a new vessel is one-fourth of the normal 5 per cent. of cost, the addition in the case of second-hand steamers or motor vessels is to be taken as  $\frac{1}{4}$  of the normal allowance computed by application of the scale.

Example.

A vessel 12 years old was purchased at the commencement of the 'previous year' to year of assessment 1937-38 for Rs. 5,00,000. According to the scale the 'expectation of life' at the date of its purchase second-hand was 9 years.

For the years of assessment 1941-42 onwards the depreciation allowance would be  $\frac{1}{9}$  of Rs. 5,00,000 = Rs. 55,555.

For years of assessment corresponding to previous years that are chargeable accounting periods for Excess Profits Tax purposes the war-time addition of  $\frac{1}{4}$  referred to in paragraph 1 will be added.

3. Depreciation on additions to ocean-going steamers and motor vessels which are treated as of a capital nature for Income-tax purposes.—Any expenditure which has been treated as capital for Income-tax purposes (e.g., the installation of refrigerating plant or the renewal of engines or boilers) will be added to the prime cost of the steamer or the motor vessel concerned for the purpose of computing depreciation allowance.

The annual allowance in respect of such expenditure will be calculated as follows:—

(a) if the expenditure is or was made before the expiration of the 20 years estimated life of the steamer or the motor vessel, the normal allowance for it will be increased by such a sum as will exhaust or would have exhausted the expenditure over the remaining years of 20 years estimated life;

Example.

An addition of Rs. 60,000 was made to a vessel at the expiration of 17 years of its life. The normal allowance for the addition will be  $\frac{1}{3}$  of Rs. 60,000 = Rs. 20,000 for each of the remaining three years of the vessel's 20 years estimated life;

(b) if the expenditure is or was incurred when the vessel is 20 years old or more, the allowance will be such a sum as will exhaust or would have exhausted the expenditure over the further estimated years of life that would be given by applying the Table in paragraph 2 above, if for "age at date of purchase" there were substituted "age at date of the capital expenditure";

Example.

An addition of Rs. 60,000 was made to a vessel 22 years old. The further estimated life of the vessel, according to the table in paragraph 2 is 4 years. The normal allowance for the addition will, therefore, be  $\frac{1}{4}$  of Rs. 60,000 = Rs. 15,000 for each year of the further estimated life of the vessel;

(c) in respect of a vessel purchased second-hand, the normal allowance for the expenditure on additions to such a vessel will be increased by such a sum as will exhaust or would have exhausted the expenditure over the remaining years of the estimated life of the vessel given in the Table in paragraph 2 above.

Example.

A vessel was over 8 years and below 9 years old when purchased second-hand so that its expectation of life at the date of purchase second-hand was 12 years. After the lapse of 7 years of this expectation of life an addition of Rs. 60,000 was made to it. The normal allowance for the addition will be  $\frac{1}{5}$  of Rs. 60,000 = Rs. 12,000 for each of the remaining five years of the expected life of the vessel.

The increased allowance so calculated will be allowed for the years of assessment 1941-42 onwards. The extra allowance for war time conditions will also be given on the lines laid down in paragraph 1 above, but the aggregate allowances on the additions shall not exceed the cost thereof.

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of April, 1922.

Provided further that where the capital asset was on any previous occasion the subject of negotiations for its sale, exchange or transfer, any option or other money received and retained by the assessee in respect of such negotiations shall be deducted in computing the actual cost to him of such asset.

(3) Where any capital asset became the property of the assessee by succession, inheritance or devolution or under any of the circumstances referred to in the third proviso to sub-section (1), its actual cost allowable to him for the purposes of this section shall be its actual cost to the previous owner thereof, and the provisions of sub-section (2) shall apply accordingly; and where the actual cost to the previous owner cannot be ascertained, the fair market value at the date on which the capital asset became the property of the previous owner shall be deemed to be the actual cost thereof.

- (a) the amount which bears to the total amount of the tax including super-tax which would have been payable on his total income as reduced by the amount of the income so brought into or received in the taxable territories had such reduced income been his total income the same proportion as his total income bears to such reduced income, or
- (b) the amount which bears to the total amount of the tax including super-tax which would have been payable on the amount of the income so brought into or received in the taxable territories had such income been his total income the same proportion as his total income bears to the amount of the income so brought into or received in the taxable territories,

(5) Where the amount of the total income of any assessee is deemed to be the total income reduced under the provisions of Section 15A by an allowance for earned income, the expression 'total income' in this section shall, for the purpose of determining the amount of income-tax (but not super-tax) payable by the assessee, be deemed to refer to his total income so reduced.

(6) Where the total income of an assessee, not being a company, includes any income chargeable under the head "Capital Gains", the tax, including super-tax, payable by him on his total income shall be—

(a) the amount which would have been payable if the amount of such inclusion had not exceeded that limit, plus

(b) one-half of the amount by which the amount of such inclusion exceeds that limit.

(7) Where the total income of a company includes any income chargeable under the head "Capital Gains", the super-tax payable by the company in any year shall be reduced by an amount computed on that part of its total income which consists of such inclusion at the rate of super-tax (excluding the rate of additional super-tax, if any) specified in the case of a company by the annual Act of the Central Legislature fixing the rate or rates of tax for that year.

Provided that such person may, at the time of making any deduction, increase or reduce the amount to be deducted under this sub-section for the purpose of adjusting any excess or deficiency arising out of any previous deduction or failure to deduct.

(2A) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained for the purpose of making the deduction under sub-section (2), there shall be included in the amount payable any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" which is payable to the assessee out of India by or on behalf of the Government and the value in rupees of such income shall be calculated at the prescribed rate of exchange.

(2B) Any person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" to a person not resident in the taxable territories shall at the time of payment deduct income-tax at the maximum rate and also super-tax at the rate or rates applicable to the estimated income of the assessee under this head.

(3) The person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head "Interest on Securities" shall, unless otherwise prescribed in the case of any security of the Central Government, at the time of payment, deduct income-tax but not super-tax on the amount of the interest payable at the maximum rate :

Provided that where the Income-tax Officer gives a certificate in writing (which certificate he shall give in every proper case on the application of the assessee) that to the best of his belief the total income or the total world income of a recipient will be less than the minimum liable to income-tax or will be liable to a rate of income-tax less than the maximum rate, the person responsible for paying any income referred to in this sub-section or in sub-section (2B), as the case may be, to such recipient shall, until such certificate is cancelled by the Income-tax Officer, pay the income without deduction or deduct the tax at such less rate, as the case may be.

(3A) Any person responsible for paying to a person not resident in the taxable territories any interest not being 'Interest on Securities' or any other sum chargeable under the provisions of this Act, shall, at the time of payment, unless he is himself liable to pay income-tax thereon as an agent, deduct income-tax at the maximum rate :

Provided that where the person so payable is a citizen of India or a British subject as defined in Section 1 of the British Nationality Act, 1948, and the Income-tax Officer gives a certificate in writing (which certificate he shall give in every proper case on the application of the assessee) that to the best of his belief the total world income of such person will be less than the minimum liable to income-tax or that his total income will be liable to a rate of income-tax less than the maximum rate, the person responsible for paying any income referred to in this sub-section shall, until such certificate is cancelled by the Income-tax Officer, pay the income without deduction or deduct the tax at such less rate, as the case may be :

Provided further that nothing in this sub-section shall apply to any payment made in the course of transactions in respect of which the person responsible for making the payment is deemed under the first proviso to Section 43 not to be an agent of the payee.

(3B) Where the Income-tax Officer has reason to believe that the total world income of any person residing out of the taxable territories to whom any interest not being "Interest on Securities" or any other sum chargeable under this Act is payable, will in any year exceed the maximum amount which is not chargeable with super-tax under the law for the time being in force, he may, by order in writing, require the person responsible for making such payments to such person to deduct at the time of payment super-tax at the rates determined by the Income-tax Officer to be applicable to the total world income of such person in that year.

(3C) Where the person responsible for paying any interest not being "Interest on Securities" or any other sum chargeable under this Act to any person makes to that person in any year payments exceeding in the aggregate the maximum amount which is not chargeable with super-tax under the law for the time being in force, the person responsible for making such payments, shall, if he has not reason to believe that the recipient is resident in the taxable territories and no order under subsection (3B) has been received in respect of such recipient, deduct at the time of payment super-tax on the amount by which the total amount of such payments exceeds the maximum amount not chargeable with super-tax at the rate applicable to such excess.

(3D) Where the Income-tax Officer has reason to believe that any person, who is a shareholder in a company, is resident out of the taxable territories and that the total world income of such person will in any year exceed the maximum amount which is not chargeable to super-tax under the law for the time being in force, he may, by order in writing, require the principal officer of the company to deduct at the time of payment of any dividend from the company to the shareholder in that year super-tax at such rate as the Income-tax Officer may determine as being the rate applicable in respect of the income of the shareholder in that year.

(3E) If in any year the amount of any dividend or the aggregate amount of any dividends paid to any shareholder by an Indian Company or by a Company which has made such effective arrangements as may be prescribed for the deduction of super-tax from such dividends (increased in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 16) exceeds the maximum amount of the total income of a person which is not chargeable to super-tax under the law for the time being in force, and the principal officer of the company has no reason to believe that the shareholder is resident in the taxable territories and no order under sub-section (3D) has been received in respect of such shareholder by the principal officer from the Income-tax Officer, the principal officer shall at the time of payment deduct super-tax on the amount of such excess at the rate which would be applicable under the - law for the time being in force if the amount of such dividend or dividends (increased as aforesaid) constituted the whole total income of the shareholder.

(4) All sums deducted in accordance with the provisions of this section shall, for the purpose of computing the income of an assessee, be deemed to be income received.

(5) Any deduction made in accordance with the provisions of this section and any sum by which a dividend has been increased under sub-section (2) of Section 16 shall be treated as a payment of income-tax or super-tax on behalf of the person from whose income the deduction was made, or of the owner of the security or of the shareholder, as the case may be, and credit shall be given to him therefor in the assessment, if any, made for the following year under this Act :

Provided that, if such person or such owner obtains, in accordance with the provisions of this Act, a refund of any portion of the tax so deducted, no credit shall be given for the amount of such refund :

Provided further that where such person or owner is a person whose income is included under the provisions of clause (c) of sub-section (1) or sub-section (3) of Section 16, Section 44D or Section 44E in the total income of another person such other person shall be deemed to be the person or owner on whose behalf payment has been made and to whom credit shall be given in the assessment for the following year.

(6) All sums deducted in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be paid within the prescribed time by the person making the deduction to the credit of the Central Government or as the Central Board of Revenue directs.

(7) If any such person does not deduct or after deducting fails to pay the tax as required by or under this section, he, and in the cases specified in sub-sections (3D) and (3E) the company of which he is the principal officer shall, without prejudice to any other consequences which he or it may incur, be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of the tax :

Provided that the Income-tax Officer shall not make a direction under sub-section (1) of Section 46 for the recovery of any penalty from such person unless satisfied that such person has wilfully failed to deduct and pay the tax.

(8) The power to levy by deduction under this section shall be without prejudice to any other mode of recovery.

(9) Every person deducting income-tax or super-tax in accordance with the provisions of sub-sections (3), (3A), (3B), (3C), (3D), or (3E), shall, at the time of payment of the sum from which tax has been deducted, furnish to the person to whom such payment is made a certificate to the effect that income-tax or super-tax has been deducted, and specifying the amount so deducted, the rate at which the tax has been deducted and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

18A. ADVANCE PAYMENT OF TAX.—(1) (a) In the case of income in respect of which provision is not made under Section 18 for deduction of income-tax at the time of payment, the Income-tax Officer may, on or after the 1st day of April in any financial year, by order in writing, require an assessee to pay quarterly to the credit of the Central Government on the 15th day of June, 15th day of September, 15th day of December and 15th day of March in that year, respectively, an amount equal to one quarter of the income-tax and super-tax payable on so much of such income as is included in his total income of the latest previous year in respect of which he has been assessed, if that total income exceeded six thousand rupees. Such income-tax and super-tax shall be calculated at the rates in force for the financial year in which he is required to pay the tax, and shall bear to the total amount of income-tax and super-tax so calculated on the said total income the same proportion as the amount of such inclusions bears to his total income or, in cases where under the provisions of sub-section (1) of Section 17 both income-tax and super-tax or super-tax are chargeable with reference to the total world income, shall bear to the total amount of income-tax and super-tax which would have been payable on his total world income of the said previous year had it been his total income the same proportion as the amount of such inclusions bears to his total world income :

Provided that, where the previous year of the assessee in respect of any source of income ends after the 31st day of December and before the 30th day of April, the order in writing issued by the Income-tax Officer requiring the payment of income-tax and super-tax on that source of income shall substitute for the four quarterly payments hereinbefore specified, three payments of equal amount to be made on the 15th day of September, the 15th day of December and the 15th day of March, respectively :

Provided further that, if the assessee is a partner of a registered firm and an assessment of the firm has been completed for a previous year later than that for which the assessee's last assessment has been completed, his share in the profit of the firm shall, for the purposes of this sub-section, be included in his total income on the basis of the latest assessment of the firm :

Provided further that, if after the making of an order by the Income-tax Officer, and before the 15th day of February of the financial year an assessment of the assessee or of the registered firm of which he is a partner is completed in respect of a previous year later than that referred to in the order of the Income-tax Officer, the Income-tax Officer may make an amended order requiring the assessee to pay in one instalment on the specified date, or in equal instalments on the specified dates if more than one, falling after the date of the amended order, the tax computed on the revised basis as reduced by the amount, if any, paid in accordance with the original order; but if the amount already paid exceeds the tax determined on the revised basis, the excess shall be refunded.

(b) If the notice of demand issued under Section 29 in pursuance of the order under clause (a) of this sub-section is served after any of the dates on which the instalments specified therein are payable, the tax shall be payable in equal instalments on each of such of those dates as fall after the date of the service of the notice of demand, or in one sum on the 15th day of March if the notice is served after the 15th day of December.

(2) If any assessee who is required to pay tax by an order under sub-section (1) estimates at any time before the last instalment is due that the part of his income to which that sub-section applies for the period which would be the previous year for an assessment for the year next following is less than the income on which he is required to pay tax and accordingly wishes to pay an amount less than the amount which he is so required to pay, he may send to the Income-tax Officer an estimate of the tax payable by him calculated in the manner laid down in sub-section (1) on that part of his income for such period, and shall pay such amount as accords with his estimate in equal instalments on such of the dates specified in sub-section (1)(a) as have expired or in one sum if only the last of such dates has not expired :

Provided that the assessee may send a revised estimate of the tax payable by him before any one of the dates specified in sub-section (1)(a) and adjust any excess or deficiency in respect of any instalment already paid in a subsequent instalment or in subsequent instalments.

(3) Any person who has not hitherto been assessed shall, before the 15th day of March in each financial year, if his total income of the period which would be the previous year for an assessment for the financial year next following is likely to exceed six thousand rupees, send to the Income-tax Officer an estimate of the tax payable by him on that part of his income to which provisions of Section 18 do not apply of the said previous year calculated in the manner laid down in sub-section (1), and shall pay the amount, on such of the dates specified in the sub-section as have not expired, by instalments which may be revised according to the proviso to sub-section (2).

(4) Where part of the income to which sub-section (1), (2) or (3) applies consists of any income of the nature of commission which is receivable periodically and is not received or adjusted by the payer in the assessee's account before any of the quarterly instalments of tax become due, he may defer payment of tax on that part of his income to the date on which such income would be normally received or adjusted and if he does so he shall communicate to the Income-tax Officer the date to which such payment is deferred :

Provided that, if the tax of which the payment is deferred is not paid within fifteen days of the date on which such income or part thereof is received or adjusted by the payer in the assessee's account, the tax shall be payable with six per cent. simple interest per annum from the date of such receipt or adjustment to the date of payment of the tax.

(5) The Central Government shall pay on any amount paid under this section simple interest at two per cent. per annum from the date of payment to the date of the provisional assessment made under Section 23B or if no such assessment has been made, to the date of the assessment (hereinafter called the 'regular assessment') made under Section 23 of the income, profits and gains of the previous year for an assessment for the year next following the year in which the amount was payable :

Provided that on any portion of such amount which is refunded under the foregoing provisions of this section interest shall be payable only up to the date on which the refund was made.

(6) Where in any year an assessee has paid tax under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3) on the basis of his own estimate, and the tax so paid is less than eighty per cent. of the tax determined on the basis of the regular assessment, so far as such tax relates to income to which the provisions of Section 18 do not apply and so far as it is not due to variations in the rates of tax made by the Finance Act enacted for the year for which the regular assessment is made, simple interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the first day of January in the financial year in which the tax was paid up to the date of the said regular assessment shall be payable by the assessee upon the amount by which the tax so paid falls short of the said eighty per cent :

Provided that where a provisional assessment is made under Section 23B, interest shall be calculated in accordance with the foregoing provision up to the date on which the tax as provisionally assessed is paid, and thereafter interest shall be calculated at the rate of aforesaid on the amount by which the tax as so assessed (in so far as it relates to income to which the provisions of Section 18 do not apply) falls short of the said eighty per cent :

Provided also that, where, as a result of an appeal under Section 31 or Section 33 or of a revision under Section 33A or of a reference to the High Court under Section 66, the amount on which interest was payable under this sub-section has been reduced the interest shall be reduced accordingly and the excess interest paid, if any, shall be refunded together with the amount of income-tax that is refundable :

Provided further that, where a business, profession or vocation is newly set up and is assessable on the income, profits and gains of its first previous year in the financial year following that in which it is set up, the interest payable shall be computed from the 1st day of April of the said financial year.

(7) Where, on making the regular assessment, the Income-tax Officer finds that any assessee has—

(a) under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3) underestimated the tax payable by him and thereby reduced the amount payable in any of the first three instalments, or

(b) under sub-section (4) wrongly deferred the payment of tax on a part of his income, he may direct that the assessee shall pay simple interest at six per cent. per annum, in the case referred to in clause (a) for the period during which the payment was deficient on the difference between the amount paid in each such instalment and the amount which should have been paid having regard to the aggregate tax actually paid under this section during the year, and the case referred to in clause (b) for the period during which the payment of tax was wrongly deferred on the amount of which the payment was so deferred :

Provided that for the purposes of this sub-section any instalment due before the expiry of six months from the commencement of the previous year in respect of which it is to be paid shall be deemed to have become due fifteen days after the expiry of the said six months.

(8) Where, on making the regular assessment, the Income-tax Officer finds that no payment of tax has been made in accordance with the fore-going provisions of this section, interest calculated in the manner laid down in sub-section (6) shall be added to the tax as determined on the basis of the regular assessment.

(9) If the Income-tax Officer, in the course of any proceedings in connection with the regular assessment, is satisfied that any assessee—

(a) has furnished under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3) estimates of the tax payable by him which he knew or had reason to believe to be untrue, or

(b) has without reasonable cause failed to comply with the provisions of sub-section (3), the assessee shall be deemed, in the case referred to in clause (a), to have deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars of his income, and in the case referred to in clause (b), to have failed to furnish the return of his total income; and the provision of Section 28, so far as may be, shall apply accordingly :

• Provided that the amount of penalty leviable shall, in the case referred to in clause (a), be a sum not exceeding one-and-a-half times the amount by which the tax actually paid during the year under the provisions of this section falls short of the tax that should have been paid by the assessee under sub-section (1) or eighty per cent. of the tax determined on the basis of the regular assessment as modified in the manner provided in sub-section (6), whichever is the less, and in the case referred to in clause (b), one-and-a-half times the said eighty per cent.

(10) (a) If any assessee does not pay on the specified dates any instalment of tax that he is required to pay under sub-section (1) and does not, before the date on which any such instalment as is not paid becomes due, send under sub-section (2) an estimate or a revised estimate of the tax payable by him, he shall be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of such instalment or instalments.

(b) If any assessee has sent under sub-section (2) or sub-section (3) an estimate or a revised estimate of the tax payable by him, but does not pay any instalment in accordance therewith on the date or dates specified in sub-section (1), he shall be deemed to be an assessee in default in respect of such instalment or instalments :

Provided that the assessee shall not, under clause (a) or (b), be deemed to be in default in respect of any amount of which the payment is deferred under sub-section (4) until after the date communicated by him to the Income-tax Officer under that sub-section.

(11) Any sum other than a penalty or interest paid by or recovered from an assessee in pursuance of the provisions of this section shall be treated as a payment of tax in respect of the income of the period which would be the previous year for an assessment for the financial year next following the year in which it was payable, and credit therefor shall be given to the assessee in the regular assessment.

(12) Any income chargeable under the head " Capital gains " shall not be taken into account for any of the purposes of this section.

19. PAYMENTS IN OTHER CASES.—In the case of income in respect of which provision is not made under Section 18 for deduction of income-tax at the time of payment, and in any case where income-tax has not been deducted in accordance with the provisions of Section 18, income-tax shall be payable by the assessee direct.

19A. SUPPLY OF INFORMATION REGARDING DIVIDENDS.—The principal officer of every company which is an Indian Company or a Company which has made such effective arrangements as may be prescribed for the declaration and payment of dividends in the taxable territories shall, on or before the 15th day of June in each year furnish to the prescribed officer a return in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner of the names and of the addresses, as entered in the register of shareholders maintained by the company, of the shareholders to whom a dividend or aggregate dividends exceeding such amount as may be prescribed in this behalf has or have been distributed during the preceding year and of the amount so distributed to each such shareholder.

SUPPLY OF INFORMATION REGARDING INTEREST.—The person responsible for paying any interest not being "Interest on Securities" shall, on or before the fifteenth day of June in each year, furnish to the prescribed officer a return in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner of the names and addresses of all persons to whom during the previous financial year he has paid interest or aggregate interest exceeding such amount not being less than four hundred rupees as may be prescribed in this behalf, together with the amount paid to each such person.

21. - (a) the name and, so far as it is known, the address, of every person who was receiving on the said 31st day of March, or has received or to whom was due during the year ending on that date, from the authority, company, body, association or private employer, as the case may be, any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" of such amount as may be prescribed ;

Provided that the Income-tax Officer may in his discretion extend the date for the delivery of the return in the case of any person or class of persons.

(2) In the case of any person whose total income is, in the Income-tax Officer's opinion, of such an amount as to render such person liable to income-tax, the Income-tax Officer may serve a notice upon him requiring him to furnish, within such period, not being less than thirty days, as may be specified in the notice, a return in the prescribed form and verified in the prescribed manner setting forth (along with such other particulars as may be provided for in the notice) his total income and total world income during the previous year.

Provided that the Income-tax Officer may in his discretion extend the date for the delivery of the return.

(3) If any person has not furnished a return within the time allowed by or under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), or having furnished a return under either of those sub-sections, discovers any omission or wrong statement therein, he may furnish a return or a revised return, as the case may be, at any time before the assessment is made.

(4) The Income-tax Officer may serve on any person who has made a return under sub-section (1) or upon whom a notice has been served under sub-section (2) a notice requiring him, on a date to be therein specified, to produce, or cause to be produced, such accounts or documents as the Income-tax Officer may require:

*Provided that the Income-tax Officer shall not require the production of any accounts relating to a period more than three years prior to the previous year.

(5) The prescribed form of the returns referred to in sub-sections (1) and (2) shall, in the case of an assessee engaged in any business, profession or vocation, require him to furnish particulars of the location and style of the principal place wherein he carries on the business, profession or vocation and of any branches thereof, the names and addresses of his partners, if any, in such business, profession or vocation and the extent of the share of the assessee and the shares of all such partners in the profits of the business, profession or vocation and any branches thereof.

23. ASSESSMENT.—(1) If the Income-tax Officer is satisfied without requiring the presence of the assessee or the production by him of any evidence that a return made under Section 22 is correct and complete, he shall assess the total income of the assessee, and shall determine the sum payable by him on the basis of such return.

(2) If the Income-tax Officer is not satisfied without requiring the presence of the person who made the return or the production of evidence that a return made under Section 22 is correct and complete, he shall serve on such person, a notice requiring him, on a date to be therein specified, either to attend at the Income-tax Officer's office or to produce, or to cause to be there produced, any evidence on which such person may rely in support of the return.

(3) On the day specified in the notice issued under sub-section (2), or as soon afterwards as may be, the Income-tax Officer, after hearing such evidence as such person may produce and such other evidence as the Income-tax Officer may require, on specified points, shall, by an order in writing, assess the total income of the assessee, and determine the sum payable by him on the basis of such assessment.

(4) If any person fails to make the return required by any notice given under sub-section (2) of Section 22 and has not made a return or a revised return under sub-section (3) of the same section or fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued under sub-section (4) of the same section, or, having made a return, fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued under sub-section (2) of this section, the Income-tax Officer shall make the assessment to the best of his judgment and determine the sum payable by the assessee on the basis of such assessment and, in the case of a firm, may refuse to register it or may cancel its registration if it is already registered.

Provided that the registration of a firm shall not be cancelled until fourteen days have elapsed from the issue of a notice by the Income-tax Officer to the firm intimating his intention to cancel its registration.

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sub-sections, when the assessee is a firm and the total income of the firm has been assessed under sub-section (1), sub-section (3) or sub-section (4), as the case may be,—

(a) in the case of a registered firm, the sum payable by the firm itself shall not be determined but the total income of each partner of the firm, including therein his share of its income, profits and gains of the previous year, shall be determined:

Provided that if such share of any partner is a loss it shall be set off against his other income or carried forward and set off in accordance with the provisions of Section 24:

Provided further that when any of such partners is a person not resident in the taxable territories, his share of the income, profits and gains of the firm shall be assessed on the firm at the rates which would be applicable if it were assessed on him personally, and the sum so determined as payable shall be paid by the firm:

Provided also that if at the time of assessment of any partner of a registered firm, the Income-tax Officer is of opinion that the partner is residing in Pakistan, the partner's share of the income, profits and gains of the firm shall be assessed on the firm in the manner laid down in the preceding proviso and the sum so determined as payable shall be paid by the firm; and

(b) in the case of an unregistered firm, the Income-tax Officer may instead of determining, the sum payable by the firm itself proceed in the manner laid down in clause (a) as applicable to a registered firm, if, in his opinion, the aggregate amount of the tax including super-tax, if any, payable by the partners under such procedure would be greater than the aggregate amount which would be payable by the firm and the partners individually if the firm were assessed as an unregistered firm.

(6) Whenever the Income-tax Officer makes a determination in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (5), he shall notify to the firm by an order in writing the amount of the total income on which the determination has been based and the apportionment thereof between the several partners.

23A. POWER TO ASSESS INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS OF CERTAIN COMPANIES.—(1) Where the Income-tax officer is satisfied that in respect of any previous year the profits and gains distributed as dividends by any company up to the end of the sixth month after its accounts for that previous year are laid before the company in general meeting are less than sixty per cent. of the assessable income of the company of that previous year, as reduced by the amount of income-tax and super-tax payable by the company in respect thereof he shall, unless he is satisfied that having regard to losses incurred by the Company in earlier years or to the smallness of the profit made, the payment of a dividend or a larger dividend than that declared would be unreasonable, make with the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner an order in writing that the undistributed portion of the assessable income of the company of that previous year as computed for income-tax purposes and reduced by the amount of income-tax and super-tax payable by the company in respect thereof shall be deemed to have been distributed as dividends amongst the shareholders as at the date of the general meeting aforesaid, and thereupon the proportionate share thereof of each shareholder shall be included in the total income of such shareholder for the purpose of assessing his total income :

Provided that when the reserves representing accumulations of past profits which have not been the subject of an order under this sub-section exceed the paid up capital of the company, together with any loan capital which is the property of the shareholders, or the actual cost of the fixed assets of the company whichever of these is greater, this section shall apply, as if instead of the words ' sixty per cent.' the words ' one hundred per cent.' were substituted :

Provided further that no order under this sub-section shall be made where the company has distributed not less than fifty-five per cent. of the assessable income of the company as reduced by the amount of income-tax and super-tax payable by the company in respect thereof, unless the company, on receipt of a notice from the Income-tax Officer that he proposes to make such an order, fails to make within three months of the receipt of such notice a further distribution of its profits and gains so that the total distribution made is not less than sixty per cent. of the assessable income of the company of the previous year concerned as reduced by the amount of income-tax and super-tax payable by the company in respect thereof :

Provided further that this sub-section shall not apply to any company in which the public are substantially interested or to a subsidiary company of such a company if the whole of the share capital of such subsidiary company is held by the parent company or by the nominees thereof.

Explanation.—For the purpose of this sub-section,— a company shall be deemed to be a company in which the public are substantially interested if shares of the company (not being shares entitled to a fixed rate of dividend, whether with or without a further right to participate in profits) carrying not less than twenty-five per cent. of the voting power have been allotted unconditionally to, or acquired unconditionally by, and are at the end of the previous year beneficially held by the public (not including a company to which the provisions of this sub-section apply), and if any such shares have in the course of such previous years been the subject of dealings in any stock exchange in the taxable territories or are in fact freely transferable by the holders to other members of the public.

(2) The Inspecting Assistant Commissioner shall not give his approval to any order proposed to be passed by the Income-tax Officer under this section until he has given the company concerned an opportunity of being heard.

(3) (i) omitted

(ii) Where the proportionate share of any member of a company in the undistributed profits and gains of the company has been included in his total income under the provision of sub-section (1) the tax payable, in respect thereof shall be recoverable from the company, if it cannot be recovered from such member.

(iii) Where tax is recoverable from a company under this sub-section, a notice of demand shall be served upon it in the prescribed form showing the sum so payable, and such company shall be deemed to be the assessee in respect of such sum, for the purposes of Chapter VI.

(4) Where tax has been paid in respect of any undistributed profits and gains of a company under this section, and such profits and gains are subsequently distributed in any year, the proportionate share therein of any member of the company shall be excluded in computing his total income of that year.

(5) When a company is a shareholder deemed under sub-section (1) to have received a dividend, the amount of the dividend thus deemed to have been paid to it shall be deemed to be part of its total income for the purpose also of the application of that sub-section to distributions of profits by that company.

23B. POWER TO MAKE PROVISIONAL ASSESSMENT IN ADVANCE OF REGULAR ASSESSMENT.—(1) The Income-tax Officer may, at any time after the receipt of a return made under Section 22, proceed to make in a summary manner, a provisional assessment of the tax payable by the assessee, on the basis of his return and the accounts and documents, if any, accompanying it, after giving due effect to (i) the allowance referred to in paragraph (b) of the proviso to clause (vi) of sub-section (2) of Section 10, and (ii) any loss carried forward under sub-section (2) of Section 24.

(2) A partner of a firm may be provisionally assessed under sub-section (1) in respect of his share in the firm's income, profits and gains, if its return has been received, although the return of the partner himself may not have been received.

(3) A firm may be provisionally assessed under sub-section (1) as if it were an unregistered firm, unless the firm fulfils such conditions as the Central Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, specify in that behalf.

(4) There shall be no right of appeal against a provisional assessment made under sub-section (1).

(5) For the avoidance of doubt, it is hereby declared that the provisions of Section 45 (except the first proviso) and Section 46 apply in relation to any tax payable in pursuance of a provisional assessment made under sub-section (1) as if it were a regular assessment made under Section 23.

(6) Income-tax paid or deemed to have been paid under Section 18 or Section 18A in respect of any income provisionally assessed under sub-section (1), shall be deemed to have been paid towards the provisional assessment.

(7) After a regular assessment has been made under Section 23, any amount paid or deemed to have been paid towards a provisional assessment made under sub-section (1), shall be deemed to have been paid towards the regular assessment; and where the amount paid or deemed to have been paid towards the provisional assessment, exceeds the amount payable under the regular assessment, the excess shall be refunded to the assessee.

(8) Nothing done or suffered by reason or in consequence of any provisional assessment made under this section shall prejudice the determination on the merits, of any issue which may arise in the course of the regular assessment under Section 23.

24. SET-OFF OF LOSS IN COMPUTING AGGREGATE INCOME.—

(1) Where any assessee sustains a loss of profits or gains in any year under any of the heads mentioned in Section 6, he shall be entitled to have the amount of the loss set off against his income, profits or gains under any other head in that year :

Provided that where the loss sustained is a loss of profits or gains which would but for the loss have accrued or arisen within India, but outside the taxable territories and would, under the provisions of clause (c) of sub-section (2) of Section 14, have been exempt from tax, such loss shall not be set off except against profits or gains accruing or arising within India but outside the taxable territories and exempt from tax under the said provisions :

Provided further that where the assessee is an unregistered firm which has not been assessed under the provisions of clause (b) of sub-section (5) of Section 23 in the manner applicable to a registered firm, any such loss shall be set off only against the income, profits and gains of the firm and not against the income, profits and gains of any of the partners of the firm; and where the assessee is a registered firm, any loss which cannot be set off against other income, profits and gains of the firm shall be apportioned between the partners of the firm and they alone shall be entitled to have the amount of the loss set off under this section.

(2) Where any assessee sustains a loss of profits or gains in any year, being a previous year not earlier than the previous year for the assessment for the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1940, under the head " Profits and gains of business, profession or vocation ", and the loss cannot be wholly set off under sub-section (1), the portion not so set off shall be carried forward to the following year and set off against the profits and gains, if any, of the assessee from the same business, profession or vocation for that year; and if it cannot be wholly so set off, the amount of loss not so set off shall be carried forward to the following year, and so on; but no loss shall be so carried forward for more than six years, and a loss arising in the previous years for the assessment for the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1940, the 31st day of March, 1941, the 31st day of March, 1942, the 31st day of March, 1943, and the 31st day of March, 1944, respectively, shall be carried forward only for one, two, three, four and five years respectively :

Provided that—

- (a) where the loss sustained is a loss of profits and gains of a business, profession or vocation to which the first proviso to sub-section (1) is applicable, and the profits and gains of that business, profession or vocation are, under the provisions of clause (c) of sub-section (2) of Section 14, exempt from tax, such loss shall not be set off except against profits and gains accruing or arising in India, but outside the taxable territories from the same business, profession or vocation and exempt from tax under the said provisions ;
- (b) where depreciation allowance is, under clause (b) of the proviso to clause (vi) of sub-section (2) of Section 10, also to be carried forward, effect shall first be given to the provisions of this sub-section;
- (c) nothing herein contained shall entitle any assessee, being a registered firm, to have carried forward and set off any loss which has been apportioned between the partners, under the proviso to sub-section (1), or entitle any assessee, being a partner in an unregistered firm which has been assessed under the provisions of clause (b) of sub-section (5) of Section 23 in the manner applicable to a registered firm, to have carried forward and set off against his own income any loss sustained by the firm ;

- (d) where an unregistered firm is assessed as a registered firm under clause (b) of sub-section (5) of Section 23, during any year, its losses shall also be carried forward and set off under this section as if it were a registered firm ;
- (e) where a change has occurred in the constitution of a firm, nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle the firm to have set off so much of the loss proportionate to the share of a retired or deceased partner computed in accordance with the provisions of clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 16 as exceeds his share of profits, if any, of the previous year in the firm, or to entitle any partner to the benefit of any portion of the said loss which is not apportionable to him under the said clause (b), and where any person carrying on any business, profession or vocation has been succeeded in such capacity by another person, otherwise than by inheritance, nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle any person other than the person incurring the loss to have it set off against his income, profits or gains.

(2A) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), where the loss sustained is a loss falling under the head "Capital gains", such loss shall not be set off except against any profits and gains falling under that head.

(2B) Where an assessee sustained a loss such as is referred to in sub-section (2A) and the loss cannot be wholly set off in accordance with the provisions of that sub-section, the portion not so set off shall be carried forward to the following year and set off against capital gains for that year, and if cannot be set off, the amount thereof not so set off shall be carried forward to the following year and so on, so however that no such loss shall be so carried forward for more than six years :

Provided that where the loss sustained in any previous year does not exceed fifteen thousand rupees, it shall not be carried forward.

(3) When, in the course of the assessment of the total income of any assessee, it is established that a loss of profits or gains has taken place which he is entitled to have set off under the provisions of this section, the Income-tax Officer shall notify to the assessee by order in writing the amount of the loss as computed by him for the purposes of this section.

24A. ASSESSMENT IN CASE OF DEPARTURE FROM THE TAXABLE TERRITORIES.—(1) When it appears to the Income-tax Officer that any person may leave the taxable territories during the current financial year, or shortly after its expiry, and that he has no present intention of returning, the Income-tax Officer may proceed to assess him on his total income of the period from the expiry of the last previous year of which the income has been assessed in his hands to the probable date of his departure from the taxable territories, or where he has not been previously assessed, on his total income of the period up to the probable date of his departure from the taxable territories. The assessment shall be made on the total income of each completed previous year included in such period at the rate at which such income would have been charged had it been fully assessed, and as respects the period from the expiry of the last of such completed previous years to the probable date of departure the Income-tax Officer shall estimate the total income of such person during such period and assess it at the rate in force for the financial year in which such assessment is made :

Provided that nothing herein contained shall authorise an Income-tax Officer to assess any income, profits or gains which have escaped assessment or have been under-assessed, or have been assessed at too low a rate, or have been the subject of excessive relief under this Act but in respect of which he is debarred from issuing a notice under Section 34.

(2) For the purpose of making an assessment under sub-section (1) the Income-tax Officer may serve a notice upon such person requiring him to furnish, within such time not being less than seven days as may be specified in the notice, a return in the same form and verified in the same manner as a return under sub-section (2) of Section 22, setting forth (along with such other particulars as may be provided for in the notice) his total income for each of the completed previous years comprised in the relevant period referred to in the first sentence of sub-section (1) and his estimated total income for the period from the expiry of the last such completed previous year to the probable date of his departure; and the provisions of this Act shall, so far as may be, apply as if the notice were a notice issued under sub-section (2) of Section 22.

24B. TAX OF DECEASED PERSON PAYABLE BY REPRESENTATIVE.—(1) Where a person dies, his executor, administrator or other legal representative shall be liable to pay out of the estate of the deceased person to the extent to which the estate is capable of meeting the charge the tax assessed as payable by such person, or any tax which would have been payable by him under this Act if he had not died.

(2) Where a person dies before the publication of the notice referred to in sub-section (1) of Section 22 or before he is served with a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22 or Section 34, as the case may be, his executor, administrator or other legal representative shall, on the serving of the notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22 or under Section 34, as the case may be, comply therewith, and the Income-tax Officer may proceed to assess the total income of the deceased person as if such executor, administrator or other legal representative were the assessee.

(3) Where a person dies, without having furnished a return which he has been required to furnish under the provisions of Section 22, or having furnished a return which the Income-tax Officer has reason to believe to be incorrect or incomplete, the Income-tax Officer may make an assessment of the total income of such person and determine the tax payable by him on the basis of such assessment, and for this purpose may, by the issue of the appropriate notice which would have had to be served upon the deceased person had he survived, require from the executor, administrator or other legal representative of the deceased person any accounts, documents or other evidence which he might under the provisions of Sections 22 and 23 have required from the deceased person.

25. ASSESSMENT IN CASE OF DISCONTINUED BUSINESS.—(1) Where any business, profession or vocation to which sub-section (3) is not applicable is discontinued in any year, an assessment may be made in that year on the basis of the income, profits or gains of the period between the end of the previous year and the date of such discontinuance in addition to the assessment, if any, made on the basis of the income, profits or gains of the previous year.

(2) Any person discontinuing any such business, profession or vocation shall give to the Income-tax Officer notice of such discontinuance within fifteen days thereof, and, where any person fails to give the notice required by this sub-section, the Income-tax Officer may direct that a sum shall be recovered from him by way of penalty not exceeding the amount of tax subsequently assessed on him in respect of any income, profits or gains of the business, profession or vocation up to the date of its discontinuance.

(3) Where any business, profession or vocation on which tax was at any time charged under the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918 (VII of 1918), is discontinued, then, unless there has been a succession by virtue of which the provisions of sub-section (4) have been rendered applicable no tax shall be payable in respect of the income, profits and gains of the period between the end of the previous year and the date of such discontinuance, and the assessee may further claim that the income, profits and gains of the previous year shall be deemed to have been the income, profits and gains of the said period. Where any such claim is made an assessment shall be made on the basis of the income, profits and gains of the said period, and if an amount of tax has already been paid in respect of the income, profits and gains of the previous year exceeding the amount payable on the basis of such assessment, a refund shall be given of the difference.

(4) Where the person who was at the commencement of the Indian Income-tax (Amendment) Act, 1939 (VII of 1939), carrying on any business, profession or vocation on which tax was at any time charged under the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918 (VII of 1918), is succeeded in such capacity by another person, the change not being merely a change in the constitution of a partnership, no tax shall be payable by the first mentioned person in respect of the income, profits and gains of the period between the end of the previous year and the date of such succession, and such person may further claim that the income, profits and gains of the previous year shall be deemed to have been the income, profits and gains of the said period. Where any such claim is made, an assessment shall be made on the basis of the income, profits and gains of the said period, and, if an amount of tax has already been paid in respect of the income, profits and gains of the previous year exceeding the amount payable on the basis of such assessment, a refund shall be given of the difference :

Provided that sub-sections (3) and (4) shall not apply—

- (a) to super-tax except where the income, profits and gains of the business, profession or vocation were assessed to super-tax for the first time either for the year beginning on the 1st day of April, 1920, or for the year beginning on the 1st day of April, 1921 ;
- (b) to a business, profession or vocation on which income-tax was at any time charged in the hands of a company under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1886 (11 of 1886), or on which income-tax would have been charged in the hands of a company for the assessment year ending on the 31st day of March, 1918, if the company having been in existence in that year had also been in existence in the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1917.

(5) No claim to the relief afforded under sub-section (3) or sub-section (4) shall be entertained unless it is made before the expiry of one year from the date on which the business, profession or vocation was discontinued or the succession took place, as the case may be.

- (6) Where an assessment is to be made under sub-section (1), sub-section (3), or sub-section (4), the Income-tax Officer may serve on the person whose income, profits and gains are to be assessed, or, in the case of a firm, on any person who was a member of such firm at the time of its discontinuance, or, in the case of a company, on the principal officer thereof, a notice containing all or any of the requirements which may be included in a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22, and the provisions of this Act shall, so far as may be, apply accordingly as if the notice were a notice issued under that sub-section.

25A. ASSESSMENT AFTER PARTITION OF A HINDU UNDIVIDED FAMILY.—(1) Where, at the time of making an assessment under Section 23, it is claimed by or on behalf of any member of a Hindu family hitherto assessed as undivided that a partition has taken place among the members of such family, the Income-tax Officer shall make such inquiry thereinto as he may think fit, and, if he is satisfied that the joint family property has been partitioned among the various members or groups of members in definite portions he shall record an order to that effect :

Provided that no such order shall be recorded until notices of the inquiry have been served on all the members of the family.

(2) Where such an order has been passed, or where any person has succeeded to a business, profession or vocation formerly carried on by a Hindu undivided family whose joint family property has been partitioned on or after the last day on which it carried on such business, profession or vocation, the Income-tax Officer shall make an assessment of the total income received by or on behalf of the joint family as such, as if no partition had taken place, and each member or group of members shall, in addition to any income-tax for which he or it may be separately liable and notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1) of Section 14, be liable for a share of the tax on the income so assessed according to the portion of the joint family property allotted to him or it; and the Income-tax officer shall make assessments accordingly on the various members and groups of members in accordance with the provisions of Section 23 :

Provided that all the members and groups of members whose joint family property has been partitioned shall be liable jointly and severally for the tax assessed on the total income received by or on behalf of the joint family as such.

(3) Where such an order has not been passed in respect of a Hindu family hitherto assessed as undivided, such family shall be deemed, for the purposes of this Act, to continue to be a Hindu undivided family.

26. CHANGE IN CONSTITUTION OF A FIRM.—(1) Where, at the time of making an assessment under Section 23, it is found that a change has occurred in the constitution of a firm or that a firm has been newly constituted, the assessment shall be made on the firm as constituted at the time of making the assessment :

Provided that the income, profits and gains of the previous year shall, for the purpose of inclusion in the total incomes of the partners, be apportioned between the partners who in such previous year were entitled to receive the same :

Provided further that when the tax assessed upon a partner cannot be recovered from him it shall be recovered from the firm as constituted at the time of making the assessment.

(2) Where a person carrying on any business, profession or vocation has been succeeded in such capacity by another person, such person and such other person shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (4) of Section 25, each be assessed in respect of his actual share, if any, of the income, profits and gains of the previous year :

Provided that, when the person succeeded in the business, profession or vocation cannot be found, the assessment of the profits of the year in which the succession took place up to the date of succession, and for the year preceding that year shall be made on the person succeeding him in like manner and to the same amount as it would have been made on the person succeeded or when the tax in respect of the assessment made for either of such years assessed on the person succeeded cannot be recovered from him, it shall be payable by and recoverable from the person succeeding, and such person shall be entitled to recover from the person succeeded the amount of any tax so paid.

26A. PROCEDURE IN REGISTRATION OF FIRMS.—(1) Application may be made to the Income-tax Officer on behalf of any firm constituted under an instrument of partnership specifying the individual shares of the partners, for registration for the purposes of this Act and of any other enactment for the time being in force relating to income-tax or super-tax.

(2) The application shall be made by such person or persons, and at such times and shall contain such particulars and shall be in such form, and be verified in such manner, as may be prescribed ; and it shall be dealt with by the Income-tax Officer in such manner as may be prescribed.

27. CANCELLATION OF ASSESSMENT WHEN CAUSE IS SHOWN.—Where an assessee within one month from the service of a notice of demand issued as hereinafter provided, satisfies the Income-tax Officer that he was prevented by sufficient cause from making the return required by Section 22, or that he did not receive the notice issued under sub-section (4) of Section 22, or sub-section (2) of Section 23, or that he had not a reasonable opportunity to comply, or was prevented by sufficient cause from complying, with the terms of the last mentioned notices, the Income-tax Officer shall cancel the assessment and proceed to make a fresh assessment in accordance with the provisions of Section 23.

28. PENALTY FOR CONCEALMENT OF INCOME OR IMPROPER DISTRIBUTION OF PROFITS.—(1) If the Income-tax Officer, the Appellate Assistant Commissioner or the Appellate Tribunal, in the course of any proceedings under this Act, is satisfied that any person—

(a) has without reasonable cause failed to furnish the return of his total income which he was required to furnish by notice given under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of Section 22 or Section 34 or has without reasonable cause failed to furnish it within the time allowed and in the manner, required by such notice, or

(b) has without reasonable cause failed to comply with a notice under sub-section (4) of Section 22 or sub-section (2) of Section 23, or

- (c) has concealed the particulars of his income or deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars of such income, he or it may direct that such person shall pay by way of penalty, in the case referred to in clause (a), in addition to the amount of the income-tax and super-tax, if any, payable by him a sum not exceeding one and a half times that amount, and in the cases referred to in clause (b) and (c), in addition to any tax payable by him, a sum not exceeding one and a half times the amount of the income-tax and super-tax, if any, which would have been avoided if the income as returned by such person had been accepted as the correct income:

Provided that—

- (a) no penalty for failure to furnish the return of his total income shall be imposed on an assessee whose total income is less than three thousand five hundred rupees unless he has been served with a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22;
- (b) where a person has failed to comply with a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22 or Section 34 and proves that he has no income liable to tax, the penalty imposed under this sub-section shall be a penalty not exceeding twenty-five rupees;
- (c) no penalty shall be imposed under this sub-section upon any person assessable under Section 42 as the agent of a person not resident in the taxable territories for failure to furnish the return required under Section 22 unless a notice under sub-section (2) of that section or under Section 34 has been served on him;
- (d) when the person liable to penalty is a registered firm, or an unregistered firm treated under Section 23(5)(b) as a registered firm, so that the amount of the income-tax and super-tax payable by the firm itself has not been determined, that amount shall be taken to be an amount equal to the tax which would have been payable by an unregistered firm on an income equal to the firm's total income, and, in the cases referred to in clauses (b) and (c) the amount of the income-tax and super-tax which would have been avoided if the income as returned had been accepted as the correct income, shall be taken to be the difference between the amount of the tax which would have been payable by an unregistered firm on an income equal to the firm's total income and the amount of the tax payable by an unregistered firm on an income equal to the income of the firm as actually returned by the firm.

(2) If the Income-tax Officer, the Appellate Assistant Commissioner or the Appellate Tribunal, in the course of any proceedings under this Act, is satisfied that the profits of a registered firm have been distributed otherwise than in accordance with the shares of the partners as shown in the instrument of partnership registered under this Act governing such distribution, and that any partner has thereby returned his income below, its real amount, he or it may direct that such partner shall, in addition to the income-tax and super-tax, if any, payable by him pay by way of penalty a sum not exceeding one and a half times the amount of income-tax which has been avoided, or would have been avoided if the income returned by such partner had been accepted as his correct income; and no refund or other adjustment shall be claimable by any other partner by reason of such direction.

Special Provisions Relating to Avoidance of Liability to Income-Tax and Super-Tax.

44D. AVOIDANCE OF INCOME-TAX BY TRANSACTIONS RESULTING IN THE TRANSFER OF INCOME TO PERSONS RESIDENT OR ORDINARILY RESIDENT ABROAD.—(1) Where any person has, by means of a transfer of assets, by virtue or in consequence whereof, either alone or in conjunction with associated operations, any income which if it were the income of such person would be chargeable to income-tax becomes payable to a person not resident or to a person resident but not ordinarily resident in the taxable territories, acquired any rights by virtue or in consequence of which he has within the meaning of this section power to enjoy such income, whether forthwith or in the future, that income shall, whether it would or would not have been chargeable to income-tax apart from the provisions of this section, be deemed to be income of such first-mentioned person for all the purposes of this Act.

(2) Where any person receives or is entitled to receive, whether before or after any transfer of assets by virtue or in consequence whereof either alone or in conjunction with associated operations any income becomes payable to a person not resident or resident but not ordinarily resident in the taxable territories, any sum paid or payable by way of a loan or repayment of a loan or any other sum, being a sum which is not paid or payable for full consideration in money or money's worth, paid or payable otherwise than as income, such income shall, whether it would or would not have been chargeable to income-tax apart from the provisions of this section, be deemed to be the income of the first-mentioned person for all the purposes of this Act.

(3) Sub-sections (1) and (2) shall not apply if such first-mentioned person shows to the satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer either—

- (a) that neither the transfer nor any associated operation had for its purpose or for one of its purposes the avoidance of liability to taxation; or
- (b) that the transfer and all associated operations were bona fide commercial transactions and were not designed for the purpose of avoiding liability to taxation.

(4) For the purposes of this section, an "associated operation" means, in relation to any transfer, an operation of any kind effected by any person in relation to any of the assets transferred or any assets representing whether directly or indirectly any of the assets transferred, or to the income arising from any such assets, or to any assets representing whether directly or indirectly the accumulations of income arising from any such assets.

(5) A person shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to have power to enjoy income of a person not resident, or resident but not ordinarily resident, in the taxable territories, if—

- (a) the income is in fact so dealt with by any person as to be calculated at some point of time and, whether in the form of income or not, to ensure for the benefit of the first-mentioned person, or
- (b) the receipt or accrual of the income operates to increase the value to such first-mentioned person of any assets held by him or for his benefit, or
- (c) such first-mentioned person receives or is entitled to receive at any time any benefit provided or to be provided out of that income or out of moneys which are or will be available for the purposes by reason of the effect or successive effects of the associated operations on that income and on any assets which represent that income, or
- (d) such first-mentioned person has power by means of the exercise of any power of appointment or power of revocation or otherwise to obtain for himself, whether with or without the consent of any other person, the beneficial enjoyment of the income, or
- (e) such first-mentioned person is able, in any manner whatsoever and whether directly or indirectly, to control the application of the income.

(6) In determining whether a person has power to enjoy income within the meaning of this section, regard shall be had to the substantial result and effect of the transfer and any associated operations, and all benefits which may at any time accrue to such person as a result of the transfer and any associated operations shall be taken into account irrespective of the nature or form of the benefits.

(7) For the purposes of this section—

- (a) the expression “assets” includes property or rights of any kind, and the expression “transfer” in relation to rights includes the creation of those rights;
- (b) the expression “benefit” includes a payment of any kind;
- (c) references to income of a person not resident or of a person not ordinarily resident in the taxable territories shall, where the amount of the income of a company for any year or period has been deemed to have been distributed under sub-section (1) of Section 23A, include references to so much of income of the company for that year or period as is equal to the amount deemed to have been distributed to that person;
- (d) references to assets representing any assets, income or accumulations of income include references to shares in or obligation of any company to which, or obligation of any other person to whom those assets, that income or those accumulations are or have been transferred;

- (e) any body corporate incorporated outside the taxable territories shall be treated as if it were resident out of the taxable territories whether it is so resident or not.

(8) The provisions of this section shall apply for the purposes of assessment to income-tax and super-tax for the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1940, and subsequent years, and shall apply, in relation to transfers of assets and associated operations whether carried out before or after the commencement of the Indian Income-tax (Amendment) Act, 1939 (VII of 1939).

(9) Where any person has been charged to tax any income deemed to be his under the provisions of this section, and that income is subsequently received by him, whether as income or in any other form, it shall not again be deemed to form part of his income for the purposes of this Act.

44E. AVOIDANCE OF TAX BY CERTAIN TRANSACTIONS IN SECURITIES.—(1) Where the owner of any securities (in this sub-section and in sub-section (2) referred to as "the owner") agrees to sell or transfer those securities and by the same or any collateral agreement—

- (a) agrees to buy back or re-acquire the securities, or
- (b) acquires an option, which he subsequently exercises, to buy back or re-acquire the securities,

then, if the result of the transaction is that any interest becoming payable in respect of the securities is receivable otherwise than by the owner, the interest payable as aforesaid shall, whether it would or would not have been chargeable to tax apart from the provisions of this section, be deemed for all the purposes of this Act to be the income of the owner and not to be the income of any other person.

(2) The references in sub-section (1) to buying back or re-acquiring the securities shall be deemed to include references to buying or acquiring similar securities, so, however, that where similar securities are bought or acquired, the owner shall be under no greater liability to tax than he would have been under if the original securities had been bought back or re-acquired.

(3) Where any person carrying on a business which consists wholly or partly in dealing in securities agrees to buy or acquire any securities, and by the same or any collateral agreement—

- (a) agrees to sell back or re-transfer the securities, or
- (b) acquires an option, which he subsequently exercises, to sell back or re-transfer the securities,

then, if the result of the transaction is that any interest becoming payable in respect of the securities is receivable by him, no account shall be taken of the transaction in computing for any of the purposes of this Act the profits arising from or loss sustained in the business.

(4) Sub-section (3) shall effect, subject to any necessary modifications, as if references to selling back or re-transferring the securities included references to selling or transferring similar securities.

(5) For the purpose of this section—

- (a) the expression "interest" includes a dividend;
- (b) the expression "securities" includes stock and shares;

- (c) securities shall be deemed to be similar if they entitle their holders to the same rights against the same persons as to capital and interest and the same remedies for the enforcement of those amounts of the respective securities or in the form in which they are held or the manner in which they can be transferred.

(6) The Income-tax Officer may by notice in writing require any person to furnish him within such time as he may direct (not being less than twenty-eight days), in respect of all securities of which such person was the owner at any time during the period specified in the notice, such particulars as he considers necessary for the purposes of this section and for the purpose of discovering whether tax has been borne in respect of the interest on all those securities; and, if that person without reasonable excuse fails to comply with the notice, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees and to a further penalty of the like amount for every day after the infliction of such penalty during which the failure continues.

44F. AVOIDANCE OF TAX BY SALES CUM DIVIDED.—(1) Any person upon whom notice is served by the Income-tax Officer requiring him to furnish a statement of particulars relating to any securities in which, at any time during the period specified in the notice he has had any beneficial interest, and in respect of which, within such period, either no income was received by him, or the income received by him, was less than the sum to which the income would have amounted if the income from such securities accrued from day to day and been apportioned accordingly, shall, whether an assessment to income-tax or super-tax in respect of his total income has or has not been made for the relevant year or years of assessment, furnish such a statement and such particulars in the form and within the time (not being less than twenty-eight days) required by the notice.

(2) If it appears to the Income-tax Officer by reference to all the circumstances in relation to the securities of any such person (including circumstances with respect to sales, purchases, dealings, contracts, arrangements, transfers, or any other transactions relating to such securities) that such person has thereby avoided or would avoid more than ten per cent. of the amount of the income-tax or super-tax for any year, which would have been payable in his case in respect of the income from those securities if the income had been deemed to accrue from day to day and had been apportioned accordingly, and the income so deemed to have been apportioned to him had been treated as part of his total income from all sources for the purposes of income-tax or super-tax, then those securities shall be deemed to be securities to which sub-section (3) applies.

(3) For the purposes of assessment to income-tax or super-tax in the case of any such person, the income from any securities to which this sub-section applies shall be deemed to accrue from day to day, and in the case of the sale or transfer of any such securities by or to him shall be deemed to have been received as and when it is deemed to have accrued:

Provided that this section shall not apply if such person proves to the satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer that the avoidance of income-tax or super-tax was exceptional and not systematic and that there was not in his case in any of the three preceding years any such avoidance of income-tax or super-tax or that the provisions of Section 44E have been applied in his case in respect of such income.

(4) If any person fails to furnish any statement or particulars required under this section, or if the Income-tax Officer is not satisfied with any statement or particulars furnished under this section, the Income-tax Officer may make an estimate of the amount of the income which, under the foregoing provisions of this section, is to be deemed to form part of the person's total income for the purpose of income-tax or super-tax.

(5) If any person without reasonable excuse fails to furnish any statement or particulars required under this section, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and to a further penalty of the like amount for every day after the infliction of such penalty during which the failure continues.

(6) For the purpose of this section the expression "securities" includes stocks and shares.

CHAPTER VI.

Recovery of Tax and Penalties.

45. TAX WHEN PAYABLE.—Any amount specified as payable in a notice of demand under sub-section (3) of Section 23A or under Section 29 or an order under Section 31 or Section 33, shall be paid within the time, at the place and to the person mentioned in the notice or order, or if a time is not so mentioned, then on or before the first day of the second month following the date of the service of the notice or order, and any assessee failing so to pay shall be deemed to be in default, provided that, when an assessee has presented an appeal under Section 30, the Income-tax Officer may in his discretion treat the assessee as not being in default as long as such appeal is undisposed of:

Provided further that where an assessee has been assessed in respect of income arising outside the taxable territories in a country the laws of which prohibit or restrict the remittance of money to the taxable territories, the Income-tax Officer shall not treat the assessee as in default in respect of that part of the tax which is due in respect of that amount of his income which by reason of such prohibition or restriction cannot be brought into the taxable territories, and shall continue to treat the assessee as not in default in respect of such part of the tax until the prohibition or restriction is removed.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section income shall be deemed to have been brought into the taxable territories if it has been utilized or could have been utilized for the purposes of any expenditure actually incurred by the assessee without the taxable territories or if the income whether capitalized or not has been brought into the taxable territories in any form.

46. MODE AND TIME OF RECOVERY.—(1) When an assessee is in default in making a payment of income-tax, the Income-tax Officer may in his discretion direct that, in addition to the amount of the arrears, a sum not exceeding that amount shall be recovered from the assessee by way of penalty.

(1A) For the purposes of sub-section (1), the Income-tax Officer may direct the recovery of any sum less than the amount of the arrears and may enhance the sum so directed to be recovered from time to time in the case of a continuing default, so however that the total sum so directed to be recovered shall not exceed the amount of the arrears payable.

(2) The Income-tax Officer may forward to the Collector a certificate under his signature specifying the amount of arrears due from an assessee, and the Collector, on receipt of such certificate, shall proceed to recover from such assessee the amount specified therein as if it were an arrear of land revenue:

Provided that without prejudice to any other powers of the Collector in this behalf, he shall for the purpose of recovering the said amount have the powers which under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (V of 1908) a Civil Court has for the purpose of the recovery of an amount due under a decree.

(3) In any area with respect to which the Commissioner has directed that any arrears may be recovered by any process enforceable for the recovery of an arrear of any municipal tax or local rate imposed under any enactment for the time being in force in any part of the State the Income-tax Officer may proceed to recover the amount due by such process.

(4) The Commissioner may direct by what authority any powers or duties incident under any such enactment as aforesaid to the enforcement of any process for the recovery of a municipal tax or local rate shall be exercised or performed when that process is employed under sub-section (3).

(5) If any assessee is in receipt of any income chargeable under the head "Salaries" the Income-tax Officer may require any person paying the same to deduct from any payment subsequent to the date of such requisition any arrears due from such assessee, and such person shall comply with any such requisition, and shall pay the sum so deducted to the credit of the Central Government, or as the Central Board of Revenue directs.

(5A) The Income-tax Officer may at any time or from time to time, by notice in writing (a copy of which shall be forwarded to the assessee at his last address known to the Income-tax Officer) require any person from whom money is due or may become due to the assessee or any person who holds or may subsequently hold money for or on account of the assessee to pay to the Income-tax Officer, either forthwith upon the money becoming due or being held or at or within the time specified in the notice (not being before the money becomes due or is held) so much of the money as is sufficient to pay the amount due by the taxpayer in respect of arrears of income-tax and penalty or the whole of the money when it is equal to or less than that amount.

The Income-tax Officer may at any time or from time to time amend or revoke any such notice or extend the time for making any payment in pursuance of the notice.

Any person making any payment in compliance with a notice under this sub-section shall be deemed to have made the payment under the authority of the assessee and the receipt of the Income-tax Officer shall constitute a good and sufficient discharge of the liability of such person to the assessee to the extent of the amount referred to in the receipt.

Any person discharging any liability to the assessee after receipt of the notice referred to in this sub-section shall be personally liable to the Income-tax Officer to the extent of the liability discharged or to the extent of the liability of the assessee for tax and penalties whichever is less.

* If the person to whom a notice under this sub-section is sent fails to make payment in pursuance thereof to the Income-tax Officer, further proceedings may be taken by and before the Collector on the footing that the Income-tax Officer's notice has the same effect as an attachment by the Collector in exercise of his powers under the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 46.

Where a person to whom a notice under this sub-section is sent objects to it on the ground that the sum demanded or any part thereof is not due to the assessee or that he does not hold any money for or on account of the assessee, then, nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to require such person to pay any such sum or part thereof, as the case may be, to the Income-tax Officer.

(6) If the recovery of income-tax in any area has been entrusted to a State Government under article 258(1) of the Constitution the State Government may direct with respect to that area or any part thereof, that income-tax shall be recovered therein with, and as an addition to, any municipal tax or local rate, by the same person and in the same manner as the municipal tax or local rate is recovered.

(7) Save in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (1) of Section 42, or of the proviso to Section 45, no proceedings for the recovery of any sum payable under this Act shall be commenced after the expiration of one year from the last day of the financial year in which any demand is made under this Act:

Provided that where the sum payable is allowed to be paid by instalments the period of one year herein referred to shall be reckoned from the date on which the last of such instalments was due.

(8) For the purposes of this section, the expression "Collector" shall include a Collector in Pakistan and the Income-tax Officer may forward a certificate under sub-section (2) to a Collector in Pakistan through the Central Board of Revenue of Pakistan, if the assessee has property in the district of that Collector.

(9) Where a Collector in the taxable territories receives through the Central Board of Revenue of India a certificate under the signature of an Income-tax Officer in Pakistan, the Collector shall proceed to recover the amount specified therein in the manner in which he would proceed to recover the amount specified in a certificate received from an Income-tax Officer in the taxable territories, and shall remit any sum so recovered by him to the Income-tax Officer in Pakistan, after deducting his expenses in connection with the recovery proceedings.

(10) The provisions of sub-sections (8) and (9) shall remain in force only so long as there are in force similar provisions in this Act as in force as part of the law of Pakistan or under any other similar Act forming part of the law of Pakistan, for the recovery of tax by a Collector in Pakistan on receipt of a certificate from an Income-tax Officer in the taxable territories.

47. RECOVERY OF PENALTIES.—Any sum imposed by way of penalty under the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 25, Section 28, sub-section (6) of Section 44E, sub-section (5) of Section 44F or sub-section (1) of Section 46 and any interest payable under the provisions of sub-sections (4), (6), (7) or (8) of Section 18A, shall be recoverable in the manner provided in this Chapter for the recovery of arrear of tax.
